XII.—NATIONAL DEBT AND TAXATION PER HEAD OF POPULATION IN CERTAIN COUNTRIES.

The following tables show the National debt and the amount per capita of the population for the United Kingdom, France, Germany, and the United States; and also the taxation per head of the population (1926 or 1926-27):—

Countries	Currency	Debt
		Amount	Per Head	= £ Sterling
United Kingdom <sup>1</sup>	£	7,622,900,000	168·5	= £168 10 0
France <sup>2</sup>	Paper francs	Internal 293,647,000,000	7,207·1

<sup>3</sup> The figures for Germany represent the amount of the public debt of the German Reich, but do not include either the debt of Germany for reparations or the debts of the separate German States.

XIII.—THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Secretary-General.—Sir James Eric Drummond, K.C.M.G., C.B.

The League of Nations is an association of States which have pledged themselves, through signing the Covenant (i.e., the constitution of the League) [For the text of the Covenant, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1921, page xxviii], not to go to war before submitting their disputes with each other or States not members of the League to arbitration or enquiry and a delay of from three to nine months. Furthermore, any State violating this pledge is automatically in a state of outlawry with the other States, which are bound to sever all economic and political relations with the defaulting member. The States Members of the League have pledged themselves to co-operate over a wide range of economic, social, humanitarian and labour questions.

The League of Nations formally came into existence on January 10, 1920, through the coming into force at that date of the Treaty of Versailles. The two official languages of the League are English and French. The seat of the League is Geneva, Switzerland.

<sup>2</sup> Brazil on June 12, 1926, and Spain on September 8, 1926, announced their withdrawal from the League; according to Art. 1, par. 3, of the Covenant, the notice of withdrawal only comes into force two years after it has been given. On March 22, 1928, Spain resolved to continue a member of the League.

The delegation of the Argentine Republic did not attend the second Assembly and withdrew from the first Assembly upon the latter's decision to refer the amendment to Article 1 of the Covenant proposed by the Argentine, for study by a committee that was to report to the second Assembly. The Argentine Government has not given notice of an intention to leave the League, and appears to regard itself as in a state of suspended or passive membership, to continue until some measure regarded as a satisfactory equivalent to the amendment proposed by the Argentine has been adopted by the League.

The following 9 States are not members of the League:—United States, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Turkey, Egypt, Ecuador, Mexico, Afghanistan, Costa Rica, and the Hejaz and other Arab States. Costa Rica became a member of the League on December 16, 1920, but on December 24, 1924, she gave notice of her intention to withdraw, on the ground of the expense involved. The notice became effective on December 24, 1926.

II. THE ORGANS OF THE LEAGUE.

The primary organs of the League are :—

1. The Council.
2. The Assembly.
3. The Secretariat.
4. The International Labour Organisation.
5. The Permanent Court of International Justice (at the Hague).

1. THE COUNCIL.

The Council was originally composed of four permanent Members (the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan) and four non-permanent Members to be elected every year by a majority of the Assembly. The first non-permanent Members, appointed by the Peace Conference and named in the Covenant before the first Assembly met, were Belgium, Brazil, Greece, and Spain. With the approval of the majority of the Assembly, the Council may appoint new permanent and non-permanent Members. At the Assembly of September 1926, Germany was admitted to the League and given a permanent seat on the Council. At the same time the number of non-permanent seats, already increased to six in 1922, was further increased to nine. The non-permanent Members, as elected at the same Assembly, are: Belgium, Chile, China, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, Holland, Poland, Rumania, and Salvador. In 1928 Belgium, Czechoslovakia, and Salvador came, off the Council (Belgium stood for re-election but failed to get the necessary declaration of re-eligibility by a two-thirds majority). Canada, Cuba, and Finland were re-elected to the Council in their places. Any Member of the League not represented on the Council shall be invited to send a representative to sit on it at any meetings at which matters especially affecting it are being discussed. A similar invitation may be extended to States not Members of the League.

As a result of the decision taken by the VII. Assembly, and in order to institute a new system of rotation, non-permanent Members of the Council were elected for one, two or three years, as follows :—

Elected for one year: Belgium, Salvador, and Czechoslovakia;

Elected for two years: China, Colombia, and Holland;

Elected for three years: Chile, Poland, and Rumania.

Poland was accorded the privilege of re-eligibility on the expiration of her three-year period.

The Council is at present (March 1928) composed of the following representatives :

PERMANENT MEMBERS.

British Empire—The Right Hon. Sir Austen Chamberlain, K.G., Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

France—M. Aristide Briand, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Germany—Dr. G. Stresemann, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Italy—Senator Vittorio Scialoja, Minister of State.

Japan—Viscount Ishii, Ambassador in Paris.

NON-PERMANENT MEMBERS.

Canada—The Hon. Senator Dandurand.

Chile—Señor Enrique Villegas, Ambassador in Rome.

China—M. Chao-Hsin Chu, Minister in Rome.

Colombia—Señor F. J. Urrutia, Minister in Berne.

Cuba—Senor Agüero y Belhancourt, Minister in Berlin.

Finland—M. H. Procopé, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Holland—Jonkheer van Karnebeek.

Poland—M. Zaleski, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Rumania—M. N. Titulesco, Minister in London.

2. THE ASSEMBLY.

Every State Member of the League is entitled to be represented by a delegation to the Assembly composed of not more than three delegates and three substitute delegates, but it has only one vote. It meets at the seat of the League (Geneva) on the first Monday in September. It may meet at other places than Geneva, but hitherto it has never done so; extraordinary sessions may be called to deal with urgent matters.

The President is elected at the first meeting of the session, and holds office for the duration of the session.

The Assembly divides itself into the following six principal committees, on each of which every State Member of the League has the right to be represented by one delegate :

I. Juridical.

II. Technical Organisations.

III. Disarmament.

IV. League Finance.

V. Social Questions.

VI. Political Questions and admission of new Members.

The decisions of the Assembly must be voted unanimously, except where the Covenant or the Peace Treaties provide otherwise. As a general principle decisions on questions of procedure are voted by majority, or in some cases by a two-thirds majority.

3. THE SECRETARIAT.

The Secretariat is a permanent organ composed of the Secretary-General and a number of officials selected from among citizens of all Member States and from the United States of America. The Secretary-General, appointed by the Peace Conference (see Annex to the Covenant), is the Hon. Sir James Eric Drummond, K.C.M.G., C.B., British Foreign Office Official; hereafter the Secretary-General will be appointed by the Council with the approval of the majority of the Assembly. The other officials are appointed by the Secretary-General with the approval of the Council.

The Under-Secretaries-General are :—

M. J. Avenol, French Inspector-General of Finance (Assistant Secretary-General);
Marchese Paulucci di Calboli Barone, Italian Minister Plenipotentiary;
Herr A. Dufour-Féronce, German Councillor of Embassy;
M. Yotaro Sugimura, Japanese Minister Plenipotentiary.

4. THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION. [See below.]

5. PERMANENT COURT OF INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE.

The Court is composed of 11 judges and 4 deputy judges elected jointly by the Council and the Assembly of the League for a term of 9 years.

The Secondary Organs of the League are :—

(a) The Technical Organisations.

1. Economic and Financial.

2. Health.

3. Transit.

4. Labour (International Labour Organisation). [See below.]

(b) Advisory Commissions.

V. MANDATES.

The African and Pacific possessions of Germany and certain territories of the Ottoman Empire were ceded by these countries at the end of the war to the Allied and Associated Powers. The latter had inserted an article (Art. 22) in the Covenant of the League according to which the inhabitants of these territories should be put under the tutelage of "advanced nations who by reason of their resources, their experience, or their geographical position, can best undertake this responsibility." These nations should act as mandatories of the League, and exercise their powers on behalf of the League. They should act on the principle that the well-being and development of the peoples under their tutelage formed a "sacred trust of civilisation," and should render the Council an annual report on the territory committed to their charge.

Article 22 furthermore divides the mandated territories into three classes, according to the degree of civilisation of their inhabitants, economic and geographic circumstances, and so forth. Class A is composed of the communities detached from the Ottoman Empire, declared to have "reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognised subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a Mandatory until such time as they are able to stand alone."

Class B, consisting of the former German colonies in Central and East Africa, should be administered by the Mandatory under conditions which will "guarantee freedom of conscience or religion, subject only to the maintenance of public order and morals, the prohibition of abuses such as the slave trade, the arms traffic and the liquor traffic, and the prevention of the establishment of fortifications or military or naval bases and of military training of the natives for other than police purposes and the defence of territory, and will also secure equal opportunities for the trade and commerce of other members of the League."

Class C (German South-West Africa and Pacific Islands possessions) is composed of territories which, owing to sparseness of population, small size, remoteness from centres of civilisation, or geographical contiguity to the territory of the Mandatory Power, "can best be administered under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its territory, subject to the safeguards above mentioned in the interests of the indigenous population."

The Supreme Council, as the organ of the Allied and Associated Powers, allocated the mandates for the territories ceded by Germany and Turkey, subject to the approval of the Council of the League. The mandates and mandatory powers, as determined by the Supreme Council, are:—

A Mandates.—Mesopotamia (now the Kingdom of Iraq) and Palestine, attributed to Great Britain. Syria (including Lebanon), attributed to France.

B Mandates.—Togoland and Cameroon, attributed in part to Great Britain and in part to France.

The North-Western portion of former German East Africa, attributed to Belgium.

The remainder of former German East Africa (now Tanganyika Colony), attributed to Great Britain.

C Mandates.—Former German South Pacific possessions (except Nauru and Samoa), attributed to Australia.

Samoa, attributed to New Zealand, and Nauru, attributed to the British Empire and administered by Australia, New Zealand, and Great Britain.

Former German North Pacific possessions (Yap, etc.), attributed to Japan.

Former German South-West Africa, attributed to the Union of South Africa.

VI. INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION.

The number of States Members of the International Labour Organisation is now 56. The Organisation has held ten Conferences, in 1919 at Washington, in 1920 at Genoa, and subsequently in Geneva. At these Conferences the following Draft Conventions and Recommendations have been adopted:—

By the terms of Part XIII of the Treaty of Versailles (Art. 405) the Members of the Organisation undertake, within one year at most, or in exceptional circumstances within eighteen months, from the closing of the Conference, to bring the Recommendations or Draft Conventions adopted before the authorities "within whose competence the matter lies, for the enactment of legislation or other action." On a Recommendation the Members have to inform the Secretary-General of the League of the action taken. If a Draft Convention is approved by the competent authorities, the Members undertake to deposit their formal ratification thereof with the Secretary-General and to take the necessary action to apply its provisions.

The total results obtained up to the end of January 1928 in the ratification of the Conventions may be summarised as follows:—

Ratifications deposited with the Secretary-General of the League of Nations.....254
(excluding 14 ratifications of the Berne Convention prohibiting the use of white phosphorus in the manufacture of matches, which formed the subject of a Recommendation in 1919).

Ratifications authorised by the competent authorities.....32
Ratifications recommended to the competent authorities .....168

The Governing Body, under the control of which the International Labour Office works, is composed of twelve Government representatives, six employers' representatives, and six workers representatives.

XIV.—THE INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF AGRICULTURE.

THE International Institute of Agriculture, which has its headquarters in the Villa Borghese at Rome, is, according to the terms of its original constituent convention, dated June 7, 1905, a State institution in which each adhering State is represented by a delegate of its own choice. The Convention was the result of a conference attended by the representatives of 40 governments assembled in Rome on the invitation of the Italian Government, prompted by King Victor Emmanuel III. himself. The King had been deeply impressed by the views put before him by an American citizen, the late David Lubin, who was strongly of opinion that the practical helplessness of the farming class regarding the protection of their proper interests could find a remedy in the establishment of an International authority. This authority would make a study of agricultural conditions and publish information on all aspects of agriculture such as would be of general service to the farming community. Hence according to Clause 9 of the Convention the essential objects of the Institute are to give information and advice on agricultural questions in general. To this end it collects and diffuses statistical, technical and economic information derived from all countries, and also submits proposals to the Governments "for the protection of the common interests of farmers and for the improvement of their conditions."

Membership and Constitution.—The original number of 40 adhering States and dependencies has now increased to 78. Each adhering country makes a contribution to the finances of the Institute according to a scheme of group assessment by which also the voting power is defined. The Governmental contributions provide the chief source of revenue of the Institute, though it has also other receipts in the form of an annual contribution by the King of Italy, income from the sales of publications, special contributions for particular branches of work, etc. In the following list of adhering countries the original signatories of

The governing body proper is the General Assembly of national delegates, unlimited in number, meeting as a rule every two years to receive the reports of its executive, the Permanent Committee, to lay down the main lines of the programme of work and to vote the sums to be expended until the date of the next session. On the Permanent Committee each State is represented by a single delegate only and elects from among its members a President and a Vice-President. The President of the Permanent Committee is the President of the Institute, and he, or in his absence the Vice-President, is its official legal representative.

Work and General Activities.—The duty of publishing information imposed by the convention is mainly carried out by the different Bureaux which prepare the periodical publications, including a general monthly Review and a monthly bulletin of statistical information and also two Year-books, the International Year-book of Agricultural Statistics and the International Year-book of Agricultural Legislation. From time to time monographs, the result of special studies and inquiries, are also issued.

In the field of documentation the Institute is well served by its Library, which possesses some 100,000 volumes and pamphlets, and almost as many unbound sets of periodicals from all parts of the world, while some 3,500 periodicals are regularly received. The Library is also largely used for purposes of study and research by professional and other students of the problems of agriculture.

Although the main strength of the earlier work of the Institute lay more particularly in its information services, its advisory responsibilities were by no means neglected. It has already contributed largely to the improvement and standardisation of the statistical methods adopted by the Governments. In this direction further steps are now being taken in connection with the World Agricultural Census, initiated and organised by the Institute and arranged to take place in 1930-31. In order to facilitate the work of preparation for this Census, each country is being visited in turn by the Director of the scheme, and a large part of the field has already been covered. There is every probability that this far-reaching scheme will prove entirely successful, and it may be added that it was approved by the Imperial Agricultural Research Conference, which met in London in October 1927.

The organisation of International Conferences and Congresses has always been a feature in the work of the Institute, and these have frequently resulted in international agreements or the formulation of definite policies. Among the most recent and important of such meetings may be mentioned the International Congresses of Soil Science (May 1924) and World Forestry (May 1926), as also the International Conference of Wheat Experts (April 1927).

Relations with International and other Institutions.—Official relations with the League of Nations were initiated at the time of the discussions on the co-ordination of International Statistics, which took place in London and Paris in 1919 and 1920 respectively, and the Institute through expert members of its staff took part in the Genoa Conference in 1922.

The Institute also took an important share in the work of preparation for the World Economic Conference held at Geneva in May 1927, and was represented at the Conference itself by its President, H. E. de Michelis. In 1922 a joint Advisory Committee was established, consisting of three representatives of the Governing Body of the International Labour Office and three representatives of the Permanent Committee of the International Institute of Agriculture, with power to call in the aid of experts. Three meetings of this Advisory Committee have already taken place, at Geneva in 1923, at Rome in 1925 and again at Geneva in 1927, and subjects on which reports have already been made include inter alia the vocational education of agricultural workers, co-operation in agriculture, the marketing of agricultural produce and the prevention of anthrax.

The resolution of the General Assembly of 1924 which called on the Permanent Committee to enter into continuous relations with the Agricultural Associations in all countries, and with the chief international and other organisations interested in agricultural questions, may be regarded as the starting-point for a larger development of the Institute's rôle in the general direction of international opinion and action in agriculture. During the last few years effective machinery for giving effect to a broad policy along these lines has been set up through the establishment of two important consultative bodies, the International Scientific Council and the Permanent Commission of Agricultural Associations.

The first of these two bodies is made up of 27 Commissions of experts from all parts of the world, grouped according to their special competence in specific agricultural problems, while over 200 individual associations, representing a large number of States, are already enrolled in the second. Several of the scientific commissions are already actively at work, and the movement as a whole was effectively initiated when both Council and Commission met in their corporate capacities at the Institute in November 1927, and the occasion was found for holding two joint plenary sessions.

The King's legal title rests on the statute of 12 and 13 Will. III. c. 3, by which the succession to the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland was settled on the Princess Sophia of Hanover and the 'heirs of her body being Protestants.' By Act of Parliament, 1927, the title of the King is declared to be 'George V., by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.'

By proclamation of July 17, 1917, the Royal family became known as the House and Family of Windsor.

By Letters Patent of November 30, 1917, the titles of Royal Highness and Prince or Princess are (except for existing titles) to be restricted to the Sovereign's children, the children of the Sovereign's sons, and the eldest living son of the eldest son of the Prince of Wales.

The Regency Act, 1910 (10 Edw. VII. and 1 Geo. V., ch. 26) appointed Queen Mary to act as regent in the event of the demise of the King and his succession by any of his children under the age of 18 years.

Provision is made for the support of the Royal household by the settlement of the Civil List soon after the commencement of each reign (For historical details, see YEAR-BOOK for 1908, p. 5.) By Act of 10 Ed. VII. and 1 Geo. V. c. 28 (August 3, 1910), the Civil List of the King, after the usual surrender of hereditary revenues, is fixed at 470,000*l.*, of which 110,000*l.* is appropriated to the privy purse of the King and Queen, 125,800*l.* for salaries of the Royal household and retired allowances, 193,000*l.* for household expenses, 20,000*l.* for works, 13,200*l.* for alms and bounty, and 8,000*l.* remains unappropriated. The same Civil List Act of 1910 also provides for an annuity of 70,000*l.* to Queen Mary in the event of her surviving the King. Should the Prince of Wales marry, the Princess of Wales will receive an annuity of 10,000*l.*, and should she survive the Prince of Wales, this annuity will be raised to one of 30,000*l.* Further, there is to be paid to trustees for the benefit of the King's children (other than the Duke of Cornwall) an annual sum of 10,000*l.* in respect of each son (other than the Duke of Cornwall) who attains the age of 21 years, and a further annual sum of 15,000*l.* in respect of each such son who marries, and an annuity of 6,000*l.* in respect of each daughter who attains the age of 21 or marries. The First Commissioner of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Keeper of the King's Privy Purse are appointed the Royal Trustees under this Act. The King has paid to him the revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster, the payments made therefrom in 1924 being 70,000*l.* for His Majesty's use.

On the Consolidated Fund are charged likewise the following sums allowed to members of the royal family.—25,000*l.* a year to the Duke of Connaught; 6,000*l.* to H.R.H. Helena Augusta Victoria (Princess Christian); 6,000*l.* to Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, 6,000*l.* to H.R.H. Beatrice Mary Victoria Feodore; and 6,000*l.* to each of the late King's daughters.

The Heir Apparent has an income from the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall, the payment in 1926 on his account being 66,713*l.*

GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND.

Constitution and Government.

I. IMPERIAL AND CENTRAL.

The supreme legislative power of the British Empire is vested in Parliament. Parliament is summoned by the writ of the sovereign issued out of Chancery, by advice of the Privy Council, at least twenty days previous to its assembling.

The annual session used to extend from the middle of February to about the middle of August, and only occasionally later, but since 1914 the sittings of Parliament have been interrupted only by comparatively short intervals. Every session must end with a prorogation, and all Bills which have not been passed during the session then lapse. A dissolution may occur by the will of the sovereign, or, as is most usual, during the recess, by proclamation, or finally by lapse of time, the statutory limit of the duration of any Parliament being five years.

Under the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 and 2 Geo. V, ch. 13), all Money Bills (so certified by the Speaker of the House of Commons), if not passed by the House of Lords without amendment, may become law without their concurrence on the royal assent being signified. Public Bills, other than Money Bills or a Bill extending the maximum duration of Parliament, if passed by the House of Commons in three successive sessions, whether of the same Parliament or not, and rejected each time, or not passed, by the House of Lords, may become law without their concurrence on the royal assent being signified, provided that two years have elapsed between the second reading in the first session of the House of Commons and the third reading in the third session. All Bills coming under this Act must reach the House of Lords at least one month before the end of the session. Finally, the Parliament Act limited the maximum duration of Parliament to five years.

The present form of Parliament, as divided into two Houses of Legislature, the Lords and the Commons, dates from the middle of the fourteenth century.

The House of Lords consists of peers who hold their seats—(i) by hereditary right; (ii) by creation of the sovereign; (iii) by virtue of office—Law Lords, and English archbishops (2) and bishops (24); (iv) by election for life—Irish peers (28); (v) by election for duration of Parliament—Scottish peers (16). The full house would consist of about 740 members, but the voting strength is about 720.

The House of Commons consists of members representing County, Borough, and University constituencies. No one under 21 years of age can be a member of Parliament. Clergymen of the Church of England, ministers of the Church of Scotland, and Roman Catholic clergymen are disqualified from sitting as members; Government contractors, and sheriffs, and returning officers for the localities for which they act, are also among those disqualified. No English or Scottish peer can be elected to the House of Commons, but non-representative Irish peers are eligible. Under the Parliament (Qualification of Women) Act, 1918, women are also eligible, and the first woman member took her seat in December, 1919.

In August, 1911, by resolution of the House of Commons, provision was first made for the payment of a salary of 400*l.* per year to members, other than those already in receipt of salaries as officers of the House, as Ministers, or as officers of His Majesty's household. Payment began as from April 1, 1911. This provision does not extend to the House of Lords.

Under the Representation of the People Act, 1918, male electors must be of full age (twenty-one years), and have resided, or occupied business premises of an annual value of not less than ten pounds, in the same parliamentary borough or county, or one contiguous thereto, for six months ending on January 15 or July 15 (in Northern Ireland the latter date alone applies). A woman voter must be thirty years of age, and entitled to be registered as a local government elector (or, as regards Scotland, deemed to be so registered) in respect of the occupation of premises of a yearly value of not less than five pounds, or of a dwelling house; or she must be the wife of a husband entitled to be so registered: lodgers in unfurnished, but not furnished, rooms can vote, if otherwise qualified. There is also a University franchise, to be qualified for which a man must be twenty-one years of age, and a woman thirty years, and each must have taken a degree, or, in the case of a woman, have fulfilled the conditions which would entitle a man to a degree.

No person may vote at a general election for more than two constituencies, for one of which, in the case of a man, there must be a residence qualification, and, in the case of a woman, a local government qualification, her own or her husband's. The second vote must rest on a different qualification.

Disqualified for registration are (among others) infants, peers, idiots and lunatics, aliens, and bankrupts. Receipt of poor relief or other alms does not count as a disqualification.

Two registers of electors must be prepared each year, one in the spring, and the other in the autumn, except in Ireland, where only one is required; and the authorised expenses are met by local and State funds in equal parts. University registers may be made up as the governing bodies decide, and a registration fee not exceeding 1*l.* may be charged.

In university constituencies returning two or more members the elections must be according to the principle of proportional representation, each elector having one transferable vote. At a general election all polls must be held on the same day, except in the case of Orkney and Shetland, and of university elections. Provision is made for absent electors to vote, in certain cases by proxy.

Under the same Act the seats in Great Britain were redistributed on the basis of one member of the House of Commons for every 70,000 of the population. By a separate Act, redistribution in Ireland was made on the basis of one for every 43,000 of the population. The total membership of the House of Commons was thereby raised from 670 (as established in 1885, to 707. In 1922 the number was reduced to 615 (including 13 from Northern Ireland), owing to the establishment of separate parliaments in Ireland.

The number of persons qualified for registration as parliamentary electors under the Representation of the People Act, 1918, was in 1920 about 21,776,000 (nearly one-half of the population). Women numbered 8,856,000. The electorate in the autumn of 1924 numbered about 21,550,000.

The following is a table of the duration of Parliaments called since the accession of King Edward VII. (for heads of the Administrations see p. 8.)

The executive government is vested nominally in the Crown, but practically in a committee of Ministers, called the Cabinet, whose existence is dependent on the support of a majority in the House of Commons.

The Cabinet, prior to December, 1916, consisted of the political chiefs of the principal Government Departments, and exceeded twenty in number. With the formation of Mr. Lloyd George's Government at that date, the Cabinet was reduced to about six in number. This Cabinet became known as the 'War Cabinet,' and, as occasion required, was expanded into an 'Imperial War Cabinet' by the inclusion of the Prime Ministers, and other representative ministers, of the various parts of the Empire. The constitution of the 'Imperial War Cabinet' in 1917 may be taken as a formal recognition of the equality of status between the various responsible governments of the Empire.

The head of the Ministry is the Prime Minister, a position first constitutionally recognised, and special precedence accorded to the holder, in 1905. No salary is attached to the office of Prime Minister, as such, and it is usually held in conjunction with some other high office of State, generally that of First Lord of the Treasury. His colleagues in the Ministry are appointed on his recommendation, and he dispenses the greater portion of the patronage of the Crown.

The present Government (appointed November 1924) consists of the following members :

(a) THE CABINET.

1. Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury, and Leader of the House of Commons.—Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin, born 1867. President of Board of Trade, 1921–22; Chancellor of Exchequer, 1922–23; Prime Minister, 1923–24. Present appointment, November, 1924.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

England and Wales.—In each county the Crown is represented by H.M. Lieutenant. There is also a sheriff, who represents the executive of the Crown, an under-sheriff, a clerk of the peace and of the County Council, coroners, who are appointed and paid by the County Councils, and other officers. The licensing of persons to sell intoxicating liquors, and the administration of the criminal law—except that which deals with some of the graver offences—are in the hands of the magistrates.

For the purposes of local government England and Wales are divided primarily into sixty-two administrative counties, including the county of London, and eighty-three County Boroughs. The counties are administered by the justices and by a popularly-elected Council, called a County Council, who co-opt a prescribed number of aldermen, either from their own body or from outside it. Aldermen are elected for six years, half of them retiring every third year. A councillor is elected for three years. The jurisdiction of the County Councils covers the administration of higher and (outside certain Boroughs and Urban Districts) elementary education; maintenance of main roads and bridges; work in relation to agriculture (diseases of animals, destructive insects and pests, land drainage, fertilisers and feeding stuffs, small holdings and allotments); provision of mental hospitals and other public health work (schemes for treatment of tuberculosis and venereal diseases, for maternity and child welfare, and for the welfare of the blind; accommodation and care of mental defectives; prevention of pollution of rivers; and supervision of milk and other food supplies). The control of the county police is vested in a standing joint committee composed of equal numbers of magistrates and of members of the County Council. The Metropolitan police are, however, under the control of the Home Secretary.

Secondly, the administrative counties, with the exception of the County of London, are subdivided into 'County Districts' which are either 'Urban,' that is, Non-County Boroughs or Urban Districts, or 'Rural,' that is, Rural Districts. Generally speaking, an urban district comprises a town or a small area more or less densely populated, and a rural district takes in several country parishes. County District Councils administer the Public Health and Highway Acts, and exercise powers under the Housing Acts. Urban Authorities may also take over the maintenance and repair of main roads from County Councils; provide burial grounds, allotments, baths and washhouses, libraries, open spaces, museums, isolation hospitals, &c.; establish and manage trading services (gas, electricity, water, trams, &c.). Councils of Boroughs which had over 10,000, and of Urban Districts which had over 20,000 people in 1901 are also usually the local authorities for elementary education. Rural District Councils may also make arrangements for an adequate water supply; and exercise any 'urban powers' conferred on them by the Minister of Health.

A number of functions may be exercised in County Districts either by the Councils of the Districts or by the County Councils, according to the populations of the Districts concerned or other considerations.

In every civil parish in a Rural District there is a Parish Meeting, at which every parochial elector may attend and vote. In such parishes of over 300 inhabitants there is in addition a Parish Council. If authorised by the County Council, parishes of less than 300 inhabitants may have Parish Councils. Parish Councils may exercise certain powers and make certain representations as regards allotments, the stopping or diversion of public rights of way, housing, water supply or sewerage, and other questions of public health.

The main central authority in London is the County Council, created by the Local Government Act of 1888. It has considerable powers in regard to public health, housing, bridges and ferries, asylums, street improvements, parks, main drainage, fire brigade, sanitary control, education, and numerous other matters. It is also the tramway authority for the county. The City Corporation has powers respecting sanitation, police, bridges, justice, &c., in the City of London. London comprises the ancient city with an area of one square mile, and an area of 118 square miles beyond the city, which is divided into 28 metropolitan boroughs, under the London Government Act, 1899, each with a mayor, aldermen, and councillors (women are eligible). The Councils have powers in regard to public health, highways, rating, housing, education, &c., but they are not municipal boroughs in the statutory sense as in the rest of the Kingdom. The County Council has certain powers of control over them.

In all incorporated towns, local business is administered by a municipal Corporation. There are two kinds of municipal boroughs, County Boroughs and Non-County Boroughs. A number of the latter are small boroughs of special and generally ancient jurisdiction. Most of the County Boroughs and a number of the Non-County Boroughs have a separate Court of Quarter Sessions. The County Boroughs are outside the jurisdiction of the County Councils, but in other Municipal Boroughs (as elsewhere in County Districts) those Councils have certain powers and duties. A municipal Corporation consists of the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses, and acts through a Council elected by the burgesses—practically by the ratepayers. The councillors serve for three years (women are eligible), one-third retiring annually; the aldermen are elected by the Council, and the mayor, who serves for one year, also by the Council. A Town Council as an Urban Authority is invested with all the normal powers of an Urban District Council; and in addition certain powers, such as making byelaws or maintaining a separate police force, are conferred either upon all Town Councils or upon Councils of towns of certain sizes, or complying with other conditions, in virtue of their status as Councils of incorporated towns.

Scotland.—A Local Government Act was passed for Scotland in 1889 and followed in its main outlines the English Act of the previous year. The powers of local administration in counties formerly exercised by the Commissioners of Supply, the Justices and Road Trustees were either wholly or in part transferred to County Councils, which took over their duties and responsibilities in 1890. By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, a Local Government Board for Scotland was constituted, consisting of the Secretary for Scotland as President, the Solicitor-General for Scotland, the Under-Secretary for Scotland, and three other members nominated by the Crown. The latter Act provided that a Parish Council should be established in every parish to take the place of the Parochial Boards. Their principal function is the administration of the Poor Laws, and in addition they exercise powers similar to those of the Parish Councils in England. There were 869 civil parishes in 1921. The powers and duties of the Local Government Board were by the Scottish Board of Health Act, 1919, transferred to the Scottish Board of Health, constituted as in that Act provided. Municipal bodies exist in the towns of Scotland, as in those of England. The Provost corresponds to the Mayor in an English borough, and the Bailies exercise functions analogous to those of Justices in boroughs. There are no Aldermen, i.e. members appointed by elected members, on Scottish Town Councils. There are in Scotland three principal kinds of burghs, numbering altogether 201 (1921 census): (1) Royal Burghs, i.e. burghs created by a Charter of the Crown; (2) Parliamentary Burghs, which possess statutory constitutions almost identical with those of the Royal Burghs; (3) Police Burghs, constituted under a general Police Act. All burghs of whatever class have new Town Councils and their administration is regulated by the Burgh Police (Scotland) and Town Councils (Scotland) Acts or corresponding local Acts.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The population was thus distributed at the census, taken June 19, 1921 :—

Divisions	Area in sq. miles	Males	Females	Total Population on June 19, 1921

The municipal and parliamentary City of London, coinciding with the registration City of London, has an area of 675 acres. The registration County of London (the London for purposes of the Census, the registration of births, deaths, and marriages, and for poor law purposes), coinciding with the administrative county, has an area of 74,850 acres, and nearly coincides with the collective area of the London parliamentary boroughs. The population of registration London, of the 'Outer Ring,' and of 'Greater London,' (the area covered by the City and Metropolitan police), was :—

Proportion of male to female births in 1926 was 1,045 to 1,000

2. Emigration and Immigration.

In the thirty-eight years 1815-1852, the total number of emigrants from the United Kingdom was 3,463,592. Up to 1852 the emigration returns made no distinction between British subjects and foreigners. From 1853 to 1924 inclusive, the number of passengers of British origin, to places out of Europe, was 15,261,000; and the number of foreigners, to such places, was 6,324,000, total, 21,585,000. Figures of the passenger traffic to and from non-European countries in recent years<sup>1</sup> are given as follows :—

	Outward			Inward			Balance outward.
	British subjects	Aliens	Total	British subjects	Aliens	Total	Total

The number of British emigrants (excluding persons only temporarily absent) to places out of Europe was 166,601 in 1926, 153,505 in 1927, and the immigrants of British nationality into Great Britain was 51,063 in 1926, 55,715 in 1927.

The destinations of British subjects leaving the United Kingdom to take up permanent residence in non-European countries in 1927 were mainly the United States (25,662) (28,740 in 1926), British North America (52,916) (49,632 in 1926), Australia (40,991) (44,513 in 1926), New Zealand (7,841) (16,565 in 1926), British South Africa (7,572) (8,295 in 1926), India and Ceylon (6,476) (6,799 in 1926). The bulk of the aliens travelled to the United States, 71,677 in 1926, and 85,371 in 1927.

The passenger movement between the United Kingdom and European countries (including all ports in the Mediterranean and Black Seas) in recent years is given as follows :—

Religion.

1. England and Wales.

The Established Church of England is Protestant Episcopal. Civil disabilities on account of religion do not attach to any class of British subjects. Under the Welsh Church Acts, 1914 and 1919, the Church in Wales and Monmouthshire was disestablished as from March 31, 1920, and Wales was formed into a separate Archbishopric. Property belonging to the Church in Wales, and a sum of 1,000,000*l.* provided by Parliament, were assigned to a temporary body not exceeding three persons, called the Welsh Commissioners, for distribution to a body representing the Church (called the Representative Body), and to certain other authorities including the University of Wales.

The King is by law the supreme governor of the Church in England, possessing the right, regulated by statute, to nominate to the vacant archbishoprics and bishoprics. The King, and the First Lord of the Treasury in his name, also appoint to such deaneries, prebendaries, and canonries as are in the gift of the Crown, while a large number of livings and also some canonries are in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.

There are 3 archbishops (at the head of the three 'provinces' of Canterbury, York and Wales) and 46 bishops, and 29 suffragan bishops in England and Wales. Each archbishop has also his own particular diocese, wherein he exercises episcopal, as in his province he exercises archiepiscopal jurisdiction. Under the bishops are 32 deans and 110 archdeacons. Under the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act, 1919, there is a National Assembly, called 'the Church Assembly,' in England, consisting of a House of Bishops, a House of Clergy, and a House of Laymen, which has power to legislate regarding Church matters. The first two Houses consist of the Convocations of Canterbury and York, which in turn consist of the bishops (forming an Upper House), archdeacons, and deans, and a certain number of proctors, as the representatives of the inferior clergy (forming the Lower House). The House of Laymen is elected by the lay members of the Diocesan Conference. Parochial affairs are managed by a Parochial Church Meeting and Church Council. Every measure passed by the Church Assembly must be submitted to an Ecclesiastical Committee, consisting of fifteen members of the House of Lords nominated by the Lord Chancellor, and fifteen members of the House of Commons nominated by the Speaker. This Committee reports on each measure to Parliament, and the measure becomes law if each House of Parliament passes a resolution to that effect.

The number of civil parishes (districts for which a separate poor rate is or can be made) at the census of 1911 was 14,614. These, however, in most cases, do not coincide with ecclesiastical parishes, which have lost their old importance. Of such parishes there were (1925) 14,529, inclusive of the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands. Each parish has its church, presided over by an incumbent or minister, who must be in priest's orders, and who is known as rector, vicar, or perpetual curate, according to his relation to the temporalities of his parish. Private persons possess the right of presentation to 6,547 benefices; the patronage of the others belongs mainly to the King, the bishops and cathedrals, the Lord Chancellor, and the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. In 1925 there were about 18,907 beneficed clergy, and over 7,000 curates, etc. The contributions in the Church of England in 1925 amounted to 10,248,364*l.*

Of 34,975 churches and chapels registered for the solemnisation of marriage at the end of 1924, 16,249 belonged to the Established Church and the Church in Wales and 18,726 to other religious denominations. Of the marriages celebrated in 1924, 57·8 per cent. were in the Established Church and the Church in Wales, 5·5 per cent. in the Roman Catholic Church, 12·2 per cent. were Nonconformist marriages, 0·03 per cent. were Quaker marriages 6·7 per cent. Jewish, and 23·8 per cent. civil marriages in Registrar's Office.

The Unitarians have about 350 places of worship, the Catholic Apostolic Church over 80, the New Jerusalem Church about 75. The Salvation Army, a religious body with a semi-military organisation, carries on both spiritual and social work at home and abroad, and had (December, 1926) about 31,843 officers and employees, 15,146 corps and outposts, and 100,020 local officers; their places of worship in the United Kingdom have about 556,960 sittings. There are about 300,000 Jews in the United Kingdom with about 200 synagogues.

Roman Catholics in England and Wales are estimated at 1,930,000. There are (1924) four archbishops (of whom one is a cardinal), thirteen bishops, and four bishops-auxiliary; about 4,000 priests (not all officiating); and over 1,900 churches, chapels, and stations.

2. Scotland.

The Church of Scotland (established in 1560 and confirmed in 1688) is presbyterian, the ministers all being of equal rank. There is in each parish a kirk session, consisting of the minister, and of several laymen called elders. There are 84 presbyteries (formed by groups of parishes), meeting frequently throughout the year, and these are grouped in 16 synods, which meet half-yearly and can be appealed to against the decisions of the presbyteries. The supreme court is the General Assembly, which consists of over 750 members, partly clerical and partly lay chosen by the different presbyteries, with a few representatives from royal burghs and universities. It meets annually in May (under the presidency of a Moderator appointed by the Assembly the Sovereign being represented by a nobleman known as Lord High Commissioner), and sits for ten days. Any matters not decided during this period may be left to a Commission.

The number of parishes is 1,470, and the number of churches, chapels, and stations about 1,700. Under regulations enacted by the General Assembly, the parishioners choose their own ministers. The voluntary contributions of the congregations for religious and charitable purposes in 1926 amounted to 781,100£. The number of communicants in 1926 was about 760,000; ministers, about 1,800; lay missionaries, 90; Sunday scholars, 191,000; attending Bible classes, 60,000.

On October 31, 1900, the Free Church of Scotland and the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland constituted themselves into the United Free Church of Scotland. A minority, representing 26 congregations, continued to regard themselves as the Free Church of Scotland, and had in 1925, 130 congregations and stations, 100 ministers and probationers, and one college. Contributions to schemes amounted to 21,473*l.*, and other income to 24,895*l.* The United Church had, on December 31, 1927, 1,442 congregations, and 46 preaching stations; 536,380 members, besides adherents; 1,932 Sunday schools, with 24,786 teachers and 185,507 scholars in attendance. The Church courts are the General Assembly, 12 synods, 63 presbyteries, and 2 continental presbyteries. Income in 1926 was 1,543,649*l.* The Church has three theological colleges (at Edinburgh, Glasgow and Aberdeen) with 19 professors and lecturers. The United Church's foreign mission agents (including natives) exceed 6,000, and income 532,000*l.* There are in Scotland some small outstanding Presbyterian bodies and also Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists, and Unitarians. The Episcopal Church in Scotland had in 1926, 7 bishoprics, 421 churches and missions, 343 clergy, and 60,495 communicants.

The Roman Catholic Church had in Scotland (1924) two archbishops, four bishops and one bishop-auxiliary; about 600 priests, 450 churches, chapels, and stations, and about 600,000 adherents.

The proportion of marriages in Scotland according to the rites of the various Churches in 1925 was: Established, 41·8 per cent.; United Free, 23·2; Roman Catholic, 11·9; Episcopal, 2·9; others, 7·8; irregular, 12·4.

Instruction.

University Education.

In England the highest education is given at the ancient universities of Oxford and Cambridge, the former having 22 colleges and 3 private halls, and the latter 17 colleges and 1 hall; the university of Durham, with a college of medicine and of science at Newcastle; the university of London, with 2 Incorporated Colleges, 34 "Schools," and 28 Institutions giving instruction in 8 faculties; the Victoria University (Manchester), the Birmingham University, the Liverpool University, the Leeds University, the Sheffield University, the Bristol University, and the University of Reading, which started in 1860 as a college for art classes. There are also University Colleges at Exeter, 64 lecturers, &c., 989 students, 1927-28; Nottingham (founded 1881), 166 lecturers, and 2,714 students, 1927-28; Southampton (founded 1850), 60 lecturers, &c., 869 students, 1927-28; Leicester (opened in 1923), 22 lecturers, &c., 140 students, 1927-28. A University College was founded at Hull in 1927. There are special Agricultural Colleges at Carlisle, Cirencester, Glasgow, Newport (Shropshire), Kingston-on-Soar (Derby), Wye (Kent), Uckfield (Sussex), and Ripley (Surrey). The university of Wales has 4 colleges (Cardiff, 143 lecturers, 1,108 students; Aberystwyth, 91 lecturers, 703 students; Bangor, 80 lecturers, &c., 583 students; and Swansea, 49 lecturers, &c., 429 students). In Scotland there are 4 universities, viz., at St. Andrews, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Edinburgh. The Carnegie Trust, founded in 1901 with a capital of 2,000,000*l.*, has an annual income of 100,000*l.*, of which half is devoted to the equipment and expansion of the Scottish Universities and half to assisting students. The following table gives the approximate number of professors, lecturers, &c., and students of the Universities for 1927-1928. (The dates of foundation are given in brackets.)

At most of the Universities and University Colleges women students are admitted on equal terms with men. There are, however, several colleges exclusively for female students:—Bedford (62 teachers, &c., 600 students), Royal Holloway (35 teachers, 200 students) and Westfield Colleges (16 teachers, &c., 147 students) in London; Newnham (11 teachers, &c., 277 students) and Girton (11 teachers, &c., 263 students) Colleges in Cambridge; Lady Margaret Hall (8 teachers, &c., 134 students), Somerville College (10 teachers, &c., 156 students), St. Hugh's College (9 tutors, 150 students), St. Hilda's College (11 teachers, 108 students), in Oxford. The Society of Oxford Home Students numbered 235 students in 1923. Women were first admitted to membership of Oxford University, and to take degrees, in October, 1920.

Secondary and Technical Education, &c.

England and Wales.—The latest available statistics for secondary schools are as follows:

	Total Efficient Schools	Schools on Grant List	Total Pupils in Efficient Schools.			Full-Time Teachers. (Grant List)
			Boys	Girls	Total
1923-4	1,631	1,270	217,798	200,327	418,125	18,658
1924-5	1,667	1,284	221,924	199,764	421,688	19,069
1925-6	1,753	1,301	228,515	201,309	404,824	19,604

The number of secondary schools on the grant list in 1926 was 1,310, with 367,290 pupils and 19,069 full-time teachers.

Included among the grant-receiving schools were 656 Council Schools, 73 Roman Catholic Schools, 471 Foundation and other schools and 101 Welsh Intermediate Schools.

Included among the non-grant-receiving schools were 169 endowed schools and schools of a similar type, 23 schools controlled by Roman Catholic Orders, 95 private schools, one controlled by an educational company, and 102 preparatory schools (i.e., preparatory to secondary schools proper).

A special grant made in September 1924 in regard to the number of free places in excess of 25 per cent. of the number of pupils in grant-aided schools, was withdrawn after 1925-26.

In the year ending March 31, 1926, there were 43 larger Technical Institutes for advanced courses with 4,081 full-time students, and 102 Day Technical Institutes with 9,786 full-time and 6,835 part-time students. In addition there were 4,367 schools giving part-time technical and other instruction to 710,662 pupils, and 34 separate Day Continuation Schools (78 in 1922). Among other institutions providing technical, commercial and other instruction were 92 junior technical schools with 12,704 pupils, and 6 nautical schools. There was in 1925-26 a total of 175 Schools of Art with 49,425 students and 47 art-classes. In the same year there were 109 training institutions for teachers with 17,152 students (15,475 for elementary schools, 917 for secondary schools and 760 as teachers of domestic subjects).

The Universities in 1925-26 supervised 12 University Extension Courses for 125 classes with 2,664 students.

The total expenditure by local authorities on higher education in 1924-25 was 14,531,328*l.*, and the expenditure for London was 2,623,914*l.*, and is estimated at 2,633,770 for 1927-28.

Scotland.—In 1926 there were 249 secondary schools (209 with primary or preparatory departments) with a total accommodation of 179,814; the average number of scholars on the registers being 152,537 (78,086 post primary). The number of students attending Central Institutions in 1925-26 were 6,638 day students and 12,067 evening students (in 1924-25, 6,638 day and 12,745 evening students). Continuation Classes numbered 954 (in 1925-26) with a total attendance of 147,071 pupils. The number of teachers in secondary schools at March 31, 1926, was 6,209, including 3,429 University Graduates.

Elementary Education.

England and Wales.—In the year 1925-26 the number of schools (public elementary, special, and certified efficient) for elementary education was 21,336. In 1926 there were 9,101 Council schools with accommodation for 4,419,066 pupils, and 11,626 voluntary schools with accommodation for 2,630,958 pupils; total ordinary public elementary schools 20,727, with accommodation for 7,050,024 pupils. The average attendance for the year 1925-26 at these schools was about 4,956,585. The number of scholars on the registers in 1924 was: 181,492 aged under 5; 4,055,571 aged 5 and under 12; 1,355,541 aged 12 and over. The number of teachers, 1925-26, was 162,070, of whom 119,291 were certificated, 33,802 are uncertificated and 8,977 were supplementary. The number of public elementary schools on March 31, 1927, was 20,723, with 5,603,654 pupils on the registers. There were 169,702 teachers, of whom 119,656 were certificated.

There were 555 'special' schools in 1925-26, comprising 75 for the blind, with accommodation for 4,216 pupils; 49 for the deaf, with accommodation for 4,630 pupils; 192 for the mentally defective, accommodation 17,154; 233 for the physically defective, accommodation 18,736; and 6 for epileptic children with accommodation for 525 pupils. There were also 59 Poor Law schools, 28 nursery schools and 265 play centres.

The number of meals provided free in 1926-27 for necessitous children was 65,376,781 as compared with 13,176,383 in 1925-26, and the total number of children in public elementary schools who were medically examined in 1926 was 2,685,167.

Upwards of 100 new school clinics were opened in 1924-25, making a total of nearly 1,200 clinics. There were 1,844 medical officers, 511 dentists and 4,368 nurses employed for whole or part time.

The expenditure of local authorities for elementary education in 1925-26 was 53,375,000*l.*; for London the estimate of gross expenditure for 1927-28 is 9,878,642*l.*

Scotland.—In 1925-26 there were 2,896 Primary Schools with an accommodation of 867,589 scholars; average number on the registers was 658,963, and the average attendance was 585,673.

On July 31, 1926, there were 28 special day schools, 8 residential schools and special classes attached to 64 ordinary schools, and the number of defective children under instruction was 8,545 (3,319 in 1913), of which 5,094 were physically defective and 3,451 were mentally defective. There were also 4 schools for blind children and 9 for deaf mutes and 1 school for both combined. The total number of children under instruction was 969 (294 blind and 675 deaf mutes). On December 31, 1926, there were 33 reformatory and industrial schools with a total of 2,485 boys and girls, excluding 513 voluntary scholars.

As at March 31, 1926, there were 18,372 certificated primary school teachers and 54 assistant teachers. There were in 1926-27, 4 training centres and 3 training colleges with 2,515 senior students.

The total ordinary expenditure of Education authorities during 1924-25 was £10,875,134, including £7,343,661 on account of salaries and retiring allowances of teachers.

Justice and Crime.

England and Wales.

The Supreme Court of Judicature is the ultimate authority in most cases, civil and criminal, in England and Wales, and in others, where there is an appeal to the House of Lords, the penultimate. It exercises its power through the High Court of Justice, the Courts of Appeal, and (in a sense) a variety of subordinate local courts. The principal courts having criminal jurisdiction are the petty sessional courts, the general or quarter sessions, the courts of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, more popularly known as 'assizes,' and the Central Criminal Court, which is the Assize Court for London in the widest sense, including 'the City' and other neighbouring counties, and is also the Quarter Sessions for the City. Two or more justices of the peace, the Lord Mayor or any alderman of the City of London, or any stipendiary magistrate, sitting in a court house, constitute a petty sessional court. The courts of quarter sessions are held four times a year by the justices of the county. Two justices constitute a court, but usually a larger number attend. Women may be justices. Certain cities and boroughs have a court of quarter sessions, with similar jurisdiction to that of the county justices in quarter sessions, in which the recorder of the borough is the judge. The assize courts are constituted by Judges of the High Court (or in some cases by King's Counsel having His Majesty's special commission). These go on circuit twice or four times a year, visiting every county in turn, and hearing and determining all civil cases entered for trial and all criminal cases presented by the Grand Jury of the County or Riding, city or borough. Except in cases of treason when the trial is 'at bar,' before the Lord Chief Justice and two or more judges of the King's Bench Division, criminal cases are tried by a jury, and the jury, subject to the direction of the Judge on points of law, are the sole judges of the facts of the case. Women serve on juries. The sessions of the Central Criminal Court are held at least twelve times a year and more often if necessary. The Recorder and the Common Serjeant, and, if the number of the prisoners makes it necessary, the judge of the City of London Court, sit on the first two days, after which they are joined by one or more of the judges of the High Court on the rota, for whom capital and certain other cases are reserved. Criminal cases of special importance or complexity arising in any part of the country may, by direction of at least two High Court judges, be brought for trial in the King's Bench Division. A petty sessional court deals summarily with minor offences, some of which are practically civil and can be reviewed by the judges. All offences are usually investigated by a petty sessional court before being tried at the sessions or the assizes, but with the consent of the accused, justices can dispose of many felonies. To every sessions, assize, and to every sitting of the Central Criminal Court, the sheriff summons a number of the chief inhabitants of the approximate district, of whom not less than 12 and not more than 23 are sworn and constitute a grand jury, which examines the bill of indictment against the accused person, hears the evidence of witnesses for the prosecution, and if it thinks a prima facie case for trial is made out, endorses the bill 'a true bill,' which is then tried by the petit jury. All criminal trials, except those which come before a court of summary jurisdiction or the House of Lords, take place before a judge and such a jury (twelve persons). Appeal is allowed in criminal cases: (i.) on a point of law; (ii.) on a question of fact, or other sufficient ground if the judge certifies the case as fit for appeal, or the Court of Criminal Appeal grants leave to appeal; and (iii.) against the sentence (if not fixed by law) with the leave of the Court of Criminal Appeal. This Court can reverse, amend, or affirm the judgment: in a few cases its decision may be reconsidered by the House of Lords. The only other method of securing the revision of a sentence is through the Royal prerogative, exercised on the advice of the Home Secretary, by which a sentence can be modified or annulled. No man can be tried again for the same crime after a petit jury has found him 'not guilty.' Nominally all the judges are appointed by the King, but in practice the Lord Chancellor (who is a minister, a member of the Cabinet, ex-officio president of the House of Lords, and goes out with the ministry), the Lord Chief Justice, the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, who sit in the House of Lords and on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and the Lords Justices of Appeal who sit in the Court of Appeal, are appointed on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, and all the other judges on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor.

The courts chiefly having jurisdiction in civil cases are the modern County Courts, created in 1846, Assizes, and the High Court, Quarter Sessions and old local courts also have this jurisdiction to a certain extent.

The authorised strength of the police force in England and Wales on September 29, 1927, was 57,284 (including 19,371 Metropolitan police). The net expenditure in 1925-26 was 19,069,848*l.* The estimated expenditure on police account was 6,577,672*l.* for 1925-26, 6,914,997*l.* for 1926-27, and 7,096,102*l.* for 1927-28.

Scotland.

The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges of the Court of Session, and sits more or less frequently, as the number of cases before it may require, in Edinburgh or in the circuit towns. One judge can, and usually does, try cases, but two or more preside in cases of difficulty or importance. It is the only competent court in cases of treason, murder, robbery, rape, fire-raising, deforcement of messengers, and generally in all cases in which a higher punishment than imprisonment is by statute directed to be inflicted; and it has moreover an inherent jurisdiction to punish all criminal acts, both those already established by common law or statute, and such as have never previously come before the courts and are not within any statute.

The sheriff of each county is the proper criminal judge in all crimes occurring within the county which infer only an arbitrary punishment, and if the case is tried with a jury the High Court has no power of review on the merits. Even in cases indicted to the High Court the accused is, under the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act of 1887, regularly asked to plead in the sheriff court, and minor objections to the indictment can be wholly or in part disposed of there. Borough magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases occurring within the burgh or county, and in a number of minor offences under various statutes.

The Court of Session exercises the highest civil jurisdiction in Scotland, with the House of Lords as a Court of Appeal.

The police force in Scotland at the end of 1924 had an authorised strength of 6,705. The estimated expenditure on police was 812,000*l.* in 1925-26, 825,000*l.* for 1926-27, and 840,000*l.* for 1927-28.

National Insurance. Pensions.

Under the National Health Insurance Act 1924, the Unemployment Insurance Acts 1920–25, the Old Age Pensions Act 1908–24, and the Widows' Orphans and Old Age Contributory Pensions Act 1925, provision is made for insurance against loss of health, for prevention and cure of sickness, compulsory insurance against unemployment, and pensions for widows and orphans and aged persons.

National Health Insurance.—This is administered by the Ministry of Health in England and Wales, and the corresponding departments in Scotland and Ireland; by specially constituted authorities, by approved friendly societies and trade unions.

Subject to specific exceptions, persons who are compulsory brought under the National Health Insurance Act, known as employed contributors, comprise all persons between the ages of 16 and 70 who are employed under contract of service, written or implied, whether by time or piece. Among persons excluded are those employed in non-manual labour at a rate of remuneration exceeding £250 a year. Insured persons who are not members of an approved society must contribute to a Post Office Fund, and are known as deposit contributors; their benefits are limited. Certain persons not compulsory insured may become voluntary contributors. The rates of contributions are given below. The benefits include medical treatment, sanatorium treatment, payments during sickness (ordinary benefit, 15s. per week for men, 12s. for women), for disablement (7s. 6d. per week), and payment of 40s. (in the case of women) for confinement, (80s. if both husband and wife are insured).

Widows, Orphans and Old Age Pensions.—From January 4, 1926, all persons, with certain exceptions, who are insurable under the National Health Insurance Scheme, will be insurable also under the Widows, Orphans and Old Age Contributory Pensions Act. The provisions of the scheme apply to sailors, soldiers and airmen in the same way and to the same extent as to ordinary insured persons. Widows will receive 10s. per week for life, with 5s. for the first child and 3s. for each other child until they reach the age of 14 (or 16 in certain cases). Orphans will receive 7s. 6d. per week for each child under 14 (or 16 if still at school). Persons over 70 years of age are entitled, as from July 2, 1926, to pensions of 10s. per week under the Old Age Pensions Acts 1908–24, irrespective of means, residence or nationality. As from January 2, 1928, insured persons over 65 will be entitled to pensions of 10s. per week under the provisions of the Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1925, subject to specified conditions, which include residence in Great Britain for two years immediately prior to the date of the 65th birthday. There is no means test. On reaching the age of 70, contributory pensioners will come under the provisions of the Old Age Pensions Act.

The rate of contributions are as follows:—

	Men		Women
	Employer	Employee	Employer	Employee
Health . . . .	4½d.	4½d.	4½d.	4d.
Pensions . . . .	4½d.	4½d.	2½d.	2d.

Unemployment Insurance.—This is administered by the Ministry of Labour through the Employment Exchanges, Trade Unions, and Friendly Societies. The scheme is wholly compulsory in its operation, and substantially all persons covered by the Health Insurance Scheme are insured against unemployment. Domestic servants and persons employed in agriculture are among those excepted. Employees of local authorities, railways and certain other utility undertakings, and persons with rights under statutory superannuation schemes are also exempted where the Ministry of Labour certifies that they are employed under conditions which make the national insurance unnecessary.

The contributions are; men (over 18 years of age), 8*d.* a week from employer, 7*d.* from employee; women (over 18), 7*d.* a week from employer, 6*d.* from employee; boys (16 to 18), 4*d.* from employer and 3½*d.* from employee; girls (16 to 18), 3½*d.* from employer, 3*d.* from employee. The State contributes in addition, amounts ranging from 4½*d.* to 8*d.* per person. As from January 2, 1928, contributions will cease to be payable when a person attains the age of 65, but if such person continues to be employed after reaching that age, the employer will be required to pay his share of the contribution only. The standard rates of benefit are: men, 18*s.* per week; women, 15*s.* per week; boys (between 16 and 18), 7*s.* 6*d.*, and girls (between 16 and 18), 6*s.* weekly, subject to certain conditions.

The National Health Scheme covers about 14 million persons, increasing to 16½ millions in 1960. The total expenditure on benefits for England and Wales was estimated for 1926 at 28,588,600*l.*, including 5,489,400*l.* for disablement and 8,534,400*l.* for medical benefit. The number of persons entitled to benefits was 14,272,500. The cost of administration was 4,510,100*l.* The estimate for Old Age Pensions for 1926-27 was 26,856,000*l.* (24,201,000*l.* for 1924-25). The preliminary estimate for 1926-27 is 29,840,000*l.* The total amount paid in respect of widows' and orphans' pensions from January 1, 1926, to March 31, 1927, is approximately 7,212,000*l.* There were 341,993 persons (including 11,453 orphans) receiving pensions or allowances on March 31, 1927. Approximately 385,000 persons will be eligible for contributory old age pensions on January 2, 1928. The cost of unemployment insurance for 1925-26 was estimated at 13,207,000*l.*

War Pensions.—The number of war pensions or allowances in payment as at March 31, 1927, was 1,665,000 approximately, and the estimated expenditure of the Ministry of Pensions for 1927-28 was 61,442,832*l.*, and for 1928-29 is 57,215,800*l.* (inclusive of administration expenses).

The Exchequer issues shown above are those with which the various departments were supplied to meet all requirements, whether original or supplementary.

In addition to the ordinary expenditure above given, there were in 1926-27 issues to meet capital expenditure under the Telegraph (Money) Act, 1925, 11,000,000£; West Indian Islands (Telegraph) Act, 1924, 3,779£; Capital Expenditure (Money) Act, 1904, 777,200£; amounting in the aggregate to 11,780,979£. An amount of 17,942,431£. was borrowed under the Unemployment Insurance Acts, 1921, and 542,000£. was repaid. The money raised by National Savings Certificates was 31,650,000£, and by Treasury Bills, 2,539,692,000£, while Treasury Bills paid off amounted to 2,503,175,000£. The balance in the Exchequer on April 1, 1926, was 6,556,933£; the gross receipts into the Exchequer in the year 1926-27 amounted to 4,189,586,240£; the gross issues out of the Exchequer amounted to 4,196,143,173£; leaving a balance on March 31, 1927, of 6,459,656£.

The following were the principal items of the estimates for Grant Services, etc. (excluding Pensions), for the years 1926-27 and 1927-28 :—

	1926-27	1927-28
Payment to Local Taxation Accounts . . . . .	13,560,000	13,927,000
Education . . . . .	46,291,000	46,450,000
Agriculture (including Land Settlement Grants and Loans and the Development Fund) . . . . .	4,841,000	6,459,000
Health Services . . . . .	3,606,000	4,094,000
Housing . . . . .	9,982,000	10,999,000
Reformatories and Mental Deficiency . . . . .	1,087,000	1,109,000
Police (voted grants additional to payments through Local Taxation Accounts) . . . . .	5,786,000	5,907,000
Miscellaneous . . . . .	834,000	1,014,000
All Irish Services . . . . .	8,487,000	8,930,000
Total . . . . .	94,474,000	98,880,000

The estimated net expenditure for the Civil Service (including additional charges) and the Revenue Departments for 1927-28 and 1928-29 are as follows: Civil Services, 1927-28, 231,854,282£; 1928-29, 223,803,813£; Customs, Excise and Inland Revenue, 1927-28, 11,895,560£; 1928-29, 11,777,050£; Post Office, 1927-28, 57,643,000£; 1928-29, 57,314,000£. Total, 1927-28, 301,392,842£; 1928-29, 292,894,863£.

II. TAXATION.

The net receipts from the principal branches of taxation, Great Britain and Northern Ireland (reserved taxes), were as follows in the years stated :—

Income Tax.—The gross amount of income brought under the review of the Inland Revenue Department in the year ended April 5, 1924, in Gt. Britain and Northern Ireland, was 2,944,449,789*l.*; in 1926-27 it was estimated to be approximately 2,900,000,000*l.* The income on which tax was actually received in 1925-26, after allowing for exemptions and reliefs, was 1,312,076,636*l.*, and the estimated amount for 1926-27 was 1,300,000,000*l.* The estimated number of incomes in Great Britain and Northern Ireland above the effective exemption limit in 1926-27 was 4,250,000: the number actually chargeable with tax was estimated at 2,150,000.

Prior to April 6, 1915, incomes not exceeding 160*l.* were exempt from Income Tax, and from April, 1915, to April, 1920, incomes not exceeding 130*l.* were exempt. The graduation of the tax on incomes in excess of these limits was effected by means of differential rates and by various abatements and reliefs (for wife, children, etc.) granted in the lower ranges of incomes only.

Under the new system of graduation introduced by the Finance Act, 1920, the exemption limit was fixed at 135*l.* of assessable income, i.e. it ranged from 135*l.* to 150*l.* according as the income was wholly investment or wholly earned; personal allowances of 135*l.* assessable income (= 150*l.* earned income) for single persons and 225*l.* (= 250*l.* earned income) for married persons, and allowances for children, dependent relatives, etc., were granted to all taxpayers irrespective of the amount of their total income. The effect of the increase in the earned income relief (from one-tenth to one-sixth) by the Finance Act, 1925, was to increase the personal allowances, in the case of earned incomes, to 162*l.* and 270*l.* respectively. Tax is charged on the first 225*l.* of taxable income at one-half the standard rate, and on the remainder at the standard rate of tax, which has varied as follows:—

	1922-23	. . .	5s. „
	1923-24 and 1924-25	. . .	4s. 6d. „
and from	1925-26 onwards	. . .	4s. „

The gross income brought under review in 1925-26 was distributed as follows:—

Profits from the ownership of Lands . . . . .	51,000,000
Profits from the ownership of Houses . . . . .	318,275,543
Profits from the occupation of lands <sup>1</sup> . . . . .	49,000,000
British and other Government securities . . . . .	153,637,873
businesses, professions, and certain interest . . . . .	1,361,905,934
Salaries of Offices and employments (including Manual wage-earners . . . . .)	1,010,630,439
	2,944,449,789

The gross income from the ownership of lands and houses in 1925-26 was distributed as follows :—

—	England	Scotland	N. Ireland	Gt. Britain and N. Ireland
	£	£	£	£
Lands, etc. . . . .	42,600,000	6,300,000	2,100,000	51,000,000
Houses, etc. . . . .	286,871,918	29,180,590	2,723,026	318,275,543

Super Tax.—The estimated aggregate income of the super-tax payers in Great Britain and Northern Ireland in 1926-27 was 568,000,000<sup>1</sup>., and the estimated number of persons chargeable, 98,000. Super-tax is payable by persons with incomes exceeding 2,000<sup>1</sup>. per year (prior to 1914-15, 5,000<sup>1</sup>. per year; from 1914-15 to 1917-18, 3,000<sup>1</sup>. per year, and in 1918-19 and 1919-20, 2,500<sup>1</sup>. per year).

In accordance with various Acts passed between 1888 and 1911, there are paid out of the Consolidated Fund to the Local Taxation Accounts of England and Scotland, sums equivalent to the proceeds (in some cases, of the year 1908-9, and in other cases of the current year) of certain excise licence duties, part of the beer and spirit duties, and part of the probate and estate duties. Certain other grants are also payable.

The total payments made to the Local Taxation Account for England and Wales in 1926-27 was 12,359,844<sup>1</sup>., including 1,107,260<sup>1</sup>. on account of beer and spirit duties, 2,630,432<sup>1</sup>. on account of licence duties and 1,321,152<sup>1</sup>. under the Agricultural Rates Act. Scotland received a total of 1,812,231<sup>1</sup>.

III. NATIONAL DEBT.

Borrowing by the State on the security of taxes was practised in Norman times, but the National Debt really dates from the time of William III. The acknowledged debt in 1689 was about 664,000<sup>1</sup>., on which the annual charge for interest and management was only 40,000<sup>1</sup>. At various subsequent dates the amounts were as follows (including the Irish debt throughout) :—

Year	Debt <sup>1</sup> Million £	Annual charge, includ- ing annuities Million £	Annuities only (included in pre- vious column) Million £

The following statement shows the total amount of the Gross Liabilities and the Assets of the State on March 31, 1927:—

Liabilities:	Million £	Million £
Funded Debt . . . . .	1,210.8
Estimated Capital Liability of Terminable Annuities . . . . .	12.2
Unfunded Debt . . . . .	6,390.9

Exchequer Balances at the Banks of England and Ireland . . . . .		6.5

The amount of debt provision issued in 1926-27 for interest and management was 318,583,679L.

The net increase in the aggregate gross liabilities of the State in 1926-27 was 18,965,402L.

IV. LOCAL TAXATION.

The estimated rate expenditure of local authorities in recent years was as follows:—

	England and Wales	Scotland	Total
1922-23 . . . . .	157,274,000	17,543,000	174,817,000
1923-24 . . . . .	143,275,000	17,591,000	160,866,000
1924-25 . . . . .	142,000,000	17,887,000	159,887,000
1925-26 . . . . .	147,500,000	18,593,000	166,093,000
1926-27 . . . . .	159,500,000	20,448,000	179,948,000

The approximate allocation of amounts raised by rates during 1926-27 was as follows :—

On relief of the poor . . .	37,500,000	4,704,000	42,204,000
„ education . . .	33,000,000	4,969,000	37,969,000
„ police . . .	10,000,000	1,090,000	11,090,000
„ other services . . .	79,000,000	9,685,000	88,685,000
Totals . . .	159,500,000	20,448,000	179,948,000

In England and Wales the average amount of the rates per pound of assessable value was 6s. 8½d. in 1913-14, 11s. 11½d. in 1925-26, and 12s. 5½d. in 1926-27.

Defence.

The Committee of Imperial Defence is responsible for the co-ordination of naval, military, and air policy. Of this Committee the Prime Minister is ex-officio President, and he has power to call for the attendance at its meetings of any naval or military officers, or of other persons, with administrative experience, whether they are in official positions or not. The usual members are the Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs, for War and Air, the Colonies, India, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the First Lord of the Admiralty, the First Sea Lord, the Chief of the Imperial General Staff, the Chief of the Air Staff, Directors of the Intelligence Departments of the War Office and the Admiralty. During 1923 a Cabinet Committee inquired into the co-ordination of the policy and administration of defence. As the result of its report a standing sub-committee of the Committee of Imperial Defence has been appointed, with a Cabinet Minister as Chairman, the heads of the three services and representatives of the Foreign Office and Treasury as members, for the purpose of correlating defensive policy. Three further sub-committees have since been appointed, one composed of the Chiefs of Staff of the three services of Navy, Army and Air, to furnish the Cabinet or the main committee with expert advice on problems of defence, the second sub-committee deals with man-power, and the third, the principal supply officers' sub-committee, with the provision of munitions and supplies in time of war. At the beginning of 1927 an Imperial Defence College was founded to educate selected officers of the three services in working together in the solution of problems of Imperial Defence and to carry out detailed studies for the main committee.

I. ARMY.

The land forces of the United Kingdom consist of the Regular Army, the Territorial Army, and the Reserve Forces. The British troops of the Regular Army serve both at home and overseas and are commonly referred to as the British Army in contradistinction to the Indian Army or Native Army, and to the Local Forces in certain British Colonies and Dependencies, the personnel of which is native with a proportion of British officers.

The Regular Army, whether at home or abroad, except India, is paid for by the Imperial Exchequer (although certain Dominions pay contributions towards its upkeep); India pays a contribution towards the cost of troops at home owing to these serving as a dépôt for the regular troops in India. The Imperial Exchequer pays for Indian and Colonial troops serving outside their own countries. The Territorial Army serves only at home in peace time, but as the supreme position of the British Navy in Home Waters has practically eliminated all risk of invasion, members of the Territorial Army are now asked to accept liability for service overseas in time of war, subject to the consent of Parliament. The rank and file for both Regular Army and Territorial Army are obtained by voluntary enlistment. The Reserve Forces consist of the Army Reserve, the Supplementary Reserve of Officers and the Supplementary Reserve, the Militia and the Channel Islands and Colonial Militia, and the Territorial Reserve. The Army Reserve is composed of men who have completed their period of colour service with the Regular Army; its strength on April 1, 1927 was 92,000. The Supplementary Reserve of Officers and the Supplementary Reserve were created in August 1924, with establishments of 2,489 and 20,639 respectively, for the purpose of supplying officers and technicians to the army on mobilisation. The Militia, which is intended to serve as a supply source to the Regular Army after the Army Reserve is exhausted, is in process of reconstruction. The Channel Islands and Colonial Militia consist of the Channel Islands Militia, the Malta Militia, the Bermuda Militia, and the Isle of Man Volunteers. The Territorial Reserve is in process of formation.

Service is for 12 years, with permission to extend to 21 years in certain circumstances. Of the original 12 years, from 3 to 9 are spent 'with the colours,' i.e., on permanent service, and the remainder of the time in the Army Reserve; the majority of the men serve for 7 years with the colours and 5 years in the Army Reserve, which is the rule for infantry other than the Foot Guards. Men enlist between 18 and 25 years of age.

For purposes of training and command the fighting troops are for the most part organised in divisions, which consist of 3 infantry brigades, divisional artillery and engineers, together with the necessary auxiliary services. The cavalry is organised in brigades. The infantry brigades are composed of 4 battalions, the cavalry brigades of 3 regiments. The organisation of the Territorial Army is analogous to that of the Regular Army, and it consists of 14 divisions, composed of infantry, artillery, engineers, and auxiliary services, and of the mounted brigades, chiefly composed of yeomanry. During 1927 considerable progress was made in the process of mechanising the Army. An experimental mechanised brigade, composed of artillery, infantry and tanks was formed on Salisbury Plain. New establishments were prepared increasing considerably the number of machine guns with infantry and cavalry.

For purposes of command Great Britain is divided up into six 'commands' and the London and Northern Ireland Districts. The commands are (1) Aldershot, of very limited area, (2) Eastern, including the eastern and southern counties, (3) Northern, including the northern midlands and north-eastern counties, (4) Scottish, (5) Southern, including the southern midlands and south-western counties, (6) Western, including Wales, Lancashire and north-western counties. These commands (except the Aldershot command) are divided up into Territorial Recruiting districts for the Regular Army. The Eastern, Northern, Scottish, Southern, and Western commands and the London District each include from 1 to 4 Territorial mounted brigades, and 2 or 3 Territorial divisions. There are normally two Regular divisions in the Aldershot, one Regular division in the Eastern and one in the Southern command. At the head of each command is a general officer (styled the General-Officer Commanding-in-Chief). He is assisted by a general-officer of lower rank who is responsible for questions of administration apart from training and defence questions.

The land forces are administered by an Army Council which is composed of the Secretary of State for War, who is its President; the heads of the departments into which the War Office is primarily divided, and the permanent Secretary of the War Office. The Territorial Army is to a large extent administered by County Associations over which the War Office merely maintains a general control as regards expenditure.

The principal military educational establishments are the Royal Military Academy, educating youths to be officers in the artillery and the engineers, the Royal Military College whence officers are obtained for cavalry and infantry, the Senior Officers' School, which trains officers for command, and the Staff College, which trains officers for the staff. The Officers' Training Corps in two divisions representing respectively the universities and public schools, is intended to provide officers for the Territorial Army, and for the Regular Army on expansion.

The gross estimated expenditure for the army for the year 1928-29 amounted (March, 1928) to 49,266,000*l.*, and appropriations in aid to 8,216,000*l.*, leaving a net expenditure of 41,050,000*l.*

The total personnel charged to British votes for 1928-29 was 153,500, of whom 150,213 were British troops, 2,000 were troops in the Middle East under control of the Air Ministry, 4,287 were Colonial and Native Indian troops, 10,000 were additional required to cover the despatch of troops to China. There were in India 60,223 British troops, so that the total establishment of the Regular Army in 1927-28 was 150,213 + 60,223 = 210,436. The strength of the Territorial Force on December 1, 1928, was 146,260.

The distribution of Regular troops, except in India, was as follows:

II. NAVY.

The British Navy is a permanent establishment, governed by the Board of Admiralty. The First Lord of the Admiralty is the Cabinet Minister responsible for the Navy.

The duties of the Admiralty are grouped under the two headings of Operations and Maintenance. The First Sea Lord and Chief of the Naval Staff, the Deputy Chief of the Naval Staff, and the Assistant Chief of the Naval Staff have charge and direction of the Operations Division. This Division is concerned with Naval policy and the general direction of operations, war operations in Home waters and elsewhere, strategy, tactics, the development and use of material, including types of vessels and weapons, and with trade protection and anti-submarine considerations. The four officials who are in charge of the Maintenance Division are the Second Sea Lord and Chief of the Personnel; the Third Sea Lord and Controller of the Navy; the Fourth Sea Lord and Chief of Supplies and Transport; and the Civil Lord. The Parliamentary Secretary and the Permanent Secretary are concerned with Finance and Admiralty business.

The Washington Treaty of 1922, which relates to the British Navy and the Navies of the United States, France, Italy, and Japan, is concerned mainly with capital ships, defining for each Power what her replacement tonnage shall be, and fixing the maximum displacement of such ships at 35,000 tons, and their heaviest armaments at the 16 in. gun. There is no restriction as to the number of cruisers, but they are not to exceed 10,000 tons, nor to have a heavier gun than the 8 in. The Powers concerned are therefore devoting far more attention than formerly to cruisers, with the object of getting as much as possible out of the maximum displacement allowed; and there is no doubt that naval competition for some time to come will find its chief expression in this class of vessel. Destroyers and submarines are not affected by the Treaty, but there are special restrictions as to aircraft-carriers, a class of vessel to which increasing importance is being attached.

Under the terms of the Treaty the British Empire retained 22 capital ships with a total displacement of 580,450 tons. To replace four of these which have been discarded, two new battleships, named Nelson and Rodney, were laid down at the end of 1922 and completed in 1927. These ships are described in the summary which follows.

Four 10,000-ton cruisers (Devonshire, London, Shropshire, Sussex) were laid down under the 1925-26 Estimates, besides two of similar type (Australia and Canberra) for the Royal Australian Navy, to replace the obsolescent Melbourne and Sydney in 1928. Under the 1926-27 Estimates there are building two 10,000 ton cruisers (Dorsetshire, Norfolk), one 8,000 ton cruiser (York), 6 submarines (Odin, Olympus, Orpheus, Osiris, Oswald, Otus); 2 depot and repair ships (Medway, Resource); and under those for 1927-28 there are being laid down one 8,000 ton cruiser, 1 flotilla leader, 8 destroyers, 6 submarines, 2 minesweepers. In future years it is proposed to build:—

In 1928-29: Two 8,000 ton cruisers, 1 flotilla leader, 8 destroyers, 6 submarines.

In 1929-30: One 10,000 ton cruiser, two 8,000 ton cruisers, 1 aircraft carrier, 1 flotilla leader, 8 destroyers, 1 fleet submarine, 5 submarines, 1 net layer.

The Navy estimates for 1925-26 amounted to 60,500,000*l.* net, for 1926-27, 58,100,000*l.* net, and for 1927-28, 58,000,000*l.* net.

The number of officers, seamen and marines borne on January 1, 1914, was 144,871. The estimates for 1926-27 provide for a total personnel of 102,675. Officers included in this total numbered about 7,500.

SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH FLEET.

With the disappearance from the lists of all capital ships armed with guns of less than 13·5 inch calibre, the general tendency is to classify them as pre-Jutland and post-Jutland types. Of the last-named the only representatives at present are the Nelson and Rodney, though the Hood embodies in her design certain modifications based on war experience.

The following summary of the more important units will illustrate the present position.

Class.	Completed by end of
	1925	1926	1927
Battleships and Battle Cruisers . .	22	22	20
Cruisers . . . . .	50	49	50
Aircraft Carriers and Tenders . .	7	7	7
Flotilla leaders and Destroyers . .	207	174	174
Submarines . . . . .	65	56	56

Ships and vessels of the Dominions are included in the above table and in the following paragraph. See notes following the ship lists.

Of the 37 monitors which existed in 1919, three still survive. There are 10 seagoing depot and repair ships, 31 sloops, 35 minesweepers (mostly laid up in reserve), 12 surveying vessels, and a large number of smaller craft, such as gunboats, patrol boats, drifters and trawlers. A new sloop is projected for the Royal Indian Navy.

In the following tables the ships are grouped in classes according to type. The dates of the Naval Estimates under which they were sanctioned are given in certain cases, but, with reference to the capital ships affected by the Washington Treaty, the years are substituted in which they are due for replacement if desired.

The destroyers of the post-war Fleet are of the following classes: flotilla leaders, 1610–1800 tons, 34–36.5 knots, 17 (including 1 Australian); R class, 900–1085 tons, 22; S class, 930–1075 tons, 61 (including 5 Australian and 2 lent to Canada in place of 2 M class, condemned); V class, 1300–1825 tons, 27; W class, 1300–1350 tons, 37; A class (1210–1330 tons), 2; Parramatta class (Australia) 6; total number 172. A flotilla leader and 8 destroyers of the A class are on order (1927–28 Estimate).

The submarines are of seven successive classes. H class (440 tons surface displacement) 17; K class (2140 tons) 1; L class (890–960 tons) 30; M class (1600 tons) 2; R class (420 tons) 2; X class (2525 tons), 1; O class (1346 tons), 3 (including 2 Australian); total number, 56. Six more of the O type, provided for under 1926–27 Estimates, are under construction, and 6 (1927–28 Estimates) on order.

Dominion Navies.—When Lord Jellicoe made a tour of the Dominions with the object of arriving at an understanding with the Governments on the naval defence of the Empire, his report to the Government of Australia emphasized the desirability of the Commonwealth becoming self-contained in regard to shipbuilding and the manufacture of guns, mountings, explosives, and aircraft, but no action of much importance has been taken on the proposals. The Imperial Cabinet (July, 1921) left on record its view that co-operation among the constituent parts of the Empire was necessary, but that the details must be left to the Dominion Parliaments. So far the only one of Lord Jellicoe's main recommendations that has been carried into effect is the constitution of a Royal Indian Navy, now in process of formation. Its nucleus already exists in the Royal Indian Marine (comprising 3 sloops and 2 surveying vessels), which it will replace.

The Royal Australian Navy, in addition to the 4 cruisers named in the list above, has 1 flotilla leader, 6 destroyers of the River class and 5 of the S class, 2 submarines of the O class, 3 sloops, and other vessels. Two new cruisers of 10,000 tons (Australia, Canberra) will be completed early in 1928 to replace two older vessels; and an aircraft carrier (Albatross) is building in Australia.

The New Zealand Navy, in addition to the Dionede and Dunedin, has the obsolete light cruiser Philomel as a training ship and a mine-sweeping trawler for instructional purposes.

The Royal Canadian Navy has 4 mine-sweeping trawlers; and the Admiralty have recently arranged for the loan of 2 destroyers (renamed Vancouver and Champlain) from the Royal Navy.

The South African Navy has 2 mine-sweeping trawlers and a surveying vessel.

Newfoundland has one sloop built in 1925, the Caribou, which is employed under the Finance and Customs Department.

III. AIR FORCE.

In May, 1912, the Royal Flying Corps first came into existence. On January 2, 1918, an Air Ministry was formed, and the control of the Royal Air Force was vested in an Air Council analogous to the Army Council. The Air Minister was given the status of a Secretary of State and became President of the Council. In April, 1918, the naval and military wings were amalgamated, under the Ministry of the Air, as the Royal Air Force.

The Force consists of the Royal Air Force, the Air Force Reserve, the Air Force Special Reserve, the Auxiliary Air Force, and the Territorial Air Force. The establishment of the Royal Air Force for the year 1927-28 is 33,300 exclusive of those serving in India, who are paid for by the Government of India. During 1922 the Air Ministry took over control of Iraq and Palestine, and in January 1928 of Aden.

The Air Force is organised into commands as follows:—

I. United Kingdom: (a) Inland Area, (b) Coastal Area, (c) Irish Wing, (d) Cranwell, (e) Halton.

II. Overseas: (a) Middle East Area, (b) Iraq, (c) India, (d) Mediterranean, (e) Palestine.

Areas are subdivided into groups and wings, a certain number of squadrons being allotted to each group or wing. Squadrons are subdivided into flights. In December 1927 the establishment of the Royal Air Force was 68½ squadrons, 59 of which were regular squadrons and 8 Special Reserve or Auxiliary Air Force squadrons. Each squadron is of 12 aeroplanes. 35 squadrons were in Great Britain and 18 abroad, while 23 flights, the equivalent of 11½ squadrons, were provided for the fleet air arm. During 1923 a scheme for the expansion of the Air Force primarily for Home Defence was sanctioned. This scheme provides for an establishment of 52 squadrons for home defence, 39 of these being squadrons of the Royal Air Force, 6 being non-regular squadrons formed from the Auxiliary Air Force, and 7 being formed of the Special Reserve. At the end of 1927, 31 Home Defence squadrons had been formed, of which 22 are regular squadrons. In November 1924 an Air Officer, commanding-in-chief Air Defences of Great Britain, was appointed to organise and command the Air Forces allotted for Home Defence. These are now divided into 3 sub-commands: the Fighting Area with headquarters at Uxbridge; the Wessex Bombing Area, with headquarters at Andover, and the Special Reserve and Auxiliary Air Force.

The chief educational establishments of the Air Force are the Cadet College at Cranwell and the Staff College at Andover. The chief training depôt is at Halton. There are also 3 flying training schools, 1 central flying school, and schools of gunnery, ballooning, army co-operation, photography and wireless.

The net Air Estimates for 1928-29 amount to 16,250,000£.

For 1928-29 the net sum allotted to Civil Aviation is 415,000£. The air routes maintained were London-Manchester, London-Amsterdam, London-Brussels-Cologne, London-Paris and Cairo-Baghdad. The chief events in civil aviation during 1927 were the inauguration of an air-route to India by the Secretary of State for Air, who flew to India and back early in 1927, an experimental flight by 4 Fairey machines of the Royal Air Force from Cairo to Capetown and back to England, and the winning of the Schneider trophy by the Royal Air Force. During 1928 it is hoped that 2 airships for traffic to the East will be completed.

<sup>3</sup> In Scotland all orchard land is also included against the crop, grass or fallow beneath the trees. In England and Wales orchard land is only duplicated where small fruit is grown beneath the trees. The figures for small fruit in all cases, therefore, include small fruit in orchards.

The production of meat in Great Britain in 1923–24 was estimated at 1,023,000 tons; of milk, 1,350 million gallons. The value of produce sold off the farms in 1923 (excluding produce consumed in farmers' households, is estimated at 258,750,000£, namely: farm crops, 54,000,000£; live stock, 5,000,000£; dairy produce, 79,000,000£; wool, 4,250,000£; poultry and eggs, 13,500,000£; miscellaneous crops, 13,000,000£.

In England and Wales, the Ministry of Agriculture make grants for, and, to some extent, supervise vocational education and scientific research in agriculture. The Board of Agriculture for Scotland dispenses certain grants for the development and improvement of agriculture, including agricultural education and research, in that country.

Under the Development and Road Improvement Funds Acts, 1909 and 1910, there are eight 'Development Commissioners,' appointed to advise the Treasury in the administration of a national fund for the development of agriculture, fisheries, forestry, and analogous resources of the United Kingdom. The total sum guaranteed to the Fund was 2,900,000*l.*; interest on investments, and other receipts, up to March 31, 1920, made the total available funds, 3,541,000*l.* In 1921–22 a further 850,000*l.*, constituting the 'Special' Fund, was paid to the Fund under the Corn Production Acts (Repeal) Act, 1921, for the purpose of aiding and developing agriculture in England and Wales. Under the same Act 150,000*l.* was paid to the Agriculture (Scotland) Fund for similar purposes in Scotland. In 1927–28 a further 250,000*l.* was voted to the Fund by Parliament. During 1926–27 the payment of grants from the Ordinary Fund amounted to 239,476*l.* and loans to 12,656*l.*; grants from the Special Fund amounted to 262,171*l.* The balance in the Ordinary Fund at March 31, 1927, was 103,160*l.* and the balance in the Special Fund was 125,347*l.*

The metals obtainable from the ores produced in 1926 were:—Copper, 108 tons, value 6,865*l.*; iron, 1,269,260 tons, 5,198,677*l.*; lead, 14,493 tons, 449,136*l.*; silver, 41,350 oz., 4,943*l.*; tin, 2,327 tons, 677,535*l.*; zinc, 652 tons, 22,182*l.*; total value, 6,859,338*l.*

The total number of persons ordinarily employed at all mines in Great Britain under the Coal and Metalliferous Mines Regulation Acts during 1926 was 1,143,769 in March and 970,616 in December. The number of mines at work was 3,173. On December 1926, 762,074 persons (males) worked underground, and 204,236 males and 4,306 females above ground. The number employed at quarries under the Quarries Act was 81,833, of whom 52,391 (including 28 females) worked inside the quarries, and 29,442 outside. The number of quarries at work was 5,403.

Professor H. S. Jevons estimated the resources of British coal in 1915, within 4,000 feet of the surface, at 197,000 million tons.

Coal raised in Great Britain, and coal, coke, and patent fuel exported :—

The exports of British iron ore are insignificant. Of the ore imported in 1926, 968,000 tons, valued at 916,000£, came from Spain. Including 'purple ore,' the net quantity of iron ore available for the furnaces of Great Britain in 1926 was 6,350,000 tons.

The total output of steel in 1926 was 3,596,100 tons (7,385,400 tons in 1925); the total number of works in operation was 83 (90 in 1925), with an average number of 170 open hearth furnaces (295 in 1925).

IV. WATER POWER.

The available water-power resources of Great Britain are estimated to be 900,000 B.H.P., of which 200,000 B.H.P. are developed (1922).

Commerce.

<sup>1</sup> From April 1, 1923, the figures relate to Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and include the trade between that area and the Irish Free State.

The value of goods imported is generally taken to be that at the port and time of entry, including all incidental expenses (cost, insurance, and freight) up to the landing on the quay. For goods consigned for sale, the market value in this country is required and recorded in the returns. This is ascertained from the declaration made by the importers, and is checked by the expert knowledge available in the Customs Department, with the help of current price-lists and market reports. For exports, the value at the port of shipment (including the charges of delivering the goods on board) is taken. Imports are entered as from the country whence the goods were consigned to the United Kingdom, which may, or may not, be the country whence the goods were last shipped. Exports are credited to the country of ultimate destination as declared by the exporters.

Internal Communications.

I. RAILWAYS AND TRAMWAYS.

Under the Railways Act, 1921, the railways of Great Britain are grouped, as from January 1, 1923, into four systems, namely: London, Midland and Scottish (7,464 miles); London and North-Eastern (6,464 miles); Great Western (3,765 miles); Southern (2,129 miles); total, 19,822 miles of route.

The following table gives the latest railway statistics available for Great Britain:—

Year	Length of road open at end of year	Nominal Capital (including nominal additions)	Number of Passengers originating (excluding season-ticket holders) <sup>1</sup>	Weight of goods and mineral traffic originating	Railway & Ancillary Businesses
					Gross receipts.	Expenditure.

1925 . . .	20,392	1,174·0	1,232·6	316·0	217·7	181·0
1926 . . .	20,396	1,172·1	1,069·0	215·6	188·3	169·1
1927 . . .	20,400	—	1,173·8	325·4	—	—

Tramways.—In 1923-24 there were in Great Britain 2,624 miles of tramways and light railways open for public traffic. The paid-up capital amounted to 91,293,791*l.*, gross receipts 29,433,347*l.*, working expenses 22,882,028*l.*, and net receipts 6,551,619*l.* The total number of passengers carried in 1923-24 was 4,448,326,581.

II.—CANALS AND NAVIGATIONS.

The total length of canals in the United Kingdom in 1905 was 4,673 miles, of which 3,641 miles were in England and Wales, 184 in Scotland, and 848 in Ireland.

The total tonnages originating on the principal canals<sup>1</sup> in Great Britain in 1926 were: Railway-owned canals, 1,712,716 tons; other than railway-owned, 11,249,524 tons, including Birmingham, 3,709,456 tons, Grand Junction, 1,420,655 tons, Leeds and Liverpool, 1,385,472 tons, and Bridgewater, 1,090,352 tons. Tonnage carried on the River Thames (above Teddington) was 342,691.

The Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1894, is 35½ miles in length, 80 ft. in depth to Stanlow Oil Dock, thence to Manchester it is 28 ft. deep. The bottom width of the canal is not less than 120 ft. except for ¾ mile near Latchford, where it is 90 ft. The maximum width of the locks is 65 ft., with the exception of the entrance lock, which is 80 feet wide. The canal is in direct communication with all the principal railway systems and barge canals of the Kingdom. The total paid-up capital of the Company at December 31, 1927, was 19,487,950*l.* The gross revenue of the canal in 1927, including the Bridgewater department and the railways, amounted to 2,193,039*l.*, and the net revenue, including miscellaneous receipts, to 947,057*l.* The traffic receipts in 1927 amounted to 1,576,237*l.* The merchandise traffic paying toll in 1927 amounted to 6,359,420 tons.

III.—POST, TELEGRAPHS, AND TELEPHONES.

(Great Britain and Northern Ireland).

Number of Post Offices (March 1928) 21,750, besides about 50,000 road and pillar letter boxes; staff employed January 1928, 227,784 persons (175,195 males, 52,589 females).

The telegraphs were transferred to the State on February 3, 1870. On March 31, 1927, the mileage of Post Office wires used for telegraph purposes was 288,641. The total mileage of Post Office wires, Telegraph, Telephone, and spare wires, was 6,902,113 miles. Of this total, 1,175,444 miles were aerial, 5,704,807 underground, and 21,862 submarine.

The total number of telegraph offices open on March 31, 1927 (including railway stations, etc., which transact public telegraph business), was 12,887. On February 1, 1928, there were 19 Post Office wireless stations in operation, and several 'stand by' stations for emergency purposes. The Marconi Company work certain stations under licence.

All telephone exchanges deal with trunk telephone business, but on March 31, 1927, there were 20 exchanges which dealt with trunk work only. On that date there were 14,008 trunk circuits containing 830,528 miles of wire; the number of calls during the year was 95,700,000. The London local exchange system had 112 exchanges, 4,724 Call Offices (including 465 kiosks), 1,989,574 miles of working wire, and 532,066 telephones. The Provincial local exchange system had 4,045 exchanges, 17,210 Call Offices (including 2,586 kiosks), 2,851,571 miles of working wire, and 976,720 telephones. The approximate number of effective originated calls in 1926-27 was 1,101 millions (436 millions in London). For private wires, the rentals in 1926-27 amounted to 456,000£.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The sovereign weighs 123·274 grains, or 7·9881 grammes, ·916 (or eleven-twelfths) fine, and consequently it contains 113·001 grains or 7·3224 grammes of fine gold. The shilling weighs 87·27 grains or 5·6552 grammes, and down to 1920 was ·925 (or thirty-seven fortieths) fine, thus containing 80·727 grains or 5·231 grammes of fine silver, but under the Coinage Act, 1920, the fineness was reduced to ·500 (one half). Bronze coins consist of a mixture of copper, tin, and zinc. The penny weighs 145·83 grains, or 9·45 grammes. The standard of value is gold. Silver is legal tender up to 40 shillings; bronze up to 12*d*., but farthings only up to 6*d*. Bank of England notes are legal tender in England and Wales, except at the Bank itself (3 and 4 Will. 4, cap. 98). The 1*l*. and 10*s*. Treasury Notes issued since the outbreak of the War are also legal tender. Under the Gold Standard Act, 1925, the issue of gold coin is suspended but bullion may be purchased at the price of 3*l*. 17*s*. 10½*d*. per ounce troy of gold of the fineness prescribed for gold coin by the Coinage Act, 1870. The note circulation at February 29, 1928, was: currency notes and certificates, 287,480,131*l*.; Bank of England notes, 135,349,460*l*.; total, 422,829,591*l*. The net circulation of Bank Notes (exclusive of Notes set aside on account of Currency Note redemption, included in previous total) was 79,099,460*l*. The total of Currency Notes and certificates excluding Notes called in but not cancelled was 286,220,800*l*. The amount of currency in June, 1914, was estimated at 128,000,000*l*. in circulation, and 75,000,000*l*. in banks; total, 203,000,000*l*. In December, 1919, the amount was estimated at 393,000,000*l*. in circulation, and 191,000,000*l*. in banks; total, 584,000,000*l*. The silver circulation at the end of 1920 was estimated at about 60,000,000*l*.

Standard units are: of length the standard yard, of weight the standard pound of 7,000 grains (the pound troy having 5,760 grains), of capacity the standard gallon containing 10 pounds avoirdupois of distilled water at 62° F., the barometer at 30 inches. On these units all other legal weights and measures are based.

NORTHERN IRELAND.

Constitution.

UNDER the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, as amended by the Irish Free State (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1922 (13 Geo. V. Ch. 2, Session 2), a separate parliament and executive government were established for Northern Ireland, which comprises the parliamentary counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry, and Tyrone, and the parliamentary boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry. The Parliament consists of a Senate of 2 ex-officio and 24 elected persons and a House of Commons of 52 elected members. An allowance for expenses is made in the case of those members of both Houses who are not in receipt of salaries as members of the Government or as officers of Parliament, amounting to (a) two guineas a day to members of the Senate for attendance at meetings of the Senate or committees, and to (b) 200*l.* a year to members of the House of Commons. The Parliament has power to legislate for its own area except in regard to (1) matters of Imperial concern (the Crown, making of peace or war, military, naval, and air forces, treaties, titles of honour, treason, naturalisation, domicile, external trade, submarine cables, wireless telegraphy, aerial navigation, lighthouses, etc., coinage, etc., trade marks, etc.), and (2) certain matters 'reserved' to the Imperial Parliament (postal service, Post Office and Trustee savings banks, designs for stamps, registration of deeds, land purchase). The executive power is vested in the Governor on behalf of His Majesty the King: he holds office for six years and is advised by ministers responsible to Parliament. Senators hold office for a fixed term of years: the House of Commons is to continue for five years, unless sooner dissolved. The qualifications for membership of the Parliament are similar to those for membership of the Imperial House of Commons, but power is given to the Northern Ireland Parliament to alter such qualifications after June 1924. Northern Ireland continues to return 13 members to the Imperial House of Commons. In case of a disagreement between the two Houses they are to have a joint sitting and decide the question at issue by an absolute majority.

The legislative and administrative powers relating to Railways, Fisheries, and the Contagious Diseases of Animals were, under the Ireland (Confirmation of Agreement) Act, 1925, transferred to, and became, as from April 1, 1926, powers of the Parliament and Government of Northern Ireland.

The Northern Irish Parliament met for the first time in June, 1921. At the election in April, 1925, there were returned 32 Unionists, 10 Nationalists, 4 Independent Unionists, 8 Labour, 2 Republicans and 1 Farmer.

Governor.—The Duke of Abercorn, appointed December 11, 1922. Salary, 8,000*l.* per year, payable from Imperial Revenues (2,000*l.* being recoverable from Northern Ireland Revenues).

The Ministry is composed as follows:—

Finance.—Rt. Hon. H. M. Pollock (salary, 2,000*l.*).

Home Affairs.—Rt. Hon. Sir R. Dawson Bates (salary, 2,000*l.*).

Labour.—Rt. Hon. J. M. Andrews (salary, 2,000*l.*).

Education.—Rt. Hon. Viscount Charlemont (salary, 2,000*l.*).

Agriculture.—Rt. Hon. E. M. Archdale (salary, 2,000*l.*).

Commerce.—Rt. Hon. J. Milne Barbour.

The usual channel of communication between the Government of Northern Ireland and the Imperial Government is the Home Office.

Local Government.

In the two chief cities, Belfast and Londonderry, local administration is vested in Corporations, who are responsible for roads, public health, rating, housing, lighting, etc.

In each of the six counties there is a County Council responsible for the construction and maintenance of roads and other public works, collection of rates, supervision of the arrangements for dealing with tuberculosis and special diseases; also of lunatic asylums, county infirmaries and county fever hospitals.

The counties are divided into thirty-two rural districts, in each of which is a Rural District Council, which is the sanitary authority for the district, and is also responsible for such matters as provision of labourers' cottages, burial grounds, etc. These Councils have also certain powers in regard to the formulation of proposals for construction and maintenance of roads. Urban District Councils to the number of thirty-two have been established in the majority of the towns in Northern Ireland. These Councils are road and sanitary authorities, and are responsible, amongst other things, for the cleaning and lighting of their towns.

The administration of poor relief and dispensary medical relief is vested in Boards of Guardians, which, in the majority of cases, are the Rural District Councils, but in a few cases their area extends over two Rural Districts. Their functions are confined to the administration of the poor law, vaccinations, registration of births, marriages and deaths, dispensary medical relief, and boarding-out of children.

Area and Population.

A census of Northern Ireland was taken on April 18, 1926. The area and population of the country at that date were as follows (the figures are provisional):—

Counties and County Boroughs.	Area in statute acres (exclusive of water).	Males.	Females.	Total.
Antrim . . . . .	702,850	92,600	99,018	191,618
Armagh . . . . .	312,772	53,635	56,448	110,083
Belfast C. B. . . . .	14,797	195,568	219,419	415,007
Down . . . . .	608,859	101,238	107,941	209,179
Fermanagh . . . . .	417,912	30,094	27,891	57,985
Londonderry Co. . . . .	512,495	47,127	47,384	94,511
Londonderry C. B. . . . .	2,198	20,783	24,361	45,164
Tyrone . . . . .	779,563	67,140	65,635	132,775
Northern Ireland . . . . .	3,351,440	608,205	648,117	1,256,322

The provisional estimated population of Northern Ireland at June 30, 1927, was 1,253,000.

The following statement shows the numbers of marriages, births and deaths registered in Northern Ireland in each of the four years 1923, 1924, 1925, and 1926:—

Year	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Year	Marriages	Births	Deaths
1923	7,974	30,097	18,796	1925	7,652	27,680	19,754

The principal religious professions in Northern Ireland, as recorded at the census of 1911, were: Roman Catholics, 430,161; Protestant Episcopalians, 327,076; Presbyterians, 395,039; Methodists, 45,942; Other professions, 52,313; Total, 1,250,531.

Instruction.

Under the Education Act (Northern Ireland), 1923, there has been set up a system of local control for all forms of education throughout Northern Ireland, which establishes the councils of counties and county boroughs as local education authorities.

The following are the latest available statistics for the Academic year 1926-27:—

University: The Queen's University of Belfast (founded in 1849 as a College of the Queen's University of Ireland, and reconstituted as an independent University in 1909), 111 Professors and Lecturers, and 1,236 students in 1927. Secondary Education: 70 schools with 9,012 pupils. Technical Instruction: 55 technical schools and 88 other centres with over 23,000 students. Elementary Education: 1,970 public elementary schools with 202,437 pupils on rolls.

Justice.

Under the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, a Supreme Court of Judicature of Northern Ireland has been established, consisting of the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland and the High Court of Justice in Northern Ireland. An appeal lies direct, in certain conditions, from the former to the House of Lords.

The Police Force consists of (a) the Royal Ulster Constabulary, with a statutory maximum strength of 3,000; and (b) the Special Constabulary, a temporary force.

Finance.

The bulk of the taxation of Northern Ireland is imposed and collected by the Imperial authorities, who make certain deductions and remit the balance to the Northern Irish Exchequer. The exact share of the latter in the proceeds of such taxation is determined by the Joint Exchequer Board, a special body consisting of one representative of the Imperial Treasury, one of the Northern Irish Treasury, and a chairman appointed by the King. The deductions made by the Treasury represent a contribution towards Imperial liabilities and expenditure, and the net cost to the Imperial Exchequer of Northern Irish services 'reserved' to the Imperial Parliament. The cost of these 'reserved' services, together with the Imperial contribution, represents about 40 per cent. of the total expenditure of Northern Ireland while the remaining 60 per cent. represents the cost of administration in the Province, including education, old age and blind persons' pensions, health and unemployment insurance, police, prisons, public works, agricultural development, commercial services, finance, etc. The Northern Irish Parliament has independent powers of taxation, except as regards customs duties, excise duties on articles manufactured and produced, excess profits duty, corporation profits tax, any tax on profits or a general tax on capital, or any tax substantially the same in character as any of these duties or taxes. It has no power to impose, charge or collect income tax, including super tax, but it can grant relief from these taxes to individuals resident and domiciled in Northern Ireland. The Northern Government also raises money, as required, by means of Ulster Savings Certificates and Treasury Bills, for the purpose of meeting temporary deficiencies of revenue and for advances to the Unemployment Fund. In October, 1925, a Government Loans Fund was established from which loans are made to local authorities and others for public utility services. This has been financed by issues amounting to 3,100,000*l.* Ulster Loans 4½% Stock, 1945-1975.

The revenue accruing to the Northern Irish Exchequer in 1926-27 amounted to 11,173,000*l.*, and the expenditure amounted to 11,137,000*l.* For the year 1927-28 the revenue is estimated to amount to 11,203,000*l.*, and the expenditure to an approximately equal sum.

Production.

Agriculture.—The acreage under crops in Northern Ireland in 1925 and 1926 was as follows:—

Crops.	1925	1926	Crops.	1925	1926
	Acres.	Acres.		Acres.	Acres.

The number of persons employed in 1924 was 2,412, in 1925 was 2,776, and in 1926 was 2,628 inclusive of those employed at coal mines.

Manufactures.—The two principal manufactures are linen and ship-building, both centred in Belfast. The former provides employment for approximately 110,000 persons, excluding those engaged in growing the fibre; 1,000,000 spindles, and 40,000 looms. The value of linens exported from the United Kingdom during 1926 was 10,018,528*l.*, practically the whole of which came from Northern Ireland. The Belfast shipyards employ approximately 20,000 persons, and possess an output capacity exceeding 250,000 tons a year. Other important manufactures are ropes and twines, tobacco, soaps, aerated waters, biscuits, spirits, hosiery and underwear.

National Insurance. Pensions.

Schemes of compulsory insurance on similar lines to those in force in Great Britain are in operation in Northern Ireland, and make provision for benefits during sickness and unemployment, and for pensions to persons over 65 years of age and to widows and orphans.

A general outline of the provisions of these schemes is set out in the paragraph dealing with 'National Insurance' in Great Britain. Arrangements are in force under which insured persons may move between Great Britain and Northern Ireland without loss of benefit. The number of persons in Northern Ireland insured under the various schemes is approximately: Health Insurance and Contributory Pensions, 330,000; Unemployment Insurance, 263,500.

Non-contributory Pensions.—Old Age Pensions (non-contributory) and Blind Persons' Pensions are granted to individuals who are not eligible for Contributory Pensions provided they have reached the age of 70 (50 in case of Blind Persons), and comply with certain conditions as regards British nationality and residence in the U.K.

The number of persons in Northern Ireland in receipt of non-contributory Pensions is approximately 41,900.

Communications.

The total railway mileage of Northern Ireland amounts to 765 miles. The area is also well served by inland waterways, and possesses 180 miles of canals. Total length of roads is 12,971 miles; road budget for year ending March 31, 1926, was 1,285,126*l.*

ISLE OF MAN.<sup>1</sup>

The Isle of Man is administered in accordance with its own laws by the Court of Tynwald, consisting of the Governor, appointed by the Crown; the Legislative Council, composed of the Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man, two Deemsters, the Attorney-General, two members appointed by the Governor, and four members elected by the House of Keys, total 11 members, including the Governor; and the House of Keys, a representative assembly of 24 members chosen on adult suffrage with six months residence for 5 years by the 6 'sheadings' or local sub-divisions, and the 4 municipalities. Women have the franchise as well as men. Number of voters 1926-27, 37,748. The island is not bound by Acts of the Imperial Parliament unless specially mentioned in them.

Lieut.-Governor.—Sir Claude H. A. Hill, K.C.S.I., C.I.E.

The principal towns are Douglas (population in 1924, 20,326), Ramsey (4,150), Peel (2,463), Castletown (1,880). Births (1925), 761; deaths, 787.

In 1925-26 there were 43 elementary schools, 40 being provided schools. The enrolled pupils numbered 5,800, and the average attendance 5,065. The gross expenditure of the Education Authority on elementary education for the year 1925-26, amounted to 66,434*l*. There are 2 secondary schools (835 registered pupils), and 9 evening classes (300 registered pupils). The gross expenditure on higher education for 1925-26 was 23,018*l*. In 1925 the police force numbered 65; in the year 1924 there were 998 persons convicted.

Revenue is derived mostly from Customs. In 1925-26 the revenue amounted to 298,484*l*.; and expenditure to 273,261*l*., of which 10,000*l*. was paid to the Imperial Exchequer as contribution from the Customs revenue. Public debt (1926) 65,667*l*.

The principal agricultural produce of the island consists of oats, barley, turnips and potatoes, and grasses. The total area of the island, excluding water, is 140,936 acres; the total area of arable land in 1926 was 62,420 acres and of permanent grass, 18,621 acres. The total acreage under corn crops in 1926 was 18,158 acres, including 17,449 under oats, 176 under wheat, and 451 under barley or bere. There were also 6,060 acres under turnips and swedes, 1,899 under potatoes, and 34,802 under clover, sainfoin and grasses under rotation. The number of agricultural holdings in 1926 was 1,411. The live stock in 1926 consisted of 3,819 horses; 18,734 cattle; 89,717 sheep; and 2,642 pigs. Total value of minerals raised in 1923, 47,496*l*. Persons employed in mining numbered 414. In 1924 there were belonging to the Isle of Man 70 fishing boats of an aggregate tonnage of 560 net tons.

The registered shipping (1925) comprised 13 sailing vessels (586 net tons) and 34 steamers (3,450 net tons) and 24 motor vessels (440 net tons); total tonnage 9,476 net tons. The tonnage of vessels arrived at ports of the island in 1925 was 965,348 net tons (878,967 tons coastwise), and departed 932,921 net tons (874,873 tons coastwise). The railways have a length of 46½ miles, and there are 25 miles of electric railway.

CHANNEL ISLANDS.<sup>1</sup>

The Channel Islands are administered according to their own laws and customs. Jersey has a separate legal existence; it is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Crown, and a Bailiff also appointed by the Crown. The Lieutenant-Governor has a veto on certain forms of legislation. He and the Crown officers may address the States but not vote. The qualification for a vote is the possession of a minimum value of 80*l*. real or 120*l*. personal property. The Royal Court consists of a tribunal of first instance and an appeal court. The States for deliberation and legislation consist of 12 Jurats, 12 rectors, 12 constables (who are the mayors of the parishes), 17 deputies, and 2 Crown officers. Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark are under one Lieutenant-Governor, but Guernsey and Alderney have a government of their own, and Sark is a dependency of Guernsey and under its jurisdiction. On May 10, 1905, a law was passed for the Island of Guernsey requiring the approval of the Lieut.-Governor and of the Royal Court of the Island previously to the acquisition, or leasing, or occupation of immovable property by aliens or alien companies, registration and liability to local rates, &c., being also provided for. The Channel Islands are not bound by Acts of the Imperial Parliament unless specially named in them.

Births: Jersey (1926), 867. Deaths: Jersey (1926), 709.

INDIA, THE DOMINIONS, COLONIES, PROTECTORATES, AND DEPENDENCIES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

In the following pages the various sections of the British Empire outside Gt. Britain and Northern Ireland are arranged in alphabetical order under the divisions of the world to which they belong:—1. Europe; 2. Asia; 3. Africa; 4. America; 5. Australasia and Oceania.

The term 'Dominion' is used officially as a convenient abbreviation of the complete designation 'self governing Dominion.' The Dominions are Australia, Canada, Irish Free State, Newfoundland, New Zealand, and South Africa.

The Imperial Conference of 1926 defined the Dominions as 'autonomous Communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or foreign affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.' The Conference further laid down that, as a consequence of this equality of status, the Governor-General of a Dominion 'is the representative of the Crown, holding in all essential respects the same position in relation to the administration of public affairs in the Dominion as is held by His Majesty the King in Great Britain,' and that 'it is the right of the Government of each Dominion to advise the Crown in all matters relating to its own affairs.' The Conference also recognised certain treaty-making rights as appertaining to the Dominions.

The term 'Colony' is an abbreviation of the official designation 'Colony not possessing responsible Government,' and includes all such Colonies whether or not they possess an elective Legislature, but does not include Protectorates or Protected States. The term 'Crown Colonies' is properly applicable only to those Colonies in which the Crown retains control of legislation.

Under the recent Peace Treaties certain ex-German and ex-Turkish territories are administered by parts of the British Empire under mandates approved by the League of Nations. These territories include Samoa, New Guinea, Iraq, Palestine, and parts of the former German Colonies in Africa.

Up to July, 1925, all sections of the British Empire outside of Great Britain and Ireland were dealt with by the Colonial Office. In that month a new Secretaryship of State, for Dominion Affairs, was created, and as a result the Dominions Office was set up, to take over from the Colonial Office business connected with the self-governing Dominions, the self-governing Colony of Southern Rhodesia, and the South African territories (Basutoland, Bechuanaland Protectorate, and Swaziland), including business relating to the Imperial Conference.

The Colonial Office now deals with the administrative work of the Colonies, Protectorates, and Mandated Territories other than those for which the Dominions Office is responsible. It contains seven Departments—the West Indian, Far Eastern, Ceylon and Mauritius, East African, Tanganyika and Somaliland, Nigeria, Gold Coast and Mediterranean—dealing with the affairs of various groups of Dependencies; a Middle Eastern Division, which was established in March, 1921, to conduct business relating to Iraq, Palestine, Aden, and Arab areas under British influence; and a General Department, which is concerned with correspondence of a general and miscellaneous character including questions of promotion, postal, telegraph, and copyright matters, international conventions and commercial treaties, Letters Patent and Commissions, etc.

EUROPE.

THE IRISH FREE STATE (SAORSTÁT ÉIREANN).

AN Act was passed in 1920 under which separate Parliaments were set up for "Southern Ireland" (26 counties) and "Northern Ireland" (6 counties). The Ulster Unionists accepted this scheme, and the Northern Parliament was duly elected on May 24, 1921, and opened by the King in person in the following June. The rest of Ireland, however, having proclaimed a Republic in January 1919 refused to work the Act. In December 1921 a treaty was signed with the British Government which was embodied in the Irish Free State (Agreement) Act, 1922. The Treaty contains the following provisions among others:—

Ireland to have the same constitutional status 'in the community of nations known as the British Empire' as the Self-Governing Dominions, and to be called the Irish Free State.

Its position in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government to be that of the Dominion of Canada, and the representative of the crown in Ireland to be appointed in like manner as the Governor-General of Canada.

The Irish Free State to undertake its own coastal defence, the defence by sea of Great Britain and Ireland being undertaken by the Imperial forces: these provisions to be reviewed at the expiration of five years. The Free State to afford, in time of 'war or strained relations' with other powers, such harbour and other facilities as the British Government may require. The establishment of the Irish defence force not to exceed such proportion to the British military establishment as the population of Ireland bears to the population of Great Britain.

The ports of Great Britain and of Ireland to be freely open to the ships of 'the other country' on payment of the customary dues.

By the Treaty 'Northern Ireland' was given the option of continuing its separate existence under the Act of 1920, subject to the award of a 'Boundary Commission.' On December 8, 1925, the British Government and the two Irish Governments signed an agreement by the terms of which the partition of 1920 continues in force as determined in that Act, the Boundary Commissions being discharged from the duty of delivering an Award.

By the same agreement the provisions of the Treaty relating to a Council of Ireland and that stipulating the liability of the Irish Free State for a share of the National Debt of the United Kingdom were cancelled.

Constitution.

Under the Treaty a Provisional Government was constituted on January 16, 1922, to carry on for a period of twelve months. In September 1922 the Provisional Parliament met as a Constituent Assembly to adopt a Constitution for the Irish Free State. This was passed on October 25, and duly enacted by the Imperial Parliament on December 4 (see the Irish Free State Constitution Act, 1922 [Session 2], 13 Geo. V. ch. 1). On December 6, 1922, the Constitution came into effect by Royal Proclamation.

The Constitution declares the Irish Free State to be a co-equal member of the Community of Nations forming the British Commonwealth, and that 'all powers of Government, and all authority, legislative, executive, and judicial, in Ireland are derived from the people of Ireland.' Every person domiciled within the area of the Free State on December 6, 1922, who was born in Ireland, or either of whose parents was born in Ireland, or who had been ordinarily resident within the area of the Free State for at least seven years, automatically became a citizen of the new State unless he or she elected not to accept such citizenship. The Irish language is declared to be the national language, but English is equally recognized as an official language. Liberty of person and the dwelling of the citizen are inviolable. There is to be no endowment of any religion. Freedom of religious opinion and the right of association are guaranteed. Elementary education is free.

The Legislature, known as the Oireachtas, consists of the King, a Chamber of Deputies (Dáil Eireann), and a Senate (Seanad Eireann). There must be at least one Session each year. Provision is to be made for payment of members, and there may be free travelling facilities. Legislative authority in respect of money bills is reserved to the Chamber alone, but the Senate may make recommendations. Other bills must be passed (or 'accepted') by both Houses, but if the Senate does not pass a bill within 270 days or other longer agreed period, after it has first been sent to the Senate by the Chamber, the bill shall be deemed to have passed both Houses in the form in which it was last passed by the Chamber. There may be a joint sitting of the two Houses, if required by the Senate, to debate, but not vote upon, a non-money bill. The Crown's Representative may refuse the King's Assent to any bill or reserve the bill for consideration, provided that the law, practice, and constitutional usage governing such cases in the Dominion of Canada are followed.

Provision is made for a Referendum of the people, on demand by a certain proportion of members of either House, in respect of any bill other than a money bill, or bills necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, or safety. Provision may also be made by the Legislature for the initiation by the people of proposals for laws or constitutional amendments.

Amendments of the Constitution made after eight years from the date of its first operation can only become law after submission to a Referendum of the people.

Save in the case of actual invasion, the Irish Free State is not to be committed to active participation in any war without the assent of the Oireachtas.

All members of the Oireachtas must take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution and of fidelity to the King. Citizens aged 21 and over, without distinction of sex, who comply with the prevailing electoral laws, can vote for members of Dáil Eireann, and take part in the Referendum and Initiative, and citizens aged 30 and over, who comply with such laws, can vote for members of Seanad Eireann. Each voter has only one vote for either House, and voting is by secret ballot.

Every citizen aged 21 and over, not otherwise disqualified, is eligible for election to the Dáil. Election is upon principles of Proportional Representation. The number of Deputies is fixed on a population basis, and is at present 153. Each University existing in 1922 is entitled to elect three Deputies. The General Election is to be held on the same day throughout the country, and the Dáil continues for four years, unless sooner dissolved.

The Senate consists of 60 members. To be eligible for membership, citizens must be at least 35 years of age and eligible for election to the Dáil. The members must be citizens who 'have done honour to the nation by reason of useful public service,' or who represent important aspects of the nation's life. The term of Office is normally to be 12 years. One-fourth of the members are to be chosen by the electors every three years from a panel chosen by the two Houses, all the elections to be on principles of Proportional Representation.

The first Senate consists of 30 members elected by Dáil Éireann and 30 nominated by the President of the Executive Council. Of the latter, 15 hold office for twelve years and 15 for six years. In 1924 an election was held, on the principles of Proportional Representation, to elect 19 members in accordance with Articles 32 and 34 of the Constitution.

A person may not be a member of both Houses.

The executive consists of a Council of not more than twelve nor less than five ministers. They must be members of the Dáil and responsible to it, and must include the President and Vice-President of the Council, and the Minister for Finance. The President is nominated by the Dáil. He nominates the Vice-President and other members of the Council, but the latter must be approved by the Dáil. Other ministers may be nominated by the Dáil, and are responsible to the Dáil alone; but the total number of ministers, including those in the Executive Council, must not exceed twelve. Every minister may speak in the Senate.

The Chairman of the Dáil receives a salary of 1,700*l.* a year; the Deputy-Chairman 1,000*l.*; members, except ministers and officials, 30*l.* a month, and free first-class railway facilities between Dublin and their constituencies.

The representative of the King is the Governor-General of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann).

The Free State Parliament met for the first time, as such, on December 6, 1922. General Elections took place subsequently in August 1923, June 1927, and September 1927. The state of the parties in October 1927 was: Cumann na nGaedhael (Government), 61; Feanna Fáil, 57; Labour, 13; Farmers, 6; Independent, 13; National League, 2; Total, 152. The Ceann Comhairle (Speaker) is not required by law to vacate his seat at a General Election.

The Executive Council is as follows (October 1927):—

President.—Liam T. MacCosgair (William T. Cosgrave).

Vice-President, Minister for Finance and Minister for Posts and Telegraphs.—Earnán de Blaghd (Ernest Blythe).

Minister for Defence.—Deasmhumhan MacGearailt (Desmond Fitzgerald).

Minister for Industry and Commerce and Minister for External Affairs.—Pádraig MacGiollagáin (Patrick McGilligan).

Minister for Education.—Sean O'Suilleabhain (J. Marcus O'Sullivan).

Minister for Lands and Agriculture.—Pádraig O hOgain (Patrick Hogan).

Minister for Local Government and Public Health.—Risteard Ua Maolchatha (Richard Mulcahy).

Minister for Fisheries.—Fionán O Loinsigh (Finian Lynch).

The President receives a salary of 2,500*l.* per year; and other ministers 1,700*l.*

The usual channel of communication with the British Government is the Dominions Office and the Department of External Affairs.

Local Government.

The Irish Free State is divided into 27 administrative Counties and 4 County Boroughs, and for each of these areas a Council is elected triennially by the Local Government electors. Each County Borough is an administrative County of itself. The area of the counties and the number of members vary considerably, e.g. Carlow County 221,465 statute acres and 26 members, and Cork County 1,841,035 statute acres and 68 members. The smaller area of the Rural District in the County ceased to be an administrative unit after the passing of the Local Government Act, 1925.

By this Act also a new classification of roads is introduced, and they will be distinguished in future as 'main,' 'county,' and 'urban' roads. Main roads will be declared by the Central Authority, and will be under the direct control of the County Councils, charges for construction, repair, and maintenance being spread equally over the whole county. County roads are roads in rural portions which are not main roads, and urban roads are roads in urban areas not main roads. This classification of roads, together with the power to prescribe the standard and quality of materials to be used in road construction, and to fix the plans for and types of road signs, is to be the basis for a system of uniformly good roads throughout the Free State.

County Boards of Health have been elected consisting of 10 persons, all members of the respective County Councils. The method of election provides for the representation of each area and particular interest. These provisions do not, however, apply to Dublin County, in which Rural Councils continue to function as heretofore. The question of the future government of Dublin County and City is at present (1926) the subject of investigation by a Commission.

Towns under Municipal Government include 4 County Boroughs, 5 Boroughs and 62 Urban Districts. The cities of Dublin, Cork, Limerick and Waterford are County Boroughs. Borough Councils and Urban District Councils are the local authorities for the purposes of the Public Health, Local Government and Housing Acts, and assess and levy rates. In a few small towns the local affairs are administered by a body of Commissioners appointed under the Towns Improvement Act, 1854, who have powers to discharge certain functions and levy a limited rate to defray the cost of administration.

The relief of the poor and destitute has until recently been administered by Boards of Guardians. It was commonly known as the Workhouse System and dated back to the year 1838. Workhouses have now been abolished, and a county system of administration is being established with the control vested in the County Councils and Committees thereof. Instead of a Workhouse in each Poor Law Union there will be provided in each County a Home for the aged and infirm poor, and, where necessary, hospitals properly equipped and in charge of a capable surgeon.

Elections to public bodies are held according to the principle of proportional representation. The franchise extends practically to all persons of either sex who are of full age and have during a qualifying period occupied as owners or tenants any land or premises in the area, except premises let as furnished lodgings. Any married woman of 30 years or over residing with her husband in premises in respect of which the husband is entitled to be registered as a local government elector is also qualified for the franchise. Women are eligible for election as members of all local government bodies in the same manner and on the same conditions as men.

Area and Population.

A census of population in the Irish Free State was taken in April, 1926. The following are the preliminary figures issued and are subject to revision.—

The population of the Dublin registration area (county borough of Dublin, and the urban districts of Rathmines and Rathgar, Penbrooke, Blackrock and Dún Laoghaire) was 419,156, according to the census of 1926.

The following are the births, deaths and marriages registered in the Irish Free State for 3 years:—

Years	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1924	68,402	45,180	14,822
1925	62,069	43,650	13,820
1926	61,176	41,740	13,570

Immigrants, 1926, 10,638; 1925, 10,113. Emigrants, 1926, 29,412; 1925, 30,895.

Religion.—The principal religious professions in what is now the Irish Free State, as recorded at the census of 1911, were as follows:—

—	Leinster	Munster	Ulster (3 counties)	Connaught	Total
Roman Catholics . . .	990,045	978,805	260,655	588,004	2,812,509

Total . . .	1,162,044	1,085,495	331,165	610,984	3,189,688

Instruction.—Elementary Education.—Elementary Education is free and is given in the National Schools, which are under local managers, but are subject to the control of the Department of Education.

Since the establishment of the Saorstát the Irish language has been included as an essential part of the curriculum for all National Schools, and special courses in Irish have been held each year. Approximately 6,200 teachers have already qualified to teach the language. The use of Irish as a medium of instruction in the schools has also largely increased.

The latest statistics available show that the number of schools in operation is 5,636, affording accommodation for 550,000 pupils. The number of pupils enrolled in the schools is 493,382; the percentage average daily attendance is 73·5; the number of teachers of all classes is approximately 13,000.

There are five State-aided Training Colleges. The number of qualified teachers issuing from the Colleges each year is approximately 320.

The estimated State expenditure on Elementary Education for the year 1927-28 is 3,605,852*l.*, excluding the cost of administration.

Secondary Education.—The Secondary or Intermediate Schools are under private control and are conducted in many cases by Religious Orders; all schools receiving grants from the State are open to inspection by inspectors of the Education Department. The number of recognised Secondary Schools during the school year 1925-26 was 284, and the number of pupils between the ages of 12 and 20 years in attendance was 25,510. A new scheme of Secondary Education was introduced at the beginning of the school year 1924-25, under which the schools are allowed considerable freedom in drawing up their programmes, and the grants paid to the schools are reckoned on a capitation basis. Estimated total expenditure for 1927-28, 272,600*l.*, excluding the cost of administration.

Technical Education.—Technical Schools are established in all the cities and in the principal towns. These schools are controlled by the local authorities, and are maintained partly by the rates and partly by State Grants.

Estimated total expenditure for Technical Education for 1927-28 is 197,800*l.* (taxes) and 60,000*l.* (rates).

University Education is given at the University of Dublin (Trinity College), founded in 1591, and at the National University of Ireland, founded in Dublin in 1909. The latter has three constituent colleges, namely, the University Colleges of Cork, Galway, and Dublin. The numbers of professors, &c., and students, in 1926-7, were as follows:—

Universities.	Professors and Lecturers.	Students.
Trinity College, Dublin . . . . .	99	1,147
University College, Cork . . . . .	45	471

Justice.

Justice is administered by Courts set up by the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, pursuant to the Constitution. They consist of a Supreme Court, a High Court, a Court of Criminal Appeal, a Central Criminal Court, a Circuit Court and a District Court.

The Supreme Court, which consists of the Chief Justice (who is ex-officio an additional Judge of the High Court) and two other Judges, has appellate jurisdiction from all decisions of the High Court. The High Court, which consists of a President (who is ex-officio an additional Judge of the Supreme Court of Appeal) and five ordinary Judges, has full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions, whether of law or fact, civil or criminal. In all cases in which questions arise touching the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of the Constitution, the High Court alone exercises original jurisdiction. The Court of Criminal Appeal consists of the Chief Justice or some other Judge of the Supreme Court and two ordinary Judges of the High Court. It deals with appeals by persons convicted on indictment where the appellant obtains a certificate from the trial Judge that the case is a fit one for appeal, or, in case such certificate is refused, where the Court itself, on appeal from such refusal, grants leave. Where leave to appeal is granted, the appeal is heard and determined by the Court of Criminal Appeal on the report of the official stenographer present at the trial, with power to the Court to hear further evidence or to refer any matter back for report by the trial Judge. The decisions of the Court of Criminal Appeal are final, unless that Court or the Attorney-General certifies that the decision involves a point of law of exceptional public importance, and that it is desirable that an appeal should be taken to the Supreme Court of Appeal. The Central Criminal Court consists of a Judge of the High Court, to whom is assigned, for the time being, the duty of acting as such Court. It is held at such times and in such places as the President of the High Court may direct, and at it are tried criminal cases which are outside the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court or which may be sent forward to it for trial from the Circuit Court.

The Saorstát is divided into eight Circuits, each of which is presided over by a Judge of the Circuit Court. The jurisdiction of this Court in civil proceedings is limited as to amount, save by consent of the parties, in which event the jurisdiction is unlimited. In criminal matters, it has jurisdiction in all cases save murder, attempt to murder, conspiracy to murder, high treason, treason felony, treasonable conspiracy or piracy.

The District Court consists of thirty-three Justices of the District Court. Three of such Justices are assigned to the Dublin Metropolitan area; the remainder of the country is divided into thirty districts, to each of which a Justice of the District Court is assigned. The District Court is a Court of summary jurisdiction with a small civil jurisdiction—in contract cases up to 25*l.*, and in cases of tort, with certain exceptions, up to 10*l.*

All Judges and Justices of the District Court are appointed by the Governor-General on the advice of the Executive Council.

The estimated tax revenue in 1927-28 includes: Customs, 6,779,000*l.*; excise, 6,611,000*l.*; estate, etc., duties, 1,100,000*l.*; stamp duties, 475,000*l.*; income tax, 3,750,000*l.*; super tax, 550,000*l.*; corporation profits tax, 300,000*l.*; motor vehicle duties, 650,000*l.* Particulars of the estimated Non-Tax Revenue are: Postal service, 1,198,000*l.*; telegraph service, 231,000*l.*; telephone service, 320,000*l.*; special rate under the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, 350,000*l.*; miscellaneous, 1,676,000*l.*

The estimated expenditure for 1927-28 includes: Debt charges, 1,170,000*l.*; old age pensions, 2,627,000*l.*; property losses compensation, 979,000*l.*; education, 4,533,000*l.*; army, 2,401,000*l.*

224,000*l.* issued to meet Capital Expenditure under the Telegraph Acts;
1,850,000*l.* for Shannon Electricity Development;
1,000,000*l.* for Road Fund;
530,450*l.* for repayment of Dáil Éireann Loan (Internal) of 1919-20;
979,180*l.* Property Losses Compensation. The aggregate amount of the items falling within the categories mentioned is approximately 9,500,000*l.*

Defence.

Article 46 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State lays it down that the Oireachtas has the exclusive right to regulate the raising and maintaining of the armed forces in the Irish Free State and the Oireachtas possesses control of every such force. The Executive Council is authorised by the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Acts, 1923 to 1927, to raise, train, equip, arm, pay and maintain an armed force consisting of such number of officers and men as may from time to time be provided by the Oireachtas.

The command in chief of, and all executive and administrative powers in relation to, the forces is by the Acts mentioned vested in the Executive Council and exercised through and in the name of the Minister for Defence. A Council of Defence is constituted by the 'Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924' to assist the Minister for Defence in the administration of the business of his Department. It consists of the Minister (Chairman), a Civil Member (a member of Dáil Éireann), and three military members, being the Chief of Staff, the Adjutant-General and the Quartermaster-General.

The Irish Free State is divided into seven military districts: the Curragh, Athlone, Limerick, Cork, Kilkenny, Dublin North and Dublin South Districts. The Curragh Camp is the principal training centre for all ranks. The total strength provided for is 928 commissioned officers and 11,922 non-commissioned officers and men. Infantry is organised in sixteen battalions. The remaining services are Air, Artillery, Armoured Car, Engineer, Signal, Military Police, Medical and Transport Corps, a School of Music, and a Military College.

Arrangements have been made for the establishment of a Reserve which will consist of officers of the Forces who have retired therefrom and non-commissioned officers and men who, having served in the Forces, have been transferred to the Reserve.

Coastal Defence.—In accordance with the Treaty between Great Britain and Ireland, the defence by sea of Great Britain and Ireland is undertaken by Imperial Forces. The question of Ireland undertaking a share of her own coastal defence is to be the subject of a Conference.

The estimated total expenditure for the financial year ending March, 1928, is 2,183,767*l*.

Production.

Agriculture.—General distribution of surface (in acres): crops and pasture, 12,181,242; grazed mountain, 2,124,590; woods and plantations, 248,878; other land, 2,464,445; total, 17,019,155.

The number of live-stock in 1927 was: cattle, 4,048,430; sheep, 3,120,637; pigs, 1,177,637; goats and kids, 185,810; horses, 428,614; mules and j-nnets, 19,066; asses, 196,425.

Fisheries.—The fishing industry represents a considerable factor in the national economy. Up to the present, however, most of the fishing has not been done on modern commercial principles; all classes of craft, from the steam trawler to the primitive curragh, being utilised.

The numbers of vessels, men, and boys engaged in fishing in the year 1926 were: 11 steam, 303 motor, 1,423 sail, and 2,571 row boats; total 4,308 vessels; men and boys, 14,020.

The quantities and values of fish landed during 1926 were: demersal fish, 95,132 cwts., value 151,585*l.*; pelagic fish, 458,648 cwts., value 204,579*l.*; shell fish, 100,088 cwts., value 75,708*l.*

The inland fisheries are a very important national asset, providing some of the finest salmon and trout fishing in the world. There are also lakes of a total area of some 400 square miles containing considerable quantities of coarse fish available for capture. Precise figures as to the quantity and value of salmon captured are not available, but they may be stated as being not less than 2,000 tons and 600,000*l.* respectively.

Commerce.

Less than a quarter of the value of the goods imported into the Irish Free State are dutiable goods. These include sugar and articles containing sugar, tobacco, beer, wine and spirits, motor cars and motor cycles and parts, musical instruments and parts, boots and shoes, matches, soap, candles, empty glass bottles and jars, apparel, blankets, furniture of wood, domestic woodware and bedsteads. In addition to these articles, protective duties were placed in 1926 on oatmeal and wireless sets and parts.

Value of imports and exports of merchandise (excluding bullion and specie and goods transhipped under bond) of the Irish Free State during the year ended December, 1926.

MALTA.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—General Sir John Du Cane, K.C.B.; appointed March 16, 1927.

Lieut.-Governor.—Sir Thomas Alexander Vans Best, K.B.E., C.M.G.

Malta was held in turn by Phœnicians, Greeks, Carthaginians and Romans, and was conquered by Arabs in 870. From 1090 it was joined to Sicily until 1530, when it was handed over to the Knights of St. John, who ruled until dispersed by Napoleon in 1798. The Maltese rose in rebellion against the French and the Island was subsequently blockaded by the British Fleet, aided by the Maltese, from 1798 to 1800, and with the free will of the Maltese was finally annexed to the British Crown by the Treaty of Paris in 1814. It is one of the most important ports of call in the world, and is the base and resort for repair and refitment of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Constitution—Under the Malta Constitution Letters Patent, 1921, there is an elected Legislature to control local affairs, consisting of a Senate (partly nominated) of 17 members, and a Legislative Assembly of 32 elected members. Elections are on a proportional representation basis. There is a responsible ministry, as follows:

Head of the Ministry and Minister for Police and Posts, unpaid.—Sir Gerald Strickland, G.C.M.G., M.P., LL.B., M.L.A., Count della Catena.

Minister for Public Health.—Prof. Robert V. Galea, L.S.A., M.L.A.

Minister for Public Instruction.—Prof. A. Bartolo, LL.D., B.Lit., F.R.Hist.S.

Minister for Justice.—Prof. Alfred Parnis, O.B.E., LL.D., M.L.A.

Minister for Industry and Commerce.—Walter Salomone, M.L.A.

Minister for Public Works.—Edwin P. Vassallo, L.S.A., M.L.A.

Minister for the Treasury.—Col. A. Samut, C.B., C.M.G., F.R.G.S.

Certain 'reserved' matters, including control of naval, military and air forces, Imperial interests, external trade, coinage, immigration, treaties, and relations with foreign States, are dealt with by the Governor, who is assisted by two Councils—an Executive Council consisting of such ministers as he selects, and a 'Nominated Council,' consisting of the Lieutenant-Governor, a Legal Adviser, and three officers of the navy, army, and air force.

The English language, as the official language of the British Empire, and the Italian language, as the established language of record of the Courts of Law, are the official languages of Malta. The English language is the official language of administration, and all official records and public documents and all notices of general public importance or interest issued by the Malta Government are in that language, without prejudice, however, to the use of Italian as a second official language of administration accompanying the British text in such records, documents and notices in so far as may be found desirable and convenient. Both languages are recognised as equal languages of culture in the University, in Secondary Schools and in the higher classes of Elementary Schools, as subjects of study.

Of the total imports in 1926, 1,043,370*l*. came from the U.K., 303,183*l*. from British possessions, and 3,142,504*l*. from foreign countries. Of the total exports, 31,59*l*. went to U.K. and 2,515*l*. to the Colonies.

Vessels entered, 1926. 2,787 of 3,513,891 tons, including 882 British of 1,576,374 tons. Belonging to the port of Valletta on January 1, 1926, were 3 sailing vessels of a gross tonnage of 484, and 11 steamers of 5,153 tons gross.

Communications, &c.—Railway, 7½ miles of metre gauge (belonging to and worked by the local government); telephones, 785 miles of wire. The Post-office traffic in 1926–27 was: Inland letters and postcards, 1,231,900; newspapers, &c., 779,000; foreign correspondence received, letters, 1,185,200; postcards, 110,600; newspapers, &c., 721,100; dispatched, letters, 2,356,300; postcards, 125,900; newspapers, &c., 160,600; parcels, received 74,197; dispatched 12,787.

Money.—British coins and British Treasury currency notes are the legal tender. The amount of British Treasury currency notes in circulation on March 31, 1927, was roughly estimated at 800,000*l*. There is a small issue of notes of the Anglo-Maltese Bank and the Banco di Malta; but as the Banks are not under statutory control and do not publish balance sheets the amount of the note circulation is not known. There are 6 banks.

ASIA.

ADEN, PERIM, SOKOTRA, AND KURIA MURIA ISLANDS.

ADEN is a volcanic peninsula on the Arabian coast, about 100 miles east of Bab-el-Mandeb. It forms an important coaling-station on the highway to the East, and is fortified. The settlement includes Little Aden, a peninsula very similar to Aden itself, and the settlement and town of Shaikh Othmán on the mainland, with the villages of Imad and Hiswa.

In April, 1905, after demarcation of the frontier, Ottoman and British Commissioners signed an agreement which determines the boundary of the hinterland from Sheikh Murad on the Red Sea to Bana river, and thence north-east to the great Desert. By the Anglo-Turkish Convention of 1914, the boundary was prolonged through the desert to a point on the coast opposite Bahrein in the Persian Gulf. The territories of the Imam of San'ā now march with the border-line demarcated by a Mixed Commission (Anglo-Turkish) in 1902-4. The Settlement also includes the island of Perim at the entrance to the Red Sea, and is subject to the Bombay Government. The Government is administered by a Political Resident (who is also General Officer Commanding the troops) with four assistants. The departments of the Aden Settlement (Municipal) and the Port Trust are supervised by an officer of the P. W. Department, Bombay. The India Office exercises internal administrative control (through the Government of India); the Colonial Office (Middle East Department) is responsible for political questions, and the War Office in London for military questions.

Political Resident and General Officer Commanding.—Major-General J. H. K. Stewart, K.C.B., D.S.O.

Area 75 square miles; including the Protectorate, about 9,000 square miles; of Perim, 5 square miles. Population of Aden and Perim in 1921, 54,923 (36,878 males and 18,045 females), against 46,165 in 1911.

The only Government revenue is from duties on liquor, opium, and salt, and from income tax, court fees and judicial fines; local taxes go to the Aden Settlement Fund. There is a Port Trust. The gross revenue of the settlement in 1926-27 was Rs. 7,01,390. Imports (1926-27), by sea, Rs. 7,41,64,487; by land, Rs. 27,82,835; treasure (sea and land), Rs. 111,13,581; total imports, Rs. 8,80,60,903 (total, 1925-26, Rs. 8,98,19,456). Chief imports: Cotton piece goods, grain, hides and skins, tobacco, coal, coffee, sugar, fruits, vegetables, and other provisions. Exports, by sea, Rs. 6,62,18,261; by land, Rs. 28,52,791; treasure (sea and land), Rs. 1,04,69,066; total exports, Rs. 6,95,40,118 (total, 1925-26, Rs. 7,52,67,613). Chief exports: Coffee, gums, hides and skins, cotton goods, tobacco, grain and pulse, provisions and sugar. These statistics are exclusive of government stores and treasure. In 1926-27, 1,496 merchant vessels of 5,291,617 tons

(net) entered the port of Aden, of which 761 were British; in the same year 883 country (local) craft of 29,734 tons entered. At Perim 624 vessels entered, of which 38 were Government vessels. Aden itself produces little, its chief industries being the manufacture of salt and cigarettes. The trade is largely a transshipment one, and is divided into foreign, Indian, and inland. There is a branch of the National Bank of India, Limited, and there is also one firm of private bankers.

A railway was constructed in the Great War for military purposes from Aden to Lahej, 26 miles, and has since been extended to Habil, 8 miles beyond Lahej. The gauge is one metre.

The island of Sokotra (Hadibu alias Taharida) off the coast of Africa is under British protection, and the Kuria Muria islands, off the coast of Arabia, are attached to Aden. Area of former, 1,382 square miles. Population about 12,000, mostly pastoral and migratory inland, fishing on the coast. Religion, at one time Christian, Mohammedan since the end of the 17th century. The island came under British protection in 1876, by treaty with the Sultan. Chief products, dates and various gums; sheep, cattle, and goats are plentiful; butter is exported. The Kuria Muria Islands, five in number, were ceded by the Sultan of Muskat for the purpose of landing the Red Sea cable.

BAHRAIN ISLANDS.

The Bahrain islands form an archipelago in the Persian Gulf 20 miles off al Hasa on the Arabian coast. Bahrain, the largest island, is 27 miles long and 10 miles wide. About a twentieth part of its area is cultivated. Other islands are Maharaq, to the north-east of Bahrain, 4 miles long and  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile wide; Sitra, to the east, 3 miles long and 1 mile wide; Nebi Saleh, about 2 miles in circumference, and several uninhabited islets. The islands are low lying, the highest ground being a hill in the centre of Bahrain 400 feet high.

The Ruling Family, the Al Khalifa, came originally from the neighbourhood of Kuwait and occupied Bahrain, which was then in the hands of the Persians, in 1782. The present chief, Sir Isa bin Ali al Khalifa, K.C.I.E., O.S.I., became the Ruling Shaikh in 1869. In 1923, owing to his advanced age, he handed over the active conduct of affairs to his eldest son and heir-apparent, Shaikh Hamad bin Isa al Khalifa. The Ruler is in treaty relations with the Government of India, who are represented by a Political Agent.

The total population is estimated at about 100,000, of which three-quarters are the original inhabitants of the islands, of the Shia sect, the remainder, including the Ruling Family, being Sunnis. The Sunnis live mainly in the towns of Manama and Maharaq. There is a wealthy Persian community in Manama and a number of Indian merchants.

Manama, the capital and commercial centre, extends for  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles along the shore. There are stone wharves and a pier, but at low tide the pier can only be reached in a light skiff. Manama contains two hospitals, schools, a branch of the Eastern Bank, Post Office, wireless station, and the official residence of the Ruler. Wide roads connect the various quarters of the town. There is a municipal council in Manama and also in the town of Maharaq, on the adjacent island. The two islands are connected by a service of motor launches, which also ply to the mainland. The population of Manama is about 25,000 and that of Maharaq is about the same. There is a community of some 20 Europeans in Manama, including members of the Dutch Reformed Church Mission. Water in the two towns is supplied by artesian wells and nearly 200 fresh-water springs on the various islands are used for irrigation. Motor traffic is in use and roads exist between the towns and villages, which number about 100.

In the centre of Bahrain island there are many thousands of ancient tumuli whose origin is still uncertain.

Bahrain is the centre of the famous pearl fishing industry of the Persian Gulf. Over 500 boats and 15,000 divers from Bahrain are engaged in fishing during four months of the summer. During the season Bahrain is visited by numerous Arab and continental pearl buyers from Europe. Other industries are: boat-building, manufacture of sailcloth and reed mats, date cultivation and breeding of particularly fine white donkeys.

The greater part of the trade of Nejd and Hassa passes through Bahrain. The revenue of the State is obtained from the 5 per cent. ad valorem Customs Duty.

In 1926, the total imports amounted to 963,822*l.*; and exports to 688,262*l.* The chief imports were: rice, 349,913*l.*; wheat, 20,049*l.*; wheat flour, 31,934*l.*; sugar, 51,237*l.*; loaf sugar, 48,214*l.*; coffee, 105,128*l.*; tea, 51,681*l.*; ghee, 46,639*l.*; piecegoods, 259,027*l.* The chief exports were: rice, 200,298*l.*; wheat, 10,753*l.*; wheat flour, 7,688*l.*; sugar, 43,168*l.*; loaf sugar, 35,629*l.*; coffee, 35,478*l.*; tea, 20,459*l.*; piecegoods, 167,597*l.*; pearls, 167,192*l.*

There is a weekly mail service from India and a bi-weekly service to India. Import of arms and ammunition is subject to special permission.

The principal coins in use are Indian rupees, but Austrian (Maria Theresa) dollars (worth 1*s.* 11*d.*) and Turkish liras (worth about 1*s.*) are current. The measures employed are: dhara (= 19 inches). The weights are: roba (4 lbs.); maund (56 lbs.) and ruffa (560 lbs.).

BORNEO (BRITISH).

British North Borneo.—Governor.—J. L. Humphreys, C.B.E.

British North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island of Borneo. The interior is mountainous, Mount Kinabalu being 13,455 feet high.

Area, about 31,106 square miles, with a coast-line of over 900 miles.

Population (1921 census) 257,804, consisting mainly of Mohammedan settlers on the coast and aboriginal tribes inland. The Europeans numbered 533; Eurasians, 213; Chinese, 37,856; Malays, 20,263. The number of natives was 197,058. The most numerous are the Dusuns, 112,287; the Muruts, 37,447; and the Bajaus, 33,070. Chief towns, Sandakan (population 11,936), on the east coast, and Jesselton, on the west coast.

The territory is under the jurisdiction of the British North Borneo Company, being held under grants from the Sultans of Brunei and Sulu (Royal Charter in 1881). It is administered by a Governor (appointed with the approval of the Secretary of State) in Borneo, and a Court of Directors in London, appointed under the Charter. On May 12, 1888, the British Government proclaimed a formal protectorate over the State of North Borneo. In 1898 certain border lands were acquired from the Sultan of Brunei, and more recently certain inland territories have been occupied. For administrative purposes the whole country is divided into five Residencies, which are sub-divided into Districts. In December 1904, an area of about 200 square miles was transferred to Sarawak in exchange for rights over coal mines on Brunei Bay.

There are Protestant and Catholic missions. The laws are based on the Indian Penal, Criminal, and Civil Procedure Codes, and local Ordinances. There is an Imam's Court for Mohammedan law. Native and Indian constabulary, 800 men under European officers.

Sources of revenue: Opium, birds' nests, court fees, stamp duties, licences, import and export duties, royalties, land sales, &c. No public debt.

Most of the trade is carried on through Singapore and Hong Kong with Great Britain and the colonies. The chief products are timber, sago, rice, coconuts, gums, coffee, many fruits, nutmegs, cinnamon, pepper, gambier, gutta-percha, rubber, camphor, rattans, tapioca, sweet potatoes, and tobacco, which is being planted on a large scale. Coal, iron, gold, and mineral oil have been found. The exports comprise the products mentioned, with birds' nests, seed pearls, bêche-de-mer, &c. Exports of leaf tobacco: 1926, 136,013% ; 1925, 145,154% ; of Estate rubber, 1926, 1,261,981% ; 1925, 1,397,561% ; of timber, which is the greatest natural resource of the country, 1926, 160,815% ; 1925, 162,536% . Total value in 1917 of exports to the United Kingdom, 384,506% ; imports, 73,328% . Merchant Shipping (Men-of-War and Government vessels excluded): 1925, entered 331,954 tons, 1926, entered 429,126 tons ; and cleared 433,995 tons.

A railway, 127 miles, runs from Jesselton on Gaya Bay to Melalap in the interior, with a branch from Beaufort to Weston on Brunei Bay. There is communication by telegraphy, telephone, and wireless telegraphy.

At Jesselton and Sandakan there are agencies of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, and the Bank of Taiwan. A State Bank has been established, with Head Office in Sandakan and a branch at Jesselton.

The Government issues its own copper coinage (cents and half-cents); nickel coinage of 1 and 5 cents; also notes of one, five, ten, and twenty-five dollars, and of 25 and 50 cents. Accounts are kept in dollar currency.

Brunei.—In 1888 the neighbouring territories on the north-west coast of Borneo, Brunei and Sarawak, were placed under British protection. On January 2, 1906, by treaty, the Sultan of Brunei handed over the general administration of his State to a British Resident. The present Sultan Ahmed Tajudin Akhazul Khairi Wad-din is a minor, and succeeded to the throne on the death of his father in September 1924. The Pengiran Bendahara and Pengiran Pemancha were appointed Joint Regents during his minority. The Sultan receives an allowance of 1,400*l.* a year from State funds, and his two principal ministers 700*l.* a year each. Area about 2,500 square miles, and population, 1921 Census, 25,444 (Europeans, 35; Malays and Bornean races, 23,938; Chinese, 1,434; Indians, 37). The chief town is Brunei (pop. 12,000). The old town is built over the water on the Brunei river, and a new town has developed on the mainland since 1910. There were five vernacular schools in 1926, with 190 pupils. Police force, 1925, 1 Chief Inspector, and 60 non-commissioned officers and men. The climate is hot and moist, with cool nights. Average annual rainfall is a little over 100 inches. The native industries in Brunei town include boat building, cloth weaving, brass foundries, and manufacture of silver ware. The principal products are cutch (mangrove extract), rubber, jelutong, and sago. Most of the interior is under jungle, comprising numerous kinds of serviceable timber. There is abundant evidence of oil, but it has not yet been found in payable quantities. There are vernacular schools at Brunei, and in some out-districts.

The post office dealt with 53,683 articles in 1926.

There is a central Wireless Station at Brunei, and a subsidiary station at Labuan, which enable telegraphic communication to be maintained with Labuan and thence by cable with Singapore and Europe. There is also a Wireless Station in the Temburong District and another in the Belait District.

The distance from Labuan is about 43 miles. Communication by steam launches from Brunei is regularly maintained. The passage between Singapore and Labuan takes about 4 days.

Straits Settlements Currency, 1 dollar = 2*s.* 4*d.*

British Resident.—E. E. F. Pretty.

Sarawak.—Area about 42,000 square miles, coast line 400 miles, many rivers navigable. The government of part of the present territory was obtained in 1842 by Sir James Brooke from the Sultan of Brunei. Various accessions were made between 1861 and 1905. Under an agreement of 1888 Sarawak is recognised as an independent State under the protection of Great Britain. The present Rajah, H.H. Charles Vyner Brooke, succeeded May 17, 1917.

Population estimated at about 600,000, Malays, Dyaks, Kayans, Kenyahs, and Muruts, with Chinese and other settlers. The chief towns are the capital, Kuching, about 23 miles inland, on the Sarawak River, Sibü, 60 miles up the Rejang River, which is navigable by large steamers, and Miri, the headquarters of the Sarawak Oilfields, Ltd. At Kuching are Church of England and Catholic missions with schools. The revenue is derived chiefly from Customs, the Govt. opium monopoly, gambling, arrack and pawn farms, royalty on oil land revenue, timber royalty, exemption tax payable by Malays, and from Dyak and Kayan revenue. The revenue in 1925 was 594,868*l.*; expenditure, 455,012*l.* Public debt, nil. Coal exists in large quantities. A considerable oil field is being developed at Miri and Bakong in the Baram district. Foreign trade, 1925: imports, 21,072,884 dollars; exports, 56,011,036 dollars. The chief exports (1925) included (in dollars) sago flour, 1,908,077; pepper, 1,172,374; gold, 24,808; plantation rubber, 23,162,872; gutta jelutong, 1,502,794; gutta percha, 110,501; cutch, 392,296; benzine, 14,025,511; kerosene, 6,150,155; liquid oil fuel, 3,460,022; crude oil, 2,017,202; fish, 254,555; damar, 160,885. The trade is mostly with Singapore. Shipping entered and cleared in the foreign trade, 1925, 1,204,699 tons. There are military and police forces, consisting of about 700 men, principally Dyaks and Malays, under British army officers. Round Kuching are about 45 miles of roads, besides bridle paths. There are 32 post offices. The Government offices have a telephone system extending over Kuching and Upper Sarawak, and there is communication by wireless with Singapore, &c. There are also wireless stations at Kuching, Kuching (6th mile), Miri, Sibü, Sadong, Lundu, Mukah, Simanggang, Bintulu, Binatang, Kapit, Selalang, Limbang, Baram, Saratok, Matu, Belangian, Tatau, Lawas. Distance from London, 8,700 miles; transit, not less than 30 days, generally more. Telegrams are sent by wireless from Singapore.

CEYLON.

Constitution and Government, &c.

Ceylon, the ancient Taprobane (Tamraparni, the island of "dusky leaves"), is an island in the Indian Ocean, by the south of India, lying between 5° 55' and 9° 50' N. lat., and 79° 42' and 81° 53' E. long. Its area is 25,332 square miles.

The authentic history of Ceylon begins in the sixth century B.C., when an invasion of Hindus from Northern India established the Sinhalese dynasty. As a result of many generations of warfare the northern districts were occupied by Tamils from South India, and the population of these districts is almost wholly Tamil, and mainly Hindu in religion.

In 1505 the Portuguese formed settlements on the west and south, which were taken from them about the middle of the next century by the Dutch. In 1796 the British Government annexed the foreign settlements to the Presidency of Madras; in 1802 Ceylon was separated from India and formed into a Crown colony.

According to the terms of the Constitution established in 1833, modified on various occasions, and now embodied in the Order in Council dated 19 December, 1923, the administration is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of nine members—viz. the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Controller of Revenue, the Colonial Treasurer, one official and four unofficial members nominated by the Governor, and a Legislative Council of 49 members (12 official and 37 unofficial) exclusive of the Governor. Of the unofficial members, 23 are elected to represent territorial divisions, 2 to represent the Europeans, 2 the Burgher Community, 1 the Chamber of Commerce, 1 the Western Province Tamils, 3 the Muslims, 2 the Indians. The remaining 3 are nominated by the Governor to represent Special Interests.

Governor.—Sir Herbert James Stanley, K.C.M.G. (1927). Salary 7,000*l.* (including entertainment allowance of 1,500*l.*).

For purposes of general administration, the island is divided into nine provinces, presided over by Government Agents, with assistants and subordinate head men. There are three municipalities, with eight Urban District Councils and fourteen local boards, mainly for sanitary purposes.

Area and Population.

The population of Ceylon (exclusive of the military and the shipping) at the Census held on March 18, 1921, showed an increase of 9·6 per cent. since 1911. The distribution by Provinces, and the average number of persons per square mile in each Province, are shown in the following table:—

Provinces	Area: English sq. miles	Population, 1921		Provinces	Area: English sq. miles	Population, 1921
		Total	Per sq. mile			Total	Per sq. mile

Of the population (exclusive of the military and the shipping) enumerated at the census of 1921, the occupation of 2,803,056 or 62·3 per cent. (of whom 1,347,415 were earners and 1,455,641 dependants) was returned as agriculture; 583,400 or 11·9 per cent. (288,697 earners, 244,703 dependants) industrial occupation; 345,824 or 7·7 per cent. (162,376 earners, 183,448 dependants) trade.

The population on the principal estates, mainly consisting of immigrant Tamils from Southern India, numbered, at the census of 1921, 568,850, and formed 12·6 per cent. of the total population. The Indian Tamils on Estates numbered 493,944.

Marriages registered, 1926, 28,756<sup>1</sup>; births registered, 206,888 (105,209 males and 101,679 females); deaths registered, 124,884 (62,899 males and 61,985 females).

The urban population is 12·9 per cent. of the total population. The principal towns and their population (exclusive of the military, shipping, and estates), according to the census of 1921, are :—Colombo, 244,163; Galle, 39,073; Jaffna, 42,436; Kandy, 32,562.

Religion and Instruction.

At the census of 1921 the numbers of adherents to the principal religions were :—Buddhists, 2,769,805; Hindus, 982,073; Muslims, 302,532; Christians, 443,400, exclusive of the military and the shipping.

Buddhism was introduced from India in the third century B.C., and is still the religion of the majority of the inhabitants, especially in the southern part of the island. It is (unlike Buddhism in Tibet, China, and Japan) materialistic and atheistic, and in popular usage has a large admixture of the doctrines and practices of popular Hinduism and of the aboriginal wild tribes.

Education is under a separate Government department. It is free in vernacular schools, but fees are charged in English schools.

The number of vernacular schools in 1926 was: Government schools, 1,101 (attendance, 118,137 boys and 54,778 girls); Aided schools, 1,821<sup>2</sup> (attendance, 129,990 boys and 88,302 girls); Unaided schools, 1,085 (attendance, 16,485 boys and 7,024 girls). There were also 384 English and Anglo-vernacular schools, attended by 57,225 boys and 16,698 girls.

The total sum spent by Government on vernacular education in 1925-26 was 3,286,452 rupees.

The Royal College and the Government Training College with the English school attached to it are Government institutions. The other English schools are grant-in-aid schools; the total grants to which in 1925-26 amounted to 1,385,466 rupees. The Government also awards six scholarships of 300*l.* each a year, two tenable for three years and four for two years, with outfit allowances of 50*l.* each and free passages, to enable the best six students of each year to complete their course of education in England. There are several other scholarships given locally. A University College was opened in January, 1921. The total number of students on the roll on December 31, 1926, was 290. Technical education is given in the 'Technical Schools' (489 students in 1926). There are 88 industrial schools.

Justice, Crime, and Pauperism.

The law is Roman-Dutch, modified by colonial ordinances. Kandyan Law is to a certain extent in force in the Kandyan Provinces, and special systems of personal law are recognised for the Muslim community, and for the Tamils of the Jaffna District. The criminal law has been codified on the principle of the Indian Penal Code. There are a Supreme Court, police courts and courts of requests, and district courts, intermediate between the latter and the Supreme Court. Village councils deal with petty offences. In 1926 the number of cases instituted in the police courts and municipal magistrates' courts was 108,250. Offences against the Penal Code dealt with during the year 1926 numbered 16,377; of these, the number disposed of by the courts as true cases was 11,716, and the convictions 5,106; 8,171 convicted persons were sent to prison. Police force, December 31, 1926, 3,096 of all ranks.

There is no poor law, though a few old persons receive a charitable allowance from the Government varying from Re. 1 to Rs. 12.50 each per mensem.

The principal items of expenditure in 1925-26: Military expenditure, 127,256*l.*; pensions and retired allowances, 321,636*l.*; interest and sinking fund on loans, 857,908*l.*; post and telegraph, 375,629*l.*; railway department, 1,235,672*l.*; medical department, 567,997*l.*; education, 481,892*l.*; on public works (annually recurrent), 579,202*l.*; railway department (extraordinary works), 272,964*l.*

The net public debt on September 30, 1926, incurred entirely for public works, was 12,666,893*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* sterling and 3,000,000 rupees. There were accumulated sinking funds for their redemption amounting to 3,629,031*l.* and Rs. 1,681,546.54 respectively.

Defence.

The harbour of Colombo, on the west, is protected.

In normal times Ceylon pays three-fourths of the cost of the Imperial garrison. At present the defence of the Colony is almost entirely in the hands of local troops.

Production and Industry.

The area of the colony is 16,212,400 acres, of which it is estimated that about 3,000,000 acres are under cultivation, and about 456,000 acres pasture land. The approximate areas under the principal products in 1925 were: paddy, 834,000 acres; other grain, 104,000 acres; cacao, 35,000 acres; cinnamon, 25,000 acres; tea, 442,000 acres; coconuts, 883,000 acres; rubber, 475,000 acres. In 1926, the exports of tea were 217 million lbs., of which 142 million lbs. were sent to the United Kingdom. The exports of desiccated coconuts were 754,000 cwts., copra, 2,400,000 cwts., and coconut-oil, 570,000 cwts. In the same year, 131,840,500 lbs. of rubber were exported, of which 40,806,600 lbs. went to the United Kingdom and 81,625,400 lbs. to the United States of America. In 1926, 18,560 acres of crown land were sold and settled. The live stock in 1926 was reported to amount to 1,500 horses, 1,537,000 horned cattle, 62,000 sheep, 48,000 swine, and 183,000 goats. There is a Government Dairy, possessing over 300 head of cattle. There were 65 plumbago mines working at end of 1926. The exports of plumbago in 1926 were 232,000 cwts. Other minerals, such as gold, thorium, and monazite, exist, but, except the last-named, so far have not been found in quantities of commercial importance. There are some hundreds of small-gem quarries, from which sapphires, rubies, moonstones, catseyes, and other gems are obtained. Native manufactures, which are at present of very minor importance, are weaving, basket work, tortoise-shell boxes, &c., earthenwares, jewellery, metal work, lacquer work, carving, &c. Manufactures on any large scale are confined to the products of agriculture, such as the production of coconut oil. In 1926 there were about 1,300 tea, rubber and cacao factories, 1,500 cinnamon, citronella, coconut, fibre, oil, &c., factories, 20 saw mills, and 50 aerated water, ice, &c., factories.

Commerce.

The values of the imports and exports for six years are given in the following table (Rate of Conversion: 1*l.* = Rs. 15):—

CYPRUS.

Governor.—Sir Ronald Storrs, C.M.G., C.B.E. Salary, 3,600*l.*, of which amount 600*l.* is payable to the officer from time to time administering the Government.

Constitution and Government.—Cyprus is 40 miles from the coast of Asia Minor and 60 from the coast of Syria. At a very early date important Greek and Phœnician colonies were established in Cyprus, and later it formed part of the Persian and Roman Empires. Its government frequently changed hands until 1571, when the Turks conquered the island from the Venetians, and retained possession of it until its cession to England for administrative purposes under a convention concluded with the Sultan at Constantinople, June 4, 1878. On the outbreak of hostilities with Turkey on November 5, 1914, the island was annexed. On May 1, 1925, the Island was given the status of a colony by Letters Patent, and the High Commissioner became Governor. There is an Executive Council, consisting of the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, and the Treasurer, with three locally resident additional members. The Legislature consists of twenty-four members, nine being office holders, including the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General and the Treasurer, and fifteen elected (for five years), three by Mohammedan and twelve by non-Mohammedan voters. The voters are all male British subjects, or foreigners twenty-one years of age, who have resided five years, and are payers of any of the taxes known as 'Verghis.' Municipal councils exist in the principal towns, elected practically by all resident householders and ratepayers. Those eligible to the council must be voters rated upon property of the annual value of from 10*l.* to 20*l.*, according to population.

Area and Population.—Area 3,584 square miles. Population at 1921 Census: 310,709, including 61,422 Mohammedans. Population, Census 1911:—Mohammedans (Ottoman Turks), 56,428; Christians (Autocephalous Church of Cyprus), 214,480; others, 3,200; total, 274,108. Inhabitants per square mile, 76·48. Births registered 1925, 7,803; deaths, 4,769.

The principal towns are Nicosia (the capital), 18,461; Larnaca, 10,652; Limasol, 11,843; Famagusta and Varoshia, 6,127; Paphos and Ktema, 3,946; Kyrenia, 1,986. There are six administrative districts named after these towns.

Instruction.—The system of elementary education is designed so that each race has its own schools. Besides elementary schools there were in 1925 4 Gymnasiums, a commercial Lyceum, 8 Greek high schools for boys and 4 high schools for girls, a Priests' Training School, and two Moslem high schools, one for boys and one for girls. Total number of elementary schools in 1926, 889 (613 Greek-Christian, 262 Moslem, 3 Armenian, 5 Maronite, 5 Roman Catholic, and 1 Jewish); teachers, 1,270 in elementary schools, of whom 862 were Greek-Christian, 339 Moslem, and 69 of other denominations. Total enrolment in elementary schools, 48,501, comprising 8,787 Moslem, 38,477 Greek-Christian, 625 Armenian, 142 Maronites, 393 Latins, and 20 Jews. The Government contributed (1925) 54,000*l.* to education. Total expenditure on elementary and secondary education, 120,484*l.* There are 5 weekly newspapers in Turkish and 17 in Greek.

Languages spoken are a local dialect of Modern Greek; Osmanli Turkish by Moslems; French by educated classes. English is becoming more and more widely spoken.

Justice.—The law courts are (1) a supreme court of civil and criminal appeal; (2) six assize courts, having unlimited criminal jurisdiction; (3) six district courts, having limited criminal jurisdiction and unlimited civil jurisdiction; (4) six magisterial courts with summary jurisdiction; (5) ten village judges' courts. In all, except supreme court, native (Christian and Mohammedan) judges take part. There are also 4 Sheri Courts, for Mohammedans only, which administer the Moslem Sheri or ecclesiastical law. In the year 1926 the number of offences was 20,275, and the number of persons committed to prison was 6,834. Strength of police force, December 31, 1926, 26 officers and 821 men; total, 847.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for five years, exclusive of Grant-in-Aid, and share of the Turkish debt charge, were :—

In 1927 there were 259,448 sheep, and 225,328 goats. One-third of cultivable land is under cultivation. There are irrigation works for the storage and distribution of rain-water. The Forest Department has done much for the preservation and development of the forests existing at the time of the British occupation, and for the re-afforestation of denuded districts. The area of delimited forest is 649 square miles. Sponge fisheries are carried on, the take in 1925 being about 4,200 lbs. Gypsum, terra umbra and marble are found in abundance; cupriferous iron pyrites are being mined on a large scale and 173,255 tons of ore were exported in 1925. Asbestos is mined, 64,089 cwts. being exported in 1925.

Commerce.—The commerce, and the shipping, exclusive of coasting trade, for five calendar years were:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Merchandise:—	£	£	£	£	£

HONG KONG.*Constitution and Government.

THE Crown Colony of Hong Kong was ceded by China to Great Britain in January, 1841; the cession was confirmed by the treaty of Nanking, in August, 1842; and the charter bears date April 5, 1843. Hong Kong is the great centre for British commerce with China and Japan, and a military and naval station of first-class importance.

The administration is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, composed of the General Officer Commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, and the Director of Public Works (the last two being special appointments), and three unofficial members. There is also a Legislative Council, presided over by the Governor, and composed of the General Officer Commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Director of Public Works, the Captain Superintendent of Police, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs (the last three being special appointments), and six unofficial members—viz., four nominated by the Crown (two of whom are Chinese), one nominated by the Chamber of Commerce, and one by the Justices of the Peace.

Governor—Sir Cecil Clementi, K.C.M.G. Appointed 1925. Salary 6,000*l.*, including 1,200*l.* allowance.

Colonial Secretary—W. T. Southorn, C.M.G.

Area and Population.

Hong Kong is situated at the mouth of the Canton River, about 90 miles south of Canton. The island is an irregular and broken ridge, stretching nearly east and west about 11 miles, its breadth from 2 to 5 miles, and its area rather more than 32 square miles; separated from the mainland by a narrow strait, the Lyeemoon Pass, about half a mile in width. Large reclamations are in progress in the districts of Wanchai and North Point. The opposite peninsula of Kowloon, on the mainland, was ceded to Great Britain by treaty in 1861, and now forms part of Hong Kong. The city of Victoria extends for upwards of five miles along the southern shore of the beautiful harbour. By a convention signed at Peking on June 9, 1898, there was leased to Great Britain for 99 years a portion of Chinese territory mainly agricultural, together with the waters of Mirs Bay and Deep Bay and the island of Lan-tao. Its area is about 356 square miles, including islands, with about 94,000 inhabitants, exclusively Chinese. Area of Old Kowloon is 3 square miles. Large areas have also recently been reclaimed at Kowloon Bay, Cheung Sha Wan, Lai Chi Kok, Tsun Wan, Wauchai, and North Point. Work on some of these areas is still in progress. Total area of colony, 391 square miles.

The population of Hong Kong, excluding the Military and Naval establishments, was estimated to be in the middle of 1925 as follows:—Non-Chinese civil population, 16,500; Chinese civil population: City of Victoria (including Peak), 465,000; villages of Hong Kong, 33,040; Kowloon (including New Kowloon), 200,000; New Territories (land), 87,500; population afloat, 72,380; total Chinese population, 857,920; total civil population, 874,420; 1921 Census returns: 12,856 Non-Chinese, 612,310 Chinese; total 625,166.

The registered births and deaths for five years were as follows :—

1922 . . .	3,904	14,559	6·7	25·2
1923 . . .	4,414	15,536	7·4	25·9
1924 . . .	4,143	15,553	5·8	21·75
1925 . . .	3,654	14,991	4·64	19·05
1926 . . .	4,041	12,516	4·5	15·19

In 1923 the number of Chinese emigrants was 120,224, and the number of immigrants 121,102; in 1924, 129,859 and 130,194; in 1925, 140,534 and 91,622; and in 1926, 460,479 and 276,501 respectively.

Instruction.

Education is not compulsory, but all schools are State-inspected, and required to maintain a certain standard of efficiency. There are 5 secondary Government schools for children of British parentage, with an average attendance of 315 (1926), and 11 Government schools for Chinese boys and two for Chinese girls, with a total average attendance of 2,783. There is one school for Indians, with an average attendance of 97 (1926). There are also numerous schools in receipt of grants. The total number of pupils in all schools in 1926 was 44,947. The total expenditure on education in 1926 was 910,063 dollars, net.

The Hong Kong University in 1926 had 289 students, mostly Chinese. Faculties of Medicine, Engineering and Arts have been established, with a large staff of British professors and lecturers, well-equipped scientific laboratories, and schools for instruction in physiology, pathology, and tropical medicine.

Justice and Crime.

There are a Supreme Court, the second court or Court of Summary Jurisdiction, and a third court or Appeal Court, a police magistrate's court, and a marine magistrate's court. In 1926, 1,154 were committed to Victoria gaol for criminal offences; in 1925, 613. The daily average of prisoners in gaol was 1,116 in 1925, and 1,054 in 1926. There is a police force in the colony numbering (1926) 1,995 men, of whom 246 are Europeans, 709 Indians, and 1,040 Chinese.

Finance.

The public revenue and expenditure of the colony were as follows in recent years. The dollar of Hong Kong is of variable value; for 1922 it is here taken at 2s. 6½d., 1923 2s. 3½d., 1924 2s. 4½d., 1925 2s. 4d.

1922	2,809,602	2,889,711
1923	2,813,990	2,449,811
1924	2,874,895	3,173,763
1925	2,711,843	3,297,795

The revenue is derived chiefly from land-taxes, licences, quarry rent, liquor and tobacco duties, and an opium monopoly. The revenue for 1926 was: revenue, 21,131,581 dollars; expenditure, 23,524,715 dollars.

Public debt, 341,800*l.*, raised in 1887 and 1893 for public works. Another loan, 1,143,933*l.* in Inscribed Stock at 3½ per cent., was raised in 1906 for purposes of railway construction, also a 6 per cent. War Loan of 3,000,000 dollars was authorised. On December 31, 1926, the balance of assets over liabilities was 3,486,291 dollars.

Defence.

The military expenditure for 1926 was 4,247,038 dollars. The Defence Corps cost 66,314 dollars for 1925. Hong Kong is the headquarters of the China Squadron.

Industry, Commerce, Shipping, and Communications.

The chief industries are sugar refining, ship-building and repairing, rope-making, tin refining, tobacco manufacture, the manufacture of cement, and the manufacture of knit goods. Deep-sea fishing is important, especially for the New Territories.

The commerce of Hong Kong is chiefly with Great Britain, India and Ceylon, Australia, United States, China, Japan, Indo-China, and Siam. Hong Kong is a free port (except as regards the importation of intoxicating liquor and tobacco). Hong Kong is the centre of trade in many kinds of goods. Among the principal are sugar and flour, rice, cotton, cotton yarn and cotton piece goods, silk, hemp, leather, tin, wolframite, bulk and case oil (kerosene), oils and fats, peanuts, Chinese medicines, fish and fishery products, tea, coal, cement, condensed milk, matches. The Chinese tea and silk trade is largely in the hands of Hong Kong firms.

Imports into Hong Kong in 1925: from the United Kingdom 4,739,895*l.*; from other countries, 38,744,515*l.*; total imports, 43,484,410*l.* (1923 total, 75,055,085*l.*). Exports from Hong Kong in 1925: to United Kingdom 416,275*l.*; to China, 22,813,972*l.*; total exports, 40,353,906*l.* (total 1924, 70,671,992*l.*).

The trade of Hong Kong and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for five years is given as follows:—

Imports (consignments) into Gt. Britain from Hong Kong . . .	£ 916,240	£ 765,341	£ 718,188	£ 664,502	£ 477,176
Exports of British Produce to Hong Kong . .	6,644,921	8,554,484	5,109,808	3,182,400	4,909,954
Exports of Foreign and Colonial produce . .	127,108	114,437	92,853	67,077	90,557

In 1926, 30,231 vessels (including 15,027 junks and 2,829 steamships under 60 tons), representing altogether 28,371,104 tons, entered and cleared in the foreign trade. Of these, 3,401 with a tonnage of 9,257,417 were British ocean-going steamers.

There is an electric tramway of 9½ miles, and a cable tramway connecting The Peak district with the lower levels of Victoria. The British section of the Hong Kong-Canton Railway was opened to traffic on October 1, 1910. There is a branch line from Fanling to Sha Tau Kok.

There were 19 post offices in Hong Kong in 1925; revenue (1926) postal, 698,606 dollars; telegraphic, 68,258 dollars; expenditure, postal, 263,606 dollars; telegraphic, 61,258 dollars. Telegraph lines, including cables, in 1926, 326 miles; telephone wires, excluding military lines, 27,521 miles. There is a wireless telegraph service under the control of the Public Works Department, besides a military and naval wireless station. There is a wireless telegraph meteorological station, under the control of the Royal Observatory.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The British banking institutions in the Colony are the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, whose head office is at Hong Kong, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, the Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd., and the P. & O. Banking Corporation, Ltd. Note circulation of the three former banks, end of 1925, 61,380,676 dollars. There are also several Chinese and foreign banks.

The currency of the Colony consists of the notes of the above-mentioned banks, and of British, Hong Kong, and Mexican dollars, besides subsidiary coins. The British Dollar is of 416 grains of silver 900 fine, as compared with 417·74 grains of 902·7 fineness of the Mexican dollar.

Subsidiary coins are 50 cent pieces (209·52 grains 800 fine), 20 cent pieces (83·81 grains 800 fine), 10 cent pieces (41·90 grains 800 fine), 5 cent pieces (20·95 grains 800 fine), and 1 cent copper pieces of 115·75 grains of copper or mixed metal.

The circulation of foreign copper coin was prohibited in 1912, and similar action is being taken with regard to foreign silver and nickel coins and bank notes.

Weights and Measures are:

The Tael . . . . .	=	1½ oz. avoirdupois.
„ Picul . . . . .	=	133½ lbs.
„ Catty . . . . .	=	1½ „ „
„ Chek . . . . .	=	14½ inches.
„ Cheung . . . . .	=	12½ feet.

Besides the above weights and measures of China, those of Great Britain are in general use in the Colony.

INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES.

INDIA, as defined by Parliament (52nd and 53rd Vict. c. 63, s. 18), comprises all that part of the great Indian Peninsula which is directly or indirectly under British rule or protection. In a popular sense it includes also certain countries such as Nepal, which are beyond that area, but whose relations with India are a concern of the Foreign and Political Department of the Government, whose envoy resides in the country concerned. These countries will be found included in the third part of the YEAR-BOOK among Foreign Countries. The term British India includes only the districts subject to British law, and does not include Indian States. The term is so used, unless otherwise stated, in the tables, &c., that follow.

Government and Constitution.

The present form of government of the Indian Empire is established by various Parliamentary Statutes which are now consolidated in the Government of India Act, 1915, as amended by the Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916, the Government of India Act, 1919, and the Government of India (Leave of Absence) Act, 1924. All the territories originally under the government of the East India Company are vested in His Majesty, and all its powers are exercised in his name; all revenues, tributes and other payments are received in his name, and disposed of for the purposes of the government of India alone. Under the Royal Titles Act, 1876, the King of Great Britain and Ireland has the additional title of Emperor of India.

It is the declared policy of Parliament, as stated in the preamble of the Act of 1919, to provide for 'the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the administration and the gradual development of self-governing institutions with a view to the progressive realisation of responsible government in British India as an integral part of the British Empire.' The Royal Statutory Commission was appointed in November 1927, with Sir John Simon as Chairman.

Government in England.—The administration of the Indian Empire in England is entrusted to a Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council of not less than eight and not more than twelve members, appointed for five years by the Secretary of State. At least one-half of the members must be persons who have served or resided ten years in India, and have not left India more than five years previous to their appointment. A member may be removed by His Majesty upon an address from both Houses of Parliament, and the Secretary of State may for special reasons, to be recorded in a minute signed by him and placed before both Houses of Parliament, reappoint a member of the Council for a further term of five years. No member can sit in Parliament. The duties of the Council, which has no initiative authority, are to conduct the business transacted in the United Kingdom in relation to the government of India. Subject to the Government of India Act and rules made thereunder, the expenditure of the revenues of India, both in India and elsewhere, is subject to the control of the Secretary of State in Council, and no appropriation can be made without the concurrence of a majority of votes of the Council. The Secretary of State regulates the transaction of business. The existence of a Legislative Assembly in India with a large elected majority renders it desirable that the Secretary of State should intervene only in exceptional circumstances in matters of purely Indian interest, where the Government and Legislature in India are in agreement.

In exercise of the power given by the Government of India Act, a High Commissioner for India in the United Kingdom was in 1920 appointed to act as agent of the Governor-General of India in Council, and on behalf of provincial governments in prescribed cases, and to conduct any business assigned to him by the Secretary of State in Council.

The salary of the Secretary of State, and the cost of the India Office for other than agency services are borne by the British, and not, as formerly, by the Indian Exchequer.

Central Indian Government.—The superintendence, direction and control of the civil and military government of India is vested in the Governor-General in Council, often styled the Government of India. The Governor-General, or Viceroy (so called since 1858), is appointed by the Crown, and usually holds office for five years. The Capital of India and the seat of government were moved from Calcutta to Delhi in 1912, the latter being formed into a separate territory under a Chief Commissioner.

Viceroy and Governor-General of India.—His Excellency the Rt. Hon. Baron Irwin of Kirby Underdale, P.C. (April, 1926). Salary, Rs. 2,56,000 a year.

The following is a list of the past Governors-General of India, with the dates of their assumption of office:—

Warren Hastings . . . . .	1774	Lord Canning . . . . .	1856
Sir John Macpherson . . . . .	1785	Earl of Elgin . . . . .	1862
Earl (Marquis) Cornwallis . . . . .	1786	Sir John (Lord) Lawrence . . . . .	1864
Sir John Shore (Lord Teignmouth) . . . . .	1798	Earl of Mayo . . . . .	1869
Marquis Wellesley . . . . .	1798	Lord (Earl of) Northbrook . . . . .	1872
Marquis Cornwallis . . . . .	1805	Lord (Earl) Lytton . . . . .	1876
Sir Geo. H. Barlow . . . . .	1805	Marquis of Ripon . . . . .	1880
Earl of Minto . . . . .	1807	Earl (Marquis) of Dufferin . . . . .	1884
Earl of Moira (Marquis of Hastings) . . . . .	1813	Marquis of Lansdowne . . . . .	1888
Earl Amherst . . . . .	1823	Earl of Elgin . . . . .	1894
Lord W. C. Bentinck . . . . .	1828	Marquis Curzon of Kedleston . . . . .	1899
Lord Auckland . . . . .	1836	Earl of Minto . . . . .	1905
Lord Ellenborough . . . . .	1842	Lord Hardinge of Penshurst . . . . .	1910
Sir H. (Lord) Hardinge . . . . .	1844	Viscount Chelmsford . . . . .	1916
Earl (Marquis) Dalhousie . . . . .	1848	Earl of Reading . . . . .	1921

Until 1834 these were Governors-General of Fort William in Bengal, not of India.

There is an Indian Legislature consisting of the Governor-General and two Chambers, the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly (opened 1921). The Council of State consists of 60 members, of whom 33 are elected and 27 nominated; not more than 20 may be officials; but not more than 17 officials are at present (1927) nominated. The Legislative Assembly contains 145 members, 41 nominated, of whom 26 are to be official members, and 104 elected. The life of the Council of State is five years, and of the Assembly three years, but dissolution may occur sooner, or the period may be specially extended by the Governor-General. Joint sittings of the two Chambers may be held for the settlement of differences between them. The Legislative Assembly was presided over for the first four years by a President appointed by the Governor-General; thereafter he is to be elected. This Legislature has power, subject to certain restrictions, to make laws for all persons within British India, for all British subjects within other parts of India, and for all native Indian subjects of the King in any part of the world. The Governor-General, with the assent of His Majesty signified, after copies of the proposed enactment have been laid before both Houses of the British Parliament, may enact measures essential for the safety, tranquillity, or interests of British India or any part thereof, against the wish of the Council or Assembly.

The Members of the Governor-General's Executive Council are appointed by the Crown: three must have had ten years' service in India, and one must be a barrister or pleader of not less than ten years' standing. They have charge of the following Portfolios:—

Home.—James Crerar, Esq., C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.

Finance.—Sir Basil Blackett, K.C.B., K.C.S.I. (Sir George Schruster, K.C.M.G., from September, 1928).

Education, Health and Lands.—Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur, K.C.I.E.

Law.—Satish Ranjan Das, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

Railways, Commerce and Ecclesiastical.—Sir George Rainy, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., I.C.S.

Industries and Labour.—Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., C.B.E.

The salary of each member is Rs. 80,000 a year.

The Foreign and Political Department is directly under the Governor-General. The Commander-in-Chief is also the Army member of the Executive Council. At the head of each Department (except the Railway Department which is under the Chief Commissioner of Railways) is one of the Secretaries of the Government of India.

British India is now divided into fifteen administrations. Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab, Burma, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces and Berar, and Assam are each under a Governor; and the N.W. Frontier Province, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, Baluchistan, Delhi, and Andaman and Nicobar Islands are each under a Chief Commissioner as far as British territory is concerned. Detailed information regarding the British Provinces will be found at p. 145.

High Commissioner for India in the United Kingdom.—Sir Atul Chandra Chatterjee, K.C.I.E. (appointed 1925), 42, Grosvenor Gardens, London.

Provincial Government.—The Government of India Act, 1919, which came into operation in December, 1920, and January, 1921, effected important constitutional changes, more particularly in the government of the Provinces. The various functions of government are classified as Central and Provincial subjects, the latter being practically definitely committed to the Provincial Governments, while for purposes of convenience certain Central subjects, such as the collection of income tax, may be dealt with by the Provincial Governments as the agents of the Central Government. The Governor-General in Council retains unimpaired powers of control over the Provincial Governments in their administration of 'reserved' subjects, but in 'transferred' subjects is only competent to intervene where it is necessary to safeguard Central subjects or to decide questions where two or more Provinces are concerned, or to safeguard the due exercise and performance of any powers and duties possessed by or imposed on the Governor-General in Council in regard to the High Commissioner, to the raising of loans by local Governments, or under rules made by the Secretary of State in Council. The list of subjects transferred to Indian Ministers, with certain reservations, includes local self-government, medical administration, public health and sanitation, education, public works, agriculture, fisheries, co-operative societies, excise, registration, development of industries, adulteration, weights and measures, and religious and charitable endowments. Certain sources of revenue are definitely allocated to the Provinces, which are required to contribute to the Central Government certain annual sums which are to be the first charge on their revenues.

The Provincial Governments are based upon a scheme of diarchy, or dualised form of government, and consist of the Governor-in-Council and the Governor acting with Ministers. The Ministers, who are elected members of the Legislative Council, have charge of certain Departments of Government known as 'transferred subjects,' while others, the 'reserved subjects,' are administered by the Governor-in-Council. Thus each side has its share in the conduct of the Government, with responsibility for its own work, while co-ordination is achieved by the influence of the Governor, who is associated with both sections.

The Governor's Executive Council consists of not more than four members, to be appointed by the Crown, one being qualified by twelve years' public service in India. The Legislative Council contains not more than 20 per cent. of official members and at least 70 per cent. (in Burma 60 per cent.) elected members, and, in addition to its legislative functions, votes all expenditure, subject to certain specified exceptions and to the power of the Local Government to incur expenditure, on reserved subjects without the Council's assent if the Governor certifies such expenditure to be necessary. The normal duration of the Legislative Council is three years, but it may be dissolved sooner by the Governor, or its term specially extended for one year. The Ministers are appointed by the Governor to administer the transferred subjects, and are not to be officials. The Governor may not be a member of the Legislative Council, but may address the Council.

The Provinces to which this new form of government has been applied are Bengal, Madras, Bombay, Bihar and Orissa, United Provinces, Punjab, Central Provinces, Assam and Burma. The minimum number of members in each Legislative Council is: Madras, 118; Bombay, 111; Bengal, 125; United Provinces, 118; Punjab, 83; Bihar and Orissa, 98; Central Provinces, 70; Assam, 53; Burma, 92. The numbers may be increased, and in several provinces increases have already been made. A Legislative Council has been formed for Coorg. There are 7·8 million voters out of the population of 247 millions in British India, including Burma. In Madras, Bombay, Bengal, United Provinces, Punjab, Assam, and Burma the franchise has been extended to women; and women are eligible as candidates for the Madras and Bombay Councils and for these constituencies in the Legislative Assembly.

The provinces are usually formed into divisions under Commissioners, and then divided into districts, which are the units of administration. At the head of each district is an executive officer (collector and magistrate, or deputy-commissioner), who has entire control of the district, subject to the control of his official superior. Subordinate to the magistrate (in most districts) there are a joint magistrate, an assistant-magistrate, and one or more deputy-collectors and other officials. There are 273 of such districts in British India. See further, p. 145.

Government of Indian States.—The control which the Supreme Government exercises over the Indian States varies considerably in degree; but they are all governed by the Indian Princes, ministers, or councils. The Princes have no right to make war or peace, or to send ambassadors to each other or to external States; they maintain military forces within certain limits; no European can be employed by them without special sanction; and the Supreme Government can exercise control in case of misgovernment. Within these limits the more important Princes are autonomous in their own territories. Some, but not all of them, are required to pay an annual fixed tribute. The number of Ruling Princes and Chiefs having a salute of guns is 118, and of States and Estates without a salute, 445. The total area is 711,000 square miles, with a population of nearly 72 millions. Detailed information is given on p. 164.

In 1921 a Chamber of Princes was established as a permanent consultative body to discuss matters relating to affairs of Imperial or common concern.

In December 1927 a Committee of Enquiry with Sir Harcourt Butler as Chairman was appointed to report on the relations between the Paramount Power and the States, and between British India and the States.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

There were at the end of 1925-26, 767 municipalities, with a population of nearly 19 millions. The total number of members of the municipal bodies was 12,468, of whom 11,536 were non-official. The municipal bodies have the care and lighting of the roads, water supply, drainage, sanitation, medical relief, vaccination, and education, particularly primary education; they impose taxes, enact bye-laws, make improvements, and spend money, with the sanction of the Provincial Government. Their aggregate income in 1925-26 was about Rs. 16,20,29,000, exclusive of loans, sales of securities, and other extraordinary receipts amounting to Rs. 25,55,56,000. The aggregate expenditure was Rs. 18,19,12,000, excluding extraordinary and debt expenditure of Rs. 23,10,39,000. By the Local Self-Government Acts of 1883-84, the elective principle was introduced, in a large or small measure, all over India; and has since been further extended by recent legislation. In all larger towns, and in many of the smaller towns, the majority of members of committees are elected by the ratepayers; everywhere the majority of town committees consists of Indians, and in many committees all the members are Indians. In many municipalities women have the right to vote, and in a few they are eligible for election. For rural tracts, except in Burma, there were 785 district and sub-district Boards or Councils, and 434 Union Panchayats in Madras, with 20,967 members in 1925-26, 15,380 being elected. These Boards are in charge of roads, district schools, markets, public health institutions, &c. Their aggregate income in 1925-26 was Rs. 14,05,42,000, and expenditure Rs. 13,65,75,000.

The persons with a knowledge of English numbered 2·5 millions.

Educational institutions in India are of two classes :—(a) those in which the course of study conforms to the standards prescribed by the Department of Public Instruction or by the Universities, and either undergo inspection by the Department, or regularly present pupils at the public examinations held by the Department or Universities. These institutions are called 'Recognised,' but may be under public or private management. (b) Those that do not fulfil these conditions. These are called 'Unrecognised.' As regards recognised institutions, the system of education operates, in general, through (i) the Primary Schools, which aim at teaching, through the vernacular languages, reading, writing, and other elementary knowledge; (ii) the Secondary Schools, in which the instruction does not go beyond the matriculation or school-leaving certificate standard. The schools are divided into English or vernacular, and also into high and middle schools; (iii) the Intermediate Colleges; and (iv) the Colleges. The colleges are affiliated to ten federal universities—Calcutta (1857), Madras (1857), Bombay (1857), Punjab (1882), Allahabad (1887), Patna (1917), Rangoon (1920), Nagpur (1923), Andhra (1926), and Agra (1927). There are also four unitary teaching and residential universities—Dacca (1921), Lucknow (1920), Rangoon (1920), and Delhi (1922); two denominational universities—the Hindu University at Benares (1916), and the Muslim University at Aligarh (1920); and two universities in Indian States—Mysore (1916) and Hyderabad (Osmania) (1917-19).

There are in addition, various institutions of a special character, such as technical schools teaching arts and industries, engineering, &c.; law schools; medical schools and colleges; and training colleges and normal schools for the training of teachers.

The following table gives the number of institutions and scholars in 1925-26

There were in 1925-26 in British India 203,110 'recognised' institutions with 9,892,703 scholars, and 34,726 'unrecognised' with 621,618 scholars.

The following was the educational expenditure for recognised institutions in recent years from fees, provincial resources, local rates, municipal funds, endowments, etc. :—

Year	Rs.	Year	Rs.
1920-21	16,77,33,113	1923-24	19,90,86,346
1921-22	18,37,52,969	1924-25	20,87,48,319
1922-23	18,84,77,181	1925-26	22,77,92,532

A system of State Scholarships exists by which it is possible for a boy to pass from the village school to the University. There are also State Scholarships, awarded by local Governments and the Government of India, to enable the holders to study in the United Kingdom for two or more years.

During 1925-26 the following newspapers and periodicals were published : in Madras, 1,135; Bombay, 1,350; Bengal, 578; United Provinces, 478; Punjab, 390; Burma, 202; Bihar and Orissa, 114; Central Provinces and Berar, 74; Assam, 38; Delhi, 75. The number of printing presses was 5,362; and 2,117 books in English or other European languages and 14,276 in Indian languages were published.

Justice and Crime.

The Presidencies of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, and also the Province of Agra, the province of Bihar and Orissa, the province of the Punjab and the Province of Burma, have each a supreme high court, with 14, 10, 16, 11, 9, 13 and 11 judges, respectively, in 1927. There is appeal to the Privy Council in England. Oudh has a chief court. The Central Provinces and Berar, North-West Frontier Province, Coorg, Sind, and Chota Nagpur have judicial commissioners. For Assam the high court of Calcutta is the highest judicial authority. Below these courts are, for criminal cases, Courts of Session, and below these, Courts of Magistrates (first, second, and third class). The inferior civil courts are determined by special acts or regulations in each province. The most extensive system consists of the sessions judge acting as a 'District Judge'; subordinate judges; and below them 'Munsifs'. There are also numerous special courts to try small causes. Side by side with the civil courts there are revenue courts, presided over by officers charged with the duty of settling and collecting the land revenue. The number of civil suits instituted in 1925 was 2,421,000, and of persons under trial in criminal cases 2,366,000.

Nearly all the civil judges, and the great majority of the magistrates, in the courts of original jurisdiction are Indians; in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay the proportion of Indians in the appellate court is considerable.

The civil police in 1925 were 194,510 in strength, varying from 4·2 per 10,000 of the population in Bengal to 25·2 per 10,000 in the North-West Frontier Province.

<sup>4</sup> Liquors, petroleum, sugar, tobacco, cotton manufactures, metals, manufactured articles, are the chief items from which the customs revenue is derived. Under this head are also included the proceeds of export duties on rice, on jute (imposed in 1916), on tea (imposed in 1916, abolished in 1927), and on hides (imposed in 1919); and of excise duties on motor spirit (imposed in 1917), and on kerosene (imposed in 1922). The import of silver bullion and coin except under licence was prohibited in July, 1917, but the prohibition was withdrawn during 1920-21.

* Estimates.

Land Revenue.—This is levied according to an assessment on estates or holdings. In the greater part of Bengal, and Bihar and Orissa, about one-fourth of Madras, and some districts of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the assessment was fixed permanently at the end of the 18th century; while it i fixed periodically at intervals of from twelve to thirty years over the rest of India. For details as to the nature of the different tenures of land that prevail in India see the YEAR-BOOK for 1886, p. 799. See also under AGRICULTURE.

The land revenue was contributed in 1926-27 (revised estimate) as follows:—

Administrations	Rs.	Administrations	Rs.
India, General . . . . .	6,77,000	Punjab . . . . .	2,81,51,000
Baluchistan . . . . .	10,66,000	Burma . . . . .	5,30,00,000
N.W. Frontier Province . . . . .	23,62,000	Shan States Federation . . . . .	4,93,000
Madras . . . . .	7,40,05,000	Bihar and Orissa . . . . .	1,69,42,000
Bombay . . . . .	5,23,10,000	Central Provinces and Berar . . . . .	2,34,82,000
Bengal . . . . .	3,09,44,000	Assam . . . . .	1,09,38,000
United Provinces of Agra and Oudh . . . . .	6,97,97,000	Coorg . . . . .	3,68,000

Opium.—In British territory the cultivation of the poppy for the production of opium is practically confined to the United Provinces. Opium is also grown in many of the Indian States of Central and Northern India. Public auctions at Calcutta were discontinued from April 1926. Export to China was prohibited in 1913; and in June 1926 the Government of India decided to reduce progressively exports of opium from India, except for strictly medical and scientific purposes, so as to extinguish them altogether at the end of 1935. The maximum for each country is fixed, and a reduction of 10 per cent of the 1926 exports is made each year.

Year ended March 31	—	Year ended March 31	—
	Rs. Crores		Rs. Crores
1922	69.81	1926	55.43
1923	65.27	1927 (Estimates)	55.03
1924	56.23	1928 (Estimates)	51.54
1925	55.63

Debt.—On March 31, 1927, out of a total debt of 975.54 crores (sterling portion converted at 1s. 6d. = R. 1), 654.42 crores were productive in railways, telegraphs and irrigation; 201.71 crores were unproductive; and 119.41 crores were incurred on behalf of Provincial Governments.

Finance of Separate Governments, and Local Finance.—The revenue and expenditure of each Government, Central and Provincial, in 1926-27 (revised estimates) were as follows:—

Government	Revenue	Expenditure
	Rs.	Rs.
India, Central . . . . .	1,29,97,48,000	1,29,97,48,000
Madras . . . . .	16,54,08,000	16,17,81,000
Bombay . . . . .	15,79,80,000	16,99,36,000

United Provinces of Agra and Oudh . . . . .	18,21,85,000	12,74,81,000
Punjab . . . . .	11,95,30,000	12,68,56,000
Burma . . . . .	10,43,75,000	11,84,01,000
Shan States Federation . . . . .	48,99,000	50,70,000
Bihar and Orissa . . . . .	5,72,01,000	6,13,35,000
Central Provinces . . . . .	5,38,51,000	5,94,10,000
Assam . . . . .	2,58,04,000	2,59,87,000
Coorg . . . . .	12,92,000	13,88,000

Local Funds.—The above excludes the revenue and expenditure of municipalities and of district and local boards. The income of the former is derived mainly from rates, octroi, taxes on houses, lands, vehicles and animals, tolls, and assessed taxes; and of the latter from cesses on land. The gross income for 1925-26 of all municipalities was Rs.41,75,84,000. The gross expenditure was Rs.41,29,51,000. The income of district and local boards was Rs.14,05,42,000, and the expenditure Rs.13,65,74,000.

Defence.

The defence forces of India consist of units of the Royal Air Force, units of the British Regular Army, the Indian Army, the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces, the Indian Army Reserve and the Indian State Forces. With the exception of the last, these forces are administered by the Air Vice-Marshal and the headquarters staff of the Army in India respectively, under the supreme control of the Commander-in-Chief, who is the Army-Member of the Viceroy's Executive Council. The military forces are organised into the Northern, Southern, Eastern and Western Commands, and the Burma Independent district; each Command contains a number of districts and independent brigades. The garrison of Aden has been recently transferred from the Indian to the Home Command.

The British regular forces in India are paid by the Indian exchequer. They are organised in brigades and divisions with the Indian Army, the normal proportion being 1 British battalion to 3 Indian. There are 19½ Indian Pack Batteries. The personnel of the remaining batteries of Horse, Field and Garrison Artillery is wholly British except for a proportion of Indian drivers. The Tank Corps and Royal Air Force are wholly British.

The Auxiliary Force, organised under the Indian Auxiliary Force Act, 1920, is confined to persons of British extraction. Enrolment is voluntary, but entails periodical training extending to 64 hours annually for infantry and 80 hours for other arms. The force is liable to be called out or embodied for local service within strictly defined limits, and acts as a second line to the permanent garrison of India. Its strength in 1927 was 32,700.

The Indian Territorial Force was brought into existence in 1920, and is organised on the lines of a militia, with an annual training of 28 days. It is intended to form a second line to the regular Indian Army in time of war, the whole of its personnel being liable to general service. Its strength in 1927 was 20,000.

The Army in India Reserve has been recently constituted, in 2 classes: class A, of men with 3 years' combined army and reserve service; class B, of men up to 15 years' combined service. Strength in 1927 was 29,924.

The Indian State Forces are raised and maintained by Indian States, and are trained under the supervision of British officers, who act in an advisory capacity. Strength, in 1927, 28,500.

The composition of the forces in India was, in 1927, except for Indian State Forces, as follows:—

	Cavalry Regiments	R.H.A. Batteries	R.F.A. Batteries	Medium Batteries	Pack Batteries	S. & M. Field Troops	S. & M. Field Companies	Infantry Battalions	Pioneer Battalions	Armoured Car Companies

Auxiliary Force : : : .	11	20	5	19	25	12	5	—
Territorial Force : : : .	—	—	—	—	20	—	—	8

The strength of the British army in India in 1927 was 60,223, and of the Indian Army 167,562. The Field Army is organised in 4 divisions and 5 cavalry brigades.

The supply and transport services are provided by the Indian Army Service Corps. The medical services of the British troops are provided by the Royal Army Medical Corps, and those of the Indian Army by the Indian Medical Service.

There are units of the Indian Army serving in Iraq, Palestine, and Colonial stations. These are paid by the British exchequer.

The 7th Light Cavalry, the 16th Light Cavalry, the 2/1st Madras Pioneers, the 4/19th Hyderabad Regt., the 5th Royal Battn. 5th Mahratta Light Infantry, the 1/7th Rajput Regt., the 1/14th Punjab Regt., and the 2/1st Punjab Regt. have been selected for Indianisation. Ten Indian gentlemen are now nominated annually to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, to enable them to qualify for commissions in the Indian Army. The preliminary education is given at the Prince of Wales' Royal Indian Military College at Dehra Dun.

The Royal Air Force in India comprises 6 squadrons organised in 3 wings of 2 squadrons each; the Aircraft Depot and Aircraft Parks are directly under R.A.F. Headquarters, India. Its establishment is 218 officers and 1,757 British and 138 Indian other ranks.

The charges voted for 1926-27 (Budget) were 59,17,79,000 rupees (army, 54,10,84,000; marine, 78,80,000; military engineer services, 4,28,15,000).

On February 9, 1926, it was officially announced that a Royal Indian Navy was to be established. This is now in process of formation, the nucleus of the new force being furnished by the former Royal Indian Marine. To begin with, the sea-going units of the R.I.N. will comprise 4 sloops, 2 surveying ships and 2 patrol vessels.

Agriculture and Industry.

Agriculture, Land Tenure, &c.—The chief industry of India has always been agriculture. The total number of the population supported by agriculture, including forestry and raising of livestock, was, according to the census of 1921, a little more than 229 millions out of a total population of 318 millions. In most of the provinces there is a Department of Land Records, and in every province a Department of Agriculture. There are staffs of experts in the provinces; an Imperial staff of experts with a fully equipped central station, Research Institute and College for post graduate training of private students and of those who have completed the Agricultural Course in provincial colleges; a Civil Veterinary Department for the prevention and cure of cattle diseases and for the improvement of the breeds of cattle, horses, &c.; an Imperial Institute for veterinary research and the preparation of sera and antitoxins, and an Imperial Institute of Animal Husbandry and Dairying. Improved varieties of crops have been introduced in 7,413,000 acres, the average increased value of the produce being nearly seven and a half crores of rupees.

In provinces where the zamindāri tenure prevails (i.e., where single proprietors or proprietary brotherhoods possess large estates of several hundreds or thousands of acres), the State land revenue is assessed at an aliquot part (usually about one half) of the ascertained or assumed rental. The revenue is payable on each estate as a whole, the assessment remaining unchanged for the period of settlement. In the greater part of Bengal, and Bihar and Orissa, and in parts of the United Provinces and Madras the settlement is a permanent one and not liable to revision. In provinces where the raiyatwārī (or ryotwārī) tenure prevails (i.e., where each petty proprietor holds directly from the State, as a rule cultivates his own land, and has no landlord between himself and the Government), the revenue is separately assessed on each petty holding, and land revenue becomes payable at once (or after a short term of grace in the case of uncleared lands) on all extensions of cultivation. The raiyatwārī proprietor may throw up his holding, or any portion of it, at the beginning of any year after reasonable notice, whereas the zamindār or large proprietor engages to pay the revenue assessed upon him throughout the term of the settlement.

The following table shows in 1924-25 the latest available returns of the land surveyed under the two types of tenure, and the land revenue assessed:—

The net cultivated area actually sown in British India in 1925-26 was 225,845,051 acres.

Of the total area under irrigation in 1925-26, 24,358,920 acres were irrigated by canals; 5,809,000 acres by tanks; 11,720,000 acres by wells; and 5,677,000 acres by other sources. The average area irrigated by Government Works rose from 26,750,000 acres in 1918-20 to 28,100,000 acres in 1925-26. The net return on capital outlay was 7·41 per cent.

Livestock Census, in British India (exclusive of Baluchistan), 1924-25: oxen, 120,840,000; buffaloes, 30,612,000; sheep, 23,233,000; goats, 39,237,000; horses and ponies, 1,719,000; mules, 70,000; donkeys, 1,411,000; camels, 505,000.

Forests.—The lands under the direct control of the State Forest Department are classified as 'Reserved Forests' (forests intended to be permanently maintained for the supply of timber, &c., or for the protection of water supply, &c.), 'Protected Forests,' and 'Unclassed' forest land. The following table shows the extent of these areas in 1925-26:—

Industries.—The most important indigenous industry, after agriculture, is the weaving of cotton cloths. Other important indigenous industries are silk rearing and weaving, shawl and carpet weaving, wood-carving and metal-working. One of the most important industries connected with agriculture is the tea industry, the average number of persons employed being about 825,000. The area under tea in 1926 was about 739,700 acres, distributed as follows: Assam, 420,600; Bengal, 188,700; Bihar and Orissa, 2,100; United Provinces, 6,600; Punjab, 9,600; Madras and Coorg, 52,000; Tripura (Bengal), 6,000; and the Travancore State, 54,000. The production was, in 1926, 393 million lb. The exports of Indian tea from British India (including the State of Travancore) in 1926-27 were: to United Kingdom, 292,502,000 lb.; Canada, 11,528,000 lb.; United States, 7,620,000 lb.; Persia, 5,924,000 lb.; and to Australasia, 8,754,000 lb. The total exports were 340,904,000 lb. in 1924-25; 326,545,000 lb. in 1925-26; and 350,502,000 lb. in 1926-27.

Of the exports of merchandise in 1926-27 Rs. 801,48,58,284 represented the products of the country. Rs. 8,00,97,559 were re-exports of imported foreign merchandise.

The returns of quantities and values of imports and of exports are based on the bills of entry and shipping bills respectively. The value is the wholesale value at the place of import or export, less trade discount, duty not being included in the value of dutiable goods. The accounts present the countries from which the goods have been consigned to India and the countries for which goods shipped from India are intended. No distinction is maintained between general, special, and transit trade; but goods of foreign origin, when re-exported, are shown in detail separately from those of Indian origin.

In many cases the Indian States impose Customs duties on goods imported from other parts of India.

The imports and exports, excluding Government stores and Government treasure, were distributed as follows in 1926-27 :—

	Bengal	Bihar and Orissa	Burma	Madras	Bombay	Sind
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.

A branch of the Royal Mint was established at Bombay at the end of 1917, but since April, 1919, the Branch Mint has been closed.

In August, 1926, the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance submitted their report, including the recommendation of the stabilisation of the rupee at a rate corresponding to an exchange rate of 1s. 6d. (gold). In March, 1927, the Indian Currency Act made this stabilization statutory. A bill to constitute a Reserve Bank to control currency and credit was withdrawn in February, 1928, by the Finance Member in consequence of the opposition in the Legislative Assembly.

Since 1900, rupees have been coined as required to meet public demands. The entire profit accruing to Government on the coinage up to March 31, 1907, and during the year 1912-13, and half such profit for the years 1907-08 and 1908-09 were placed to the credit of a separate fund termed the Gold Standard Reserve, with the object of ensuring the stability of the currency policy of Government. Any profit arising from this source is at present credited entire to the Gold Standard Reserve. On June 30, 1927, the Reserve amounted to 40,000,000.

Notes of the values of one, two-and-a-half, five, ten, fifty, and a hundred rupees are legal tender throughout British India. The total value of notes in circulation on March 31, 1927, including the notes held in Government treasuries and the Head Offices of the Imperial Bank of India, was Rs. 1,84,13,21,714.

The Nicobar Islands are situated to the South of the Andamans, 75 miles from Little Andaman. The British formally took possession in 1869. There are twenty-one islands, nine uninhabited; total area, 635 square miles. The islands are usually divided into three groups, Southern, Central, and Northern, the chief islands in each being respectively, Great Nicobar, Camorta with Nankauri, and Car Nicobar. There is a fine land-locked harbour between the islands of Camorta and Nankauri, known as Nankauri Harbour. The Nicobarese inhabitants numbered 9,272 (5,242 males and 4,030 females) in 1921. The islanders are known to have pursued the coconut trade for at least 1,500 years. The coconut production is estimated at 15 million nuts per annum, of which some 6 million are sold by barter and exported in small native craft and Chinese junks in the form of copra. The Government is represented by a permanent Assistant Commissioner and a Tahsildar. The islands are attached to the Chief Commissionership of the Andamans and Nicobars.

Chief Commissioner at Port Blair.—Lieut.-Col. M. L. Ferrar, C.S.I., C.I.E., O.B.E., I.A.: salary, Rs. 36,000 per year.

ASSAM.

Constitution and Government.—Assam first became a British Protectorate at the close of the first Burmese War in 1826. In 1832 Cachar was annexed: in 1835 the Jaintia Hills were included in the East India Company's dominions, and in 1839 Upper Assam was annexed to Bengal. In 1874 Assam was detached from the Administration of the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, and made a separate Chief Commissionership. On the partition of Bengal in 1905, it was united to the Eastern Districts of Bengal under a Lieut.-Governor. From 1912 the Chief Commissionership of Assam was revived; and from 1921 a Governorship was created. There are two Members (one an Indian) of the Governor's Executive Council for 'reserved' subjects, and two Indian Ministers for the 'transferred' subjects. The Legislative Council consists of 53 Members 39 elected, and 14 nominated and ex-officio (not more than 7 may be officials). For the purposes of administration there are two Commissionerships with 12 Districts and 2 frontier tracts. There are 19 Local Boards; and there are 17 Municipalities and 8 Town Committees.

Manipur State (p. 164) is in relation with the Government of Assam.

Governor.—H.E. Sir Egbert Laurie Lucas Hammond, K.C.S.I., O.B.E. I.C.S.; appointed 1927: salary Rs. 66,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—The plains districts, the hill districts and the frontier tracts exclusive of the State of Manipur cover an area of 53,015 miles, with a population of 7,606,230 in British territory. More than half are Hindus: and only 22 per cent. speak Assamese. The capital is Shillong.

Instruction.—There were two Art Colleges, affiliated to the Calcutta University, with 1,012 students in 1926–27; also the Farle Law College, at Gahuati, founded in 1914. The number of secondary schools for boys was 345 with 46,312 pupils: primary schools for boys numbered 4,377, with 199,903 pupils. The number of girls at school was 37,801. There were 1,798 pupils in 65 Tea Garden schools.

Justice and Crime.—The Province (Manipur State and certain hill and frontier areas excepted) is under the jurisdiction of the High Court of Calcutta. For criminal work there were, in 1925, 2 Sessions Judges and 78 other Officers. In 1925, 24,181 criminal cases were brought to trial: and 39,425 civil suits were instituted. The Assam Rifles, with 5 Battalions—formerly known as the Military Police—supply garrisons for the frontier. There is a civil Police Force of 4,302 under an Inspector-General.

Finance.—The gross revenue for 1926–27 was 260 lakhs of rupees, to which Land Revenue contributed 107 lakhs, Excise 72 lakhs, Forests 32 lakhs, and Stamps 24 lakhs. The total expenditure in 1926–27 was 262 lakhs. General Administration cost 26 lakhs, Education 27 lakhs, Police 25 lakhs, Land Revenue Administration 18 lakhs, and Forests 14 lakhs. The contribution of the Local to the Central Government was 15 lakhs in 1926–27.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture employs nearly 89 per cent. of the population. Silk-weaving and Cotton-weaving are the most important of the Home Industries. At the end of 1926 there were 941 Tea Gardens with 420,564 acres under tea. The area of tea plucked in 1926 was 401,788 acres; the total out-turn was 241 million lbs., and the daily average number of persons employed was 532,024. All-India statistics regarding the tea industry are given on p. 133. In 1926–27 there were 6,011 sq. miles of reserved forests. In 1926, 24 millions of gallons of crude oil were extracted from the oil fields of the province.

Commerce and Communications.—In 1926–27 there were 565 miles of metalled roads, 6,916 miles of unmetalled roads, and 2,271 miles of bridle roads. The open mileage of railways was 1,004 miles.

BALUCHISTAN.

Government.—After the Afghán War, 1878–81, the districts of Pishin, Shorárd, Duki, Sibi, and Sháhrig were assigned to the British and in November, 1887, were formally constituted as British Balúchistán. In 1888, the districts of Quetta and Bolán were made over by the Khán to the British on an annual quit-rent of 25,000 rupees and 30,000 rupees respectively. In 1886, the Bori valley, in which is now the cantonment of Loralai, was occupied. In 1887, the Khetrán country, now known as the Bárkhán tahsil, was brought under British control; in 1889 British authority was established in the Zhob valley and Kákar Khurásán; in 1896 Chágai and Western Shinjáni were included in administered territory; in 1899, the Nuskhi Niabat was made over by the Khán of Kalát on an annual quit-rent of 9,000 rupees; and in 1903 the Nasirábád tahsil was acquired from the Khán on an annual quit-rent of 117,500 rupees. The area of British and administered territory, including tribal areas, is 54,228 sq. miles, and the population (1921) 420,648. The chief town is Quetta, with a population (1921) of 49,001. It is the only municipality. The head of the civil administration is the Agent to the Governor-General and Chief Commissioner in Baluchistan. The area under his direct administration is divided as follows: Quetta-Pishin, Sibi, Zhob, Loralai, Chagai districts and Bolan Sub-division. The revenue administration of the Province is entrusted to an officer who is styled the Revenue and Judicial Commissioner.

Regular troops are cantoned at Quetta, Chaman, Fort Sandeman, and Loralai, and detachments are stationed at different places, principally in the Zhob and Loralai Districts, for the preservation of law and order. There is also a police force, supplemented by levies and the Zhob and Mekran Levy Corps. The Indian Staff College was opened in Quetta in 1907.

Agent to the Governor-General and Chief Commissioner in Baluchistan.—The Hon Lt.-Col. H. B. St. John, C.I.E., C.B.E.: salary, Rs. 48,000 per year.

Area and Population.—Area, 134,638 square miles; population (1921 census), 799,625. The main divisions are: (1) British Baluchistan proper, with an area of about 9,096 square miles, consisting of tracts assigned to the British Government by treaty in 1879; (2) Agency Territories, with an area of about 45,132 square miles, composed of tracts which have from time to time been acquired by lease, or otherwise brought under control, and placed directly under British officers; and (3) the States of Kalat and Las Bela, with an area of about 80,410 sq. miles the former consisting of a confederation of tribes under the Khan of Kalat, and stretching westwards to Persia, while the latter occupies the alluvial valley between the Pab and Hala ranges from the sea to Bela.

Religion and Instruction.—The religion of the population is either Musalman, in general of the Sunni sect, or Hindu. The Musalmans numbered (1921 census) 733,477; Hindus, 51,348, Christians, 6,693; Sikhs, 7,741; others, 366. At the close of 1926–27 there were 94 public schools and 219 private schools for boys and 8 schools for girls; also 2 European schools for boys and girls. Of the 8,795 pupils 1,259 were girls. More than one-third of the pupils were Hindus, children of men from Sind and the Panjab in trade or in Government service.

Justice.—Almost all cases in which local men are concerned are referred to 'councils of elders' (locally called jirga) for settlement along the well-tried lines of the ancient customary and tribal law. This system of settlement of cases forms an integral and essential part of the machinery for the administration of Civil and Criminal justice in Baluchistan.

Finance.—In the directly administered territory the chief items of revenue are: Land revenue, excise, court fees and stamps, and judicial fines. In some places the land revenue is levied in money in accordance with a fixed assessment, but generally it is levied in kind. The revenue from all sources in 1926–27 was Rs. 21.62 lakhs; and the expenditure Rs. 32.19 lakhs.

Production and Industry.—The country consists largely of barren mountains, deserts and stony plains; its climate is subject to the extremes of heat and cold, and the rainfall is uncertain and scanty. The agricultural products are wheat, barley, millet, lucerne, rice, maize, and potatoes; while grapes, apricots, peaches, apples, and melons are grown in abundance. Panjgur in Mekran is famous for its dates.

Commerce and Communications.—In 1924–25 trade with Afghanistan, via both the Quetta-Pishin and the Chagai districts, consisted of:

Imports, 117 lakhs, and Exports, 142 lakhs. Imports from Persia were 66 lakhs, and Exports to Persia 256 lakhs. Registration was discontinued from April, 1925. There are 1,397 miles of metalled and partly metalled roads. There are 892 miles of railway.

The North-Western railway, gauge 5ft. 6in., enters Baluchistán near Jhatpat and crosses the Kachhi plain to Sibi, where it bifurcates, one branch going by Harnai and the other by Quetta, and reunites at Bostán, whence the line runs to Chaman. There is a line of railway to Nushki 82½ miles long, and an extension from Nushki up to Duzdap on the Persian border, and also a short line from Khanai to Killa-Saitulla, a distance of about 84 miles.

There is a complete and frequent postal service in British and administered territory, extending to Kalát and through Duzdap to Seistan and Meshed.

A network of telegraph wires covers the north-eastern portion of the Province and extends to Kalát, and westwards via Nushki to Killá Robát, where it connects with the Indo-European system, while a further line connects India with Persia and Europe, via Las Bela, Panjgur, and Nok Kundi.

BENGAL PRESIDENCY.

Constitution and Government.—The British first came to the shores of Bengal in 1633, when the first factories were established. A new centre of trade was fixed by Job Charnock at Calcutta in 1690. In 1699 Bengal was constituted a separate Presidency, and there were Presidents and Governors of Fort William from 1700 to 1774, the last being Warren Hastings. There were Governors-General of Fort William from 1774 to 1834. In 1834 the Bengal Presidency was divided into two Presidencies, 'Agra' and 'Fort William in Bengal.' In 1854 the Government of Bengal was entrusted to a Lieutenant-Governor, the offices of Governor-General of India and Governor of Bengal having previously been united in one person. In 1874 the Bengal Province was reduced to Bengal proper, Bihar and Orissa. In 1905 a portion of Bengal proper went to form a new Province, Eastern Bengal and Assam. The Government of the remainder of Bengal with Bihar and Orissa was changed to a Lieutenant-Governor in Council (three Members) in 1910. A new Presidency of Bengal, reuniting all the Bengali-speaking districts, was established in 1912 under a Governor in Council (three Members). Finally, from 1921, in accordance with the Government of India Act of 1919, the administration consisted of the Governor with four Executive Councillors (two being Indians) for the 'reserved' subjects and of the Governor with two Indian Ministers (one Hindu and one Muhammadan) for the 'transferred' subjects. There is a Legislative Council of 140 Members consisting of 114 elected and 26 nominated and ex-officio Members (not more than 20 may be officials). For administrative purposes there are five divisions, under which there are 27 districts, exclusive of Calcutta. For the purposes of Local Self-Government there are 26 District Boards, all with non-official Chairmen; 82 Local Boards; and 2,217 smaller units called Union Boards. There are 115 Municipalities. The Calcutta Corporation was reconstituted by an Act of 1923 with a Mayor, Chief Executive Officer and other officials, all of whom are to be elected by the Corporation; there are 85 Councillors and 5 Aldermen.

Governor.—H.E. Colonel the Rt. Hon. Sir Francis Stanley Jackson, P.C., G.C.I.E.; appointed 1926; salary Rs. 120,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—Bengal in its present form, as reconstituted in 1912, covers 82,277 square miles, of which 76,843 square miles are British territory. The population (1921) is 46·6 millions in British territory and 896,926 in two Indian States. Calcutta with its suburbs accounts for 1,132,246; the urban population of the remainder of the Province is only 4 per cent. of the whole. Howrah has a population of 195,301; and Dacca of 119,450. Mohammedans constitute 53·5 per cent., and Hindus 43·7 per cent. Of the 149,075 Christians, 22,730 were Europeans. Bengali is the mother tongue of 92 per cent. of the total population, though altogether 80 different languages are found spoken in Bengal.

Instruction.—Recognised Educational Institutions in 1925–26 numbered 56,549, and unrecognised 1,429. The number of pupils in all classes of Institutions was 2,222,012. The Calcutta University is both an affiliating and a teaching University, dating from 1857. Dacca University is a teaching University, founded in 1921. Art Colleges for males number 38 with 23,153 students; of these 8 were maintained by Government. There were 2,647 secondary schools for Indian boys. The primary schools for boys numbered 37,124. Of the Hindu male population 5·9 per cent. and of the Mohammedan male population 5·4 per cent. are in primary schools. There were 99 Institutions for the training of teachers. The number of students in the 3 Institutions teaching law was 3,634. There were 722 students in Engineering in 2 Institutions. There were 13,922 Institutions of all kinds for Indian girls. For children of European descent there were 63 Institutions with 10,616 pupils.

Justice and Crime.—The High Court consists of a Chief Justice and 16 Judges. For Criminal and Civil justice there were in 1925–26 31 District and Sessions Judges (including Additional Judges). For Criminal justice there were 387 stipendiary and 674 honorary Magistrates, and for Civil justice 44 Subordinate Judges and 235 Munsifs (Civil Judges of the first instance). There were 263,049 criminal cases brought to trial in 1925; and outside Calcutta 585,496 civil suits were instituted. The Bengal Police has a strength of 23,938 under an Inspector-General. The Calcutta force is a separate force under a Commissioner of Police who is directly under Government.

Finance.—The Revenue (revised estimates) in 1926–27 was 1,049 lakhs of rupees. To this sum Stamps furnished the largest contribution, 332 lakhs; next, Land Revenue, 309 lakhs, and then Excise, 226 lakhs. Registration fees gave 39 lakhs and Bengal Forests 30 lakhs. On the expenditure side the total was 1,081 lakhs. Police cost 189 lakhs, Education 137 lakhs, General Administration 125 lakhs, and Medical Department 60 lakhs. The administration of Justice cost 111 lakhs. Forests gave a surplus of income over expenditure of 16 lakhs. As a special measure, the annual contribution of 63 lakhs to the Central Government has been remitted for six years from 1922–23.

Production and Industry.—During the close of 1925 there were 1,215 registered factories of all kinds. There were 84 jute mills and a daily average of 329,528 operatives. Cotton mills numbered 13 with 13,559 operatives. The Coal Mining Industry in Bengal had in 1925–26 236 mines, employing 42,781 operatives with an output of 4,913,552 tons. Seventy-seven per cent. of the population depend on agriculture.

Commerce and Communications.—The foreign trade of Bengal in 1925–26 amounted to 84 crores of rupees of Imports and 154 crores of Exports. Cotton goods accounted for 34·9 per cent. of the Imports. Of the Exports, jute manufactures and raw jute accounted for 64·8 per cent. The United Kingdom sent 59·9 per cent. of the Imports, and received 23·3 per cent. of the Exports.

In 1925-26 the length of metalled roads was 3,410 miles and of unmetalled roads 34,273 miles. Bengal possesses no less than 1,876 miles of navigable canals. The length of railways within the province in 1926 was 3,281 miles.

BIHAR AND ORISSA.

Constitution and Government.—The Province, containing the three different ethnic areas, Bihar, Chota Nagpur and Orissa, was taken from the old Province of Bengal and constituted under a Lieut.-Governor in Council in 1912. After the Reforms Act of 1919, the administration was changed into a Governorship. For the 'reserved' subjects there is an Executive Council with two Members (one an Indian), and for the 'transferred' subjects two Indian Ministers. There is a Legislative Council of 103 Members, 76 elected and 27 nominated and ex-officio (of whom no more than 18 may be officials). For the purposes of administration there are 5 divisions, covering 21 districts.

Governor.—H.E. Sir Hugh L. Stephenson, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., I.C.S. : appointed 1927 : salary Rs. 100,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—The British territories cover 83,180 square miles, with a population (1921) of 34 millions. The Feudatory States of Orissa and Chota Nagpur attached to the Province of Bihar and Orissa have an area of 28,648 square miles and a population of 4 millions. The mean density of the province is 340 per square mile. The density of Muzaffarpur, one of the North Bihar districts, reaches 907 per square mile. The three principal towns are Patna, the capital (119,976), Bhagalpur (68,878), and Gaya (67,562). Hindus form the great majority of the population.

Instruction.—At the census of 1921 the proportion of literates was only 4·7 per cent. as compared with 7·5 for the rest of India. The percentage of Indian boys attending school reached 38·1 in 1925-26. The University of Patna constituted in 1917 is an affiliating University. A Board of Secondary Education was constituted in 1922. In 1925-26 there were 3,219 students in Arts Colleges. There were 90,694 pupils in 675 secondary schools, and 980,394 pupils in 30,656 primary schools. There is a College for Engineering at Patna (Bihar) and a School at Cuttack (Orissa); also the Tirhut Technical Institute and the Ranchi Technical School.

Justice and Crime.—There is a High Court (constituted in 1916) at Patna with a Chief Justice and 9 Judges. On the Criminal side there are Sessions Judges, Stipendiary and Honorary Magistrates. For the administration of Civil Justice there are District Judges, Subordinate Judges, and Munsiffs (Courts of first instance). The Police Force is under an Inspector-General; there is one policeman to 2,376 of the population and to 5·8 square miles of the area of the Province, the combined proportion being less than in any other Province of India.

Finance—The revenue (revised Estimates) for the Bihar and Orissa Province in 1926–27 was 572 lakhs of rupees, including 197 lakhs from Excise, 169 lakhs from Land Revenue, 107 lakhs from Stamps, and nearly 9 lakhs from the Forest Department. The expenditure was 618 lakhs. The chief items were: Police 83 lakhs, Education 94 lakhs, and General Administration 72 lakhs. No contribution is required for the Central Government.

Production and Industry.—The Province is principally an agricultural one; 814 persons per mille depend on agriculture for their livelihood, and 963 per mille live in villages. The principal crop, rice, covers nearly half the cropped area; then come sugar-cane and maize. The area under indigo in Bihar was 16,100 acres in 1924–25. The coal area is in the Manbhum and Hazaribagh districts of Chota Nagpur. The total output was 13·9 million tons out of 20 millions for the whole of India in 1925. The districts of Hazaribagh, Monghyr and Gaya form the most important source of mica in the world. In Singbhum are the Tata Iron and Steel Works at Jamshedpur, with a pay-roll of 30,000 employees, and an additional 16,000 engaged in collieries, mines and quarries. The reserved forests cover an area of 1,785 square miles. In 1926 there were 8,046 Co-operative Societies with £ working capital of 476 lakhs.

Commerce and Communications.—There was in 1924–25 a trans-frontier trade of 526 lakhs with Nepal, and a small maritime trade in Orissa. The total mileage in 1925–26 of metalled roads was 3,697 and of unmetalled roads 24,815. There are also 501 miles of navigable canals in Bihar and Orissa. The East Indian, Bengal and North-Western and Bengal Nagpur Railways traverse the province. There are also 4 light railways with 150 miles.

BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.

Constitutional Government.—The English obtained a factory at Surat in 1616. Bombay was acquired by the Portuguese in 1530, and given in 1661 to Charles II as part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza. In 1668 the king granted the Island of Bombay to the East India Company for the small annual rent of £10: it was placed under the President of the factory at Surat. The headquarters of the Bombay Governor were transferred from Surat to Bombay in 1708. The administration is in the hands of the Governor and an Executive Council of four (of whom two are Indians) for the 'reserved' subjects, and of the Governor with three Indian Ministers (the Minister of Local Self-Government, the Minister of Education and the Minister of Forests and Excise) for the 'transferred' subjects. The Legislative Council consists of 114 Members, including the 4 Members of Council. There are 86 elected Members and 28 nominated and ex-officio Members, of whom not more than 20 may be officials; but the present (1927) number is 17 only. There are, in addition to Bombay city, 5 administrative Divisions—Northern, Central and Southern, Bombay Suburban, and Sind—under which are 27

Districts. In 1925-26 there were 156 Municipalities, 27 District Local Boards, and 222 Taluka Boards.

Governor.—H.E. Lieut.-Col. the Rt. Hon. Sir Leslie O. Wilson, F.C., G.C.I.E., C.M.G., D.S.O. : appointed Dec 1923 : Salary Rs. 120,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—The British Districts cover an area of 123,621 sq. miles : population (1921), nearly 19½ millions, mainly Hindus. The Indian States in relation with the Bombay Presidency cover 28,562 sq. miles and have a population of 4 millions (p. 165). The Western Indian States (p. 171) are in relation with the Government of India. In Sind, the Mohammedans are in the majority. Parsis are only 0·43 per cent. of the population in British territory. The density varies from 71 per sq. mile in Sind to 48,996 in Bombay City. The chief languages are Sindi, Gujarati, Marathi, and in the South Kanarese. The principal towns are Bombay (1,175,914), Ahmedabad (274,007), Poona (214,796), and Karachi (216,883).

Instruction.—The Bombay University founded in 1857 is an affiliating University. Under the University are 17 Arts Colleges and 9 Professional Colleges, for Engineering, Medicine, Agriculture, Commerce, and Law. In 1925-26 the number of students in the Arts Colleges was 9,126, and in the Professional Colleges 2,435. Recognised Educational Institutions numbered, in 1925-26, 14,371 with 1,037,061 scholars. The total number of institutions, including unrecognized ones, was 15,732. These had in all 1,074,100 pupils of whom 868,344 were boys, and 205,756 girls. Secondary schools numbered 496 with 93,569 pupils, and primary schools 13,448 with 918,168 pupils. To the total expenditure on education Government contributed 51·1 per cent., local authorities 20·8 per cent., and fees 16·5 per cent.

Justice and Crime.—The High Court of Bombay has a Chief Justice and 10 Judges. In Sind there is the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. Criminal justice is administered by the High Court, the Sessions Judges and 969 Magistrates. The number of persons tried was 273,000 in 1925-26. The Stipendiary Police Force of 23,200 men is under an Inspector-General; but Bombay City is under the control of a Commissioner of Police. Outside of Bombay City the incidence of the Police Force varies from one to every 634 inhabitants in Sind to one to every 939 in the Southern Division.

Finance.—The revenue of the Government of Bombay for 1926-27 was 1,532 lakhs, the chief contributions being 523 lakhs from Land Revenue, 421 lakhs from Excise, 186 lakhs from Stamps, and 74 lakhs from Forests. The expenditure for 1926-27 was 1,607 lakhs. General Administration cost 224 lakhs, Education 204 lakhs, and Police 170 lakhs. The contribution of the Bombay Government to the Central Government was 28 lakhs for 1926-27. Under the head of Capital Expenditure 308 lakhs were spent on the construction of Irrigation Works; and 126 lakhs on the Bombay Development Scheme.

Production and Industry.—Sixty-four per cent. of the population are dependent on agriculture. The textile trade is dominant in production. The number of looms in 1926 in Bombay Island was 72,266, and in the rest of the Bombay Presidency 46,227. The number of factories of all kinds was 1,522 in 1926, and the number of operatives in all industries was 382,255, including 81,104 women and 7,078 children. There was a decrease of 16 per cent. in the number of child operatives. There are 12,000 sq. miles of reserved forests.

Irrigation.—There are two spheres, the Deccan and Gujarat, and the Sind. The Lloyd Barrage at Sukkur is intended to supply the defect due to the low natural level of the Indus. This scheme provides for the irrigation of 500,000 more acres than the total cultivated area of Egypt; and the estimated cost is over £12,000,000. In Sind 2,998,000 acres were irrigated in 1925-26, and in the Deccan and Gujarat 290,000.

Commerce and Communications.—In 1925-26 Bombay had 8,719 miles of metalled roads and 20,595 miles of unmetalled roads. In 1925-26 the total length of railway open in the Bombay Presidency was 5,595 miles.

In January, 1928, the electrification of the suburban services to the North of Bombay was inaugurated.

The total foreign trade in 1925-26 was 235½ crores of rupees, and the total coasting trade 73½ crores. Bombay had 180 crores of Imports and 105 crores of Exports; Karachi had 27 crores of Imports and 37 crores of Exports. India cotton to the extent of 495,000 tons left Bombay for abroad.

BURMA.

Constitution and Government.—As far back as 1612 the East India Company had agents and factories at Syriam (near Rangoon), Prome and Ava. From 1796 there was a Resident at Rangoon. The first Burma War gave in 1826 Arakan and Tenasserim to the British; in 1852 Pegu was annexed by Lord Dalhousie; in 1862 the Provinces in Burma were amalgamated under a Chief Commissioner; and in 1886 Upper Burma was annexed. In 1897 the charge was changed to a Lieut.-Governorship. From 1923 the Province has been constituted a Governor's Province under the Government of India Act of 1919. The Governor and two Members of the Executive Council (one a Burman) are in charge of the 'reserved' subjects, and the Governor and two Burman Ministers are in charge of the 'transferred' subjects. There are seven administrative Divisions, exclusive of the Shan States (four Lower Burma, three Upper Burma) under Commissioners, and under these again 38 Deputy Commissioners of Districts. The Northern and Southern Shan States, which form part of British India, are administered by their Chiefs under the supervision of the Commissioner of the Federated Shan States. These groups were federated in 1922; and since 1923 there has been a Council of Chiefs. The Legislative Council of Burma consists of 103 Members, of whom 79 are elected and 24 nominated and ex-officio. No more than 14 may be officials.

Governor.—H.E. Sir Charles Alexander Innes, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.: appointed 1927: salary, Rs. 1,00,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—The area of the Province is 262,732 sq. miles. Burma proper, inclusive of the Chin Hills and Kachin Hill Tracts, covers 184,102 sq. miles. The Shan States cover 62,305 sq. miles; and there are 16,325 sq. miles of unadministered territory. The total population (1921) was 13,212,192. The leading towns are Rangoon, the capital (345,505), and Mandalay (148,917). The proportion of religions per 1,000 in 1921 was: Buddhists, 851; Animists, 53; Hindus, 37; Mohammedans, 38; Christians, 20; and others, 1. The Burmans belong to the Tibetan group. Cultivation of various kinds supported 9,158,932.

Instruction.—The number of pupils in the 6,694 recognised schools was 411,398 in 1925-26; and 203,710 in the unrecognised institutions. Burma is the most literate Province in the Indian Empire; far ahead of India in primary education. Higher education is controlled by the University, Anglo-Vernacular and English schools by Government, and Vernacular education by Local Bodies. In almost every village there is a Buddhist monastery, where the three R's are taught. There were in 1925-26 207,247 pupils in upper and lower primary schools, and 188,168 pupils attending 1,674 secondary schools of all kinds. The teaching University of Rangoon was constituted in 1920, with two Arts Colleges; and there is an Intermediate College at Mandalay. There is also an Agricultural College at Mandalay, and a Technical Institute at Insein (near Rangoon). Under a liberal scheme of State Scholarships provision is made to send 12 scholars annually to Europe.

Justice and Crime.—There is a High Court at Rangoon (constituted 1922) for the control of the administration of Civil and Criminal Justice; there are a Chief Justice and 11 Judges. Besides Sessions Judges there were 599 Stipendiary Magistrates in 1925-26: 122,550 criminal cases were brought to trial in 1925. The number of civil suits instituted was 66,102 in 1925. There is a Civil Police Force of 13,093 officers and men under an Inspector-General; a Rangoon Town Force of 1,496 under a Commissioner of Police; and—the special feature of Burma—several battalions of Military Police, the strength of which is 10,118 men.

Finance.—The revenue (revised estimates) of 1926-27 was 1,051 lakhs to which Land Revenue contributed 530 lakhs, Forests 208 lakhs, Excise 132 lakhs, Stamps 66 lakhs, and Irrigation 25 lakhs. The expenditure (revised estimates) for 1926-27 totalled 1,192 lakhs. The largest item on the expenditure side is Police 146 lakhs: next, General Administration 104 lakhs; and Education 115 lakhs. The contribution to the Central Government was 50 lakhs for 1926-27. The net surplus from Forests was 122 lakhs of rupees.

Production and Industry.—The area of reserved Forests at the end of 1925-26 was 28,372 sq. miles. The out-turn of teak by lessees was 339,256 tons. The output of tin was, in the Tenasserim area, 2,812 tons; of tungsten ore, 754 tons; of silver, almost entirely from the mines of the Burma Corporation, Ltd., in the N. Shan States, 5,103,646 ounces. The total provincial output of petroleum (1926) was 250,040,471 gallons: the industry employed 17,618 persons. The total number of factories of all kinds was 923; and the total number of persons employed in factories was 100,759.

Commerce and Communications.—In 1925-26 the whole sea-borne trade of Burma was 123.6 crores of rupees. Customs duty realised 523 lakhs. The length of metalled roads was 1950 miles, and there were 6612 miles of unmetalled roads. Burma had also 60 miles of navigable canals. Its great river, the Irrawaddy, is navigable up to Bhamo, 900 miles from the sea: and its tributary, the Chindwin, is navigable for 300 miles. The railways of the Province are worked by the Burma Railways Co., Ltd. The open mileage for the year 1926-27 was 1829 miles.

CENTRAL PROVINCES AND BERAR.

Constitution and Government.—From 1853 the territories of the Kingdom of Nagpur were declared by Lord Dalhousie to have lapsed to the Paramount Power, and were then administered as the Nagpur Province by a Commissioner under the Government of India. With some additions this area was constituted the Central Provinces in 1861. Owing to the bankruptcy of Berar and the debts owing to the British Government, a treaty with the Nizam of Hyderabad in 1853 allotted to the British certain districts known as the Hyderabad 'Assigned Districts' for the payment of the Hyderabad Contingent. In 1902 the rights of the Nizam over Berar were leased in perpetuity to the Government of India at an annual rental of 25 lakhs; and Berar was transferred to the administration of the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. In 1920 a Governorship was created. Associated with the Governor are two Executive Councillors (one an Indian) for the 'reserved' subjects, and two Ministers for the 'transferred' subjects. There are five main administrative divisions with 22 districts, each under a Deputy Commissioner. Certain Feudatory States are under a Political Agent. The Legislative Council of 73 has 55 elected Members and 18 nominated and ex-officio Members (not more than 10 may be officials). For Local Self-Government there are 18 District Councils and 2 Local Boards in the Central Provinces, and 4 District Councils in Berar; also 65 Municipalities.

Governor.—The Hon Sir Montagu Butler, K.C.S.I., C.B., C.I.E., C.V.O., C.B.E.: appointed 1925: salary Rs. 72,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—The British Districts of the Central Provinces have an area of 82,109 sq. miles and a population of 10,837,400; Berar an area of 17,767 sq. miles and a population of 3,075,800; and the Feudatory States an area of 31,176 sq. miles and a population of 2,066,900. The urban population is only 90 per mille. The leading towns are: Nagpur, the capital, 145,193; and Jubbulpore, 108,793. The Hindus in 1921 numbered 13·1 millions (nearly five-sixths of the total population); the Animists 2·1 millions; Mohammedans 0·5 million; and Christians 0·07 million.

Instruction.—The Nagpur University, was established in 1923: to this the Colleges at Nagpur, Jubbulpore and Amraoti are affiliated. Previously the University of Allahabad had jurisdiction. There were 1,833 collegiate students in 1926-27. There is a High School Board for regulating and supervising high school education. There were 95,749 pupils in secondary schools in 1926-27. Under the head of primary education there were 4,189 recognised Institutions with 270,072 pupils for boys, and 339 similar Institutions with 21,027 pupils for girls. For Technical Education there is an Engineering School with 190 students at Nagpur. There are 50 pupils at the Rajkumar College, Raipur.

Justice and Crime.—The Court of the Judicial Commissioner at Nagpur, with a Judicial Commissioner and four Additional Judicial Commissioners, is the highest Criminal and Civil Court. There were in 1926 11 District and Sessions Judges, with 815 Magistrates for criminal cases, and about 116 Subordinate Judges for civil cases. There were 38,256 criminal cases tried; and 113,225 civil suits were instituted.

Finance.—The revenue (revised estimates) for 1926–27 was 534 lakhs. Towards this total Land Revenue contributed 235 lakhs, Excise 141 lakhs, Stamp Duties 61 lakhs, and Forests 52 lakhs. On the expenditure side the total was 594 lakhs; General Administration cost 69 lakhs; next, Police 59 lakhs; Education 62 lakhs; and then Forests 39 lakhs. The contribution of the Provincial Government of the Central Provinces and Berar to the Central Government of India was 22 lakhs for 1926–27.

Production and Industry.—The Agricultural College at Nagpur had 109 students in 1926–27. The result of the distribution of improved seeds by the Department of Agriculture was an increased out-turn valued at 82 lakhs. The area irrigated was 551,743 acres. The number of Co-operative Societies of all kinds in 1926–27 was 4,125. Berar and the Western Districts of the Nagpur Provinces grow cotton. Nagpur is the centre of a cotton-spinning and weaving industry. The Forest Department controls 19,677 sq. miles of Forests: the Forests gave in 1925–26 a surplus of 14·7 lakhs of rupees. The coal output in 1926 was 635,174 tons, and the manganese output was 756,148 tons. There were 747 factories of all kinds with a daily average of 67,106 employees.

Communications.—In 1926–27 there were 4,674 miles of metalled roads, and 3,771 unmetalled. The railway mileage is 2,487, of which 1,630 miles are broad gauge and 857 narrow and metre gauge.

COORG.

This Province came under British control in 1834, when, at the wish of the inhabitants, the reigning Raja, a cruel tyrant, was deposed. At first there was a Superintendent of Coorg, acting under the Commissioner of Mysore and Coorg. In 1881 the Resident in Mysore became the Chief Commissioner of Coorg. The local Administrator is the Commissioner of Coorg at the capital, Mercara. A Legislative Council of 20 was created in 1924. The area is 1,582 sq. miles; and the population (1921) is 163,838. Kanarese is the chief language: Kodagu (Coorg language) is a dialect of old Kanarese. In 1926–27 the revenue was 12·70 lakhs and the expenditure 13·96 lakhs. There were, in 1926, 871 boys in high schools and 7,118 in primary schools, and 174 girls in high schools and 668 in primary schools. There are 40,130 acres under coffee, and 2,115 tons were exported in 1924–25.

Chief Commissioner.—The Hon. Mr. S. E. Pears, C.S.I., C.I.E.: salary, Rs. 48,000 per year.

DELHI.

The Delhi Province, with an area of 593 sq. miles, was part of the Punjab Province before October 1912<sup>6</sup> when the enclave was created into a separate province under a Chief Commissioner. In 1915 a tract of land in the United Provinces comprising 65 villages was added to the Delhi Province and is included in the above mentioned area. The population is 488,188 (1921); the urban population in Delhi town itself is 304,420.

The revised estimate for the new capital is 1,507 lakhs of rupees; an expenditure of 1,311 lakhs was incurred up to 31st March, 1927. Accommodation is required for a population of about 66,000.

The University of Delhi, intended to be a unitary, teaching and residential institution, was founded in 1922. There are three Arts Colleges affiliated. There is also the All-India Lady Hardinge Medical College for the Medical Education of Indian Women (opened 1916). A Board of Secondary Education was established in 1926.

The revenue of the Province in 1926-27 (estimate) was 85 lakhs; and the expenditure (estimate) 80·6 lakhs.

MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

Constitution and Government.—The first trading establishment made by the British in the Madras Presidency was at Peddapali (now Nizampatam) in 1611 and then at Masulipatam. In 1639 the English were permitted to make a settlement at the place which is now Madras; and Fort St. George was founded. Fort St. George was raised to the rank of a separate Presidency in 1652. Until 1785 there were Presidents and Governors of Fort St. George in Madras; and from 1785 onwards there were Governors of Madras. The military history of the Presidency ceased with the treaty after the fourth Mysore War in 1799. By 1801 the whole of the country from the Northern Circars to Cape Comorin (with the exception of certain French and Danish settlements) had been brought under British rule. The administration is now in the hands of the Governor in Council (four members, two being Indians) for 'reserved' subjects, and of the Governor acting with three Indian Ministers for the 'transferred' subjects. The Legislative Council after 1919 consisted of 127 Members, of whom 98 are elected, and 29 nominated and ex-officio. The maximum number of officials is 23. There are 26 Districts each under a District Collector and Magistrate. Under the head of Local Self-Government there are 24 District Boards (all but one under non-official Chairmen), 80 Municipal Councils, and the Corporation of Madras.

Governor.—H. E. Colonel the Rt. Hon. George Joachim Goschen, Viscount Goschen of Hawkhurst, G.C.I.E., C.B.E., V.D.; appointed 1924; salary Rs. 120,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—Area, 142,260 sq. miles. There are also five Indian States which are separately described (p. 168). Population (1921), 42·3 millions. Principal languages, Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam and Kanarese. The first two account for 78 per cent. of the population. The principal towns are, Madras with 526,911 inhabitants, Madura with 138,894, and Trichinopoly with 120,422. Hindus form 89 per cent, Mohammedans 7 per cent., Christians 3 per cent., and Animists 1 per cent.

Instruction.—The Madras University, founded 1857, is an affiliating and (since 1923) a teaching University. There were in 1924–25 74 Colleges, of which 20 were under Government: 62 were Arts Colleges, and 12 Professional. Male Arts students numbered 10,836, and the women Arts students numbered 390. Public educational institutions numbered, in 1925–26, 47,853, with 2,261,609 scholars. There were 43,631 public elementary and 512 secondary schools for Indian boys; and 3,228 elementary and 64 secondary schools for Indian girls. Public funds contributed 57 per cent. of the total expenditure on education.

Justice and Crime.—There is a High Court with a Chief Justice and 14 Judges. There were in 1925 in all 914 Criminal Courts; and 345,472 criminal cases were instituted in 1923. The Police Force in 1925–26 numbered 29,400, under an Inspector-General, while there was a force of nearly 2,000 for Madras City. The total number of civil suits instituted was 600,682 in 1925.

Finance.—The revenue (revised estimates) of the Government of Madras was 1,654 lakhs in 1926–27, the chief contributions being 740 lakhs from Land Revenue, 505 lakhs from Excise, 247 lakhs from Stamps and 54 lakhs from Forests. The expenditure (revised estimates) in 1926–27 was 1,617 lakhs. General Administration accounted for 233 lakhs, Police for 189 lakhs, and Education for 200 lakhs. The contribution to the Central Government was reduced by the Central Government to 165 lakhs in 1926–27. The proportion of the expenditure in the 'transferred' departments to the total was 35 per cent. in 1925–26.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture engages 70·8 per cent. of the population. There were in 1925–26 20 cotton mills with 35,059 workers. The total number of factories working was 1,121 with 123,563 operatives. The Madras Government in 1925–26 treated at the Government Quinine Factory 679,699 lb. of cinchona bark. The area irrigated in 1925–26 was 7,412,879 acres: productive irrigation works showed a return of 12·1 per cent. on the capital outlay. The output of timber by the Forest Department was 4,663,000 cubic feet in 1925–26.

Commerce and Communication.—In 1924–25, Madras Presidency had 19,594 miles of metalled roads, and 7,602 miles of unmetalled roads, as well as 1,484 miles of navigable canals. There were 3,833 miles of railway, in addition to 303 miles of District Board lines. The imports of private merchandise under the head of Seaborne Foreign Trade were valued in 1925–26 at Rs. 18·84 crores, and the exports at Rs. 44 crores. Trade to the United Kingdom represented 35 per cent. of the total trade of the Presidency. The Madras Port accounted for 44 per cent. of the total trade; its imports and exports amounted to Rs. 41 crores in 1925–26. Tuticorin is the chief of the other ports.

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

In 1849 the territory on the frontier was annexed and placed under a Board of Administration at Lahore in the Punjab. The frontier districts were separated in 1901 from the Punjab under the name of the North-West Frontier Province: the districts are Hazara, Peshawar, Kohat, Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan. The British territory represents one-third of the whole area of 38,665 sq. miles under the Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General; the remaining area is tribal territory, partly under Political Agents, and partly under the political control of the Deputy Commissioners of the British districts. The British territory in the five districts has an area of 13,419 sq. miles and a population of 2,251,340 (1921). About 95 per cent. are Mohammedans. Peshawar, the capital, had in 1921 a population of 104,452. The chief language is Pashtu, an Iranian tongue with many Punjabi words. The chief Court is that of the Judicial Commissioner and Additional Judicial Commissioner; and there are three Sessions Judges. In 1925-26 the total number of offences reported was 25,859. The total number of civil suits instituted was 23,148. The gross revenue (revised estimates) in 1926-27 was 86·2 lakhs, of which 23·6 lakhs came from Land Revenue, and 11·3 lakhs from Stamps. The gross expenditure was 285·3 lakhs, 99 lakhs being Political expenditure, 51·3 lakhs expenditure on Police, and 50·3 lakhs on Civil Works. In 1925-26 there were 601 recognised educational Institutions for males with 52,072 scholars, and 85 similar Institutions for females, with 6,344 scholars. The percentage of scholars to the total population is 2·9. The expenditure on Education was 18·4 lakhs, of which 62 per cent. is from Government Funds. Wheat covered 40 per cent. of the acreage sown in 1925-26. The irrigated area in that year was 368,481 acres. The new railway line through the Khyber, 27 miles long, with 34 tunnels, from Jamrud to the frontier of Afghanistan, was opened in November 1925.

Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General.—The Hon. Sir Horatio N. Bolton, K.C.I.E., C.S.I.: appointed 1923; salary, Rs. 48,000 per year.

PUNJAB.

Government and Constitution.—British power in the Punjab began with the dissipation by the successors of Ranjit Singh of the power consolidated by him. In 1849 the country was annexed, and placed under a Board of Administration. Punjab denotes the land of the five rivers, viz. Jhelum, Chenab, Ravi, Beas and Sutlej. In 1853 it was placed under a Chief Commissioner, and by 1859 the Punjab and the Delhi Territory constituted the charge of a Lieut.-Governor. The N.W. Frontier area was separated in 1901, and the Delhi enclave in 1912. In 1921 the administration was handed over to a Governor with an Executive Council of two Members (one an Indian) in charge of 'reserved' subjects, and the Governor with two Indian Ministers in charge of 'transferred' subjects. The Legislative Council consists of 94 Members, 2 ex-officio, 71 elected, and 21 nominated: of the latter not more than 14 may be officials. There are 29 districts grouped for administrative purposes under five Commissioners. The system of election has been introduced in the membership of all the District Boards, except Simla. There are 105 Municipalities.

Governor.—H.E. Sir Malcolm Hailey, K.C.S.I., C.I.E.: appointed 1924: salary Rs. 1,00,000 per year.

Area, Population and Religion.—The Punjab proper comprises an area of 99,846 sq miles and a population of 20·6 millions (1921). Its Indian States, 34 in number, have an area of 37,059 sq. miles with 4·4 million people. Of the population 55 per cent. is Mohammedan, 31 per cent. Hindu and 11 per cent. Sikh. The leading towns are: Lahore, the capital (281,781), Amritsar (160,218) and Rawalpindi (101,142).

Instruction.—The Punjab University was constituted as an examining University in 1882. It has always maintained an Oriental College and a Law College; and since 1920 various departments of University teaching, notably in Science, have been added. In 1926-27 there were 10,629 male students in Arts Colleges; 490,465 male scholars in secondary schools, and 388,534 scholars in primary schools. The total expenditure on Education in 1926-27 was 288 lakhs, of which 151 lakhs were provided by Government Funds and 58 lakhs from fees.

Justice and Crime.—The Chief Court of two Judges created in 1866 was converted in 1919 into a High Court at Lahore, which has a Chief Justice and 12 Judges. There are 22 permanent District and Sessions Judges, and 4 others. In 1926 the number of criminal cases brought to trial was 126,343, and the number of civil suits instituted was 180,249. The Provincial Police Force of more than 20,000 officers and men is under an Inspector-General.

Finance.—The revenue in 1926-27 was 1,176 lakhs of rupees, to which the receipts from Irrigation Works contributed the large proportion of 394 lakhs, Land Revenue 321 lakhs, Stamps 114 lakhs, and Excise 128 lakhs. The expenditure was 1,201 lakhs. The chief items of expenditure were: Education 143 lakhs, Police 108 lakhs, Irrigation 138 lakhs, and General Administration 106 lakhs. The contribution of the Punjab to the Central Government was reduced by the Central Government to 86 lakhs in 1926-27, and this was temporarily remitted in 1927-28. The net profit earned by the Irrigation Department has been:—

	Lakhs		Lakhs
1920-21 . . .	256	1923-24 . . .	307
1921-22 . . .	261	1924-25 . . .	338
1922-23 . . .	296	1925-26 . . .	357

Production and Industry.—Agriculture affords subsistence to 60·5 per cent. of the population. In 1927, there were 2,797,128 acres of Protected Forests under the Forest Department. The Department from 1869 to 1926-27 had receipts of 885 lakhs and expenditure of 665 lakhs. The surplus over this period was 220 lakhs. The net profit in 1926-27 was 7·87 lakhs. There is a Punjab Arts and Crafts depot at Lahore which serves a dual purpose; the provision of art craftsmen with a market for their wares, and the improvement of design and workmanship. Next to agriculture, handloom weaving is the most important industry, both as regards the number of workers engaged and the value of the products: it is estimated that over 300,000 rely on weaving as their main occupation. Agricultural prosperity is mainly due to irrigation: the canal-irrigated area rose from 3 million acres in 1893 to 11·2 million acres in 1926-27, larger than the total arable area of England and Wales.

Commerce and Communications.—The Punjab now possesses an extensive system of railway communications. The main source of wealth lies in the export of wheat and cotton. The wheat traffic to Karachi on the N.W. Railway fluctuates considerably. In 1926-27 the export of wheat was 168,769 tons; and of cotton, 161,346 tons. The passenger traffic on the N.W. Railway was 87·9 millions in 1926-27. There are about 3,000 miles of metalled roads and about 22,000 miles of unmetalled roads. Punjab has also 253 miles of navigable canals.

UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA AND OUDH.

This territory grew out of various cessions and acquisitions. In 1833 the then Bengal Presidency was divided into two parts, one of which became the Presidency of Agra. In 1835 the Agra area was styled the North-West Province and placed under a Lieut.-Governor. Oudh was annexed in 1856. The two provinces of Agra and Oudh were placed, in 1877, under one administrator, styled Lieut.-Governor of the North-West Province and Chief Commissioner of Oudh. In 1902 the name was changed to 'United Provinces of Agra and Oudh,' under a Lieut.-Governor, and the Lieut.-Governorship was altered to a Governorship in 1921. The administration of the 'reserved' subjects is in the hands of the Governor and an Executive Council of two Members, one of whom is an Indian; and the 'transferred' subjects are under the Governor with three Indian Ministers. The Legislative Council consists of 123 Members. There are 100 elected Members, and 23 nominated and ex-officio Members: of the latter not more than 16 may be officials. There are 10 administrative divisions, covering 48 districts, the average size of which is 2,000 square miles and the average population just under a million. The Municipalities in 1925-26 numbered 85, and the District Boards 48; of the former all but 8, and of the latter all are under non-official Chairmen. There are three Indian States, one of which, Benares came into existence in 1911.

Governor.—His Excellency Sir Alexander Philipps Muddiman, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.; appointed 1927; salary Rs.120,000 a year.

Area, Population and Religion.—The area of the British districts is 106,295 square miles: population (1921) about 45½ millions; slightly over 1 million are in the 6,267 square miles of the three Indian States. The maximum density is over 700 per square mile in the eastern portion of the Province. The population is rural to the extent of 89·4 per cent. Lucknow (240,566 in 1921) is the largest city; but the second place is now taken by Cawnpore (216,436) instead of Benares (198,447). Agra had in 1921 185,532, and Allahabad 157,220 inhabitants. Hindus during the last decade have lost numbers to Christianity and Aryaism, but still cover 85 per cent. Mohammedans form 14 per cent.

Instruction.—The University of Allahabad was constituted as an affiliating University in 1887. The University was recognized in 1921 as a unitary teaching and residential University: at the same time it exercised control over the affiliated colleges. Since July 1927 these colleges have been transferred to the new Agra University, which is a purely affiliating and examining University. The Benares Hindu University was constituted in 1916; Lucknow University in 1920; and the Aligarh Muslim University in 1920, all being unitary teaching and residential Universities. All four had 4,782 students in 1925–26. Government maintains an Engineering College at Roorkee, an Agricultural College at Cawnpore, and an Industrial School and a Medical College at Lucknow, besides three Training Colleges for English Teachers at Allahabad, Lucknow and Agra. Educational Institutions of all kinds numbered 24,252 in 1925–26. For secondary education there were 852 Institutions with 121,326 scholars; and for primary education 18,220 schools with 998,592 scholars. There were 1,937 institutions for Indian girls with 76,355 scholars. There was compulsory primary education in 23 Municipalities, Government supplying two-thirds of the extra cost involved. The percentage of scholars to the population is 4·9 for males and 0·5 for females. Government contributed 57 per cent. of the total cost of education in 1925–26.

Justice and Crime.—There is a High Court of the Agra Province with a Chief Justice and 11 Judges, sitting at Allahabad; also a Chief Court of Oudh (constituted November 1925) with 5 Judges in all, at Lucknow. There are 19 Sessions divisions in Agra and 6 in Oudh. The persons brought to trial were 179,696 in the Agra Province and 97,474 in Oudh in the year 1924. The stipendiary Police Force is under an Inspector-General, with a force of nearly 33,000 officers and men. The village watchmen have in recent years been reduced from 88,000 to 43,800.

Finance.—The revenue (revised estimates) of the United Provinces in 1926–27 was 1,321 lakhs of rupees. To this total the main contributions were: 697 lakhs from Land Revenue, 177 lakhs from Stamps, 136 lakhs from Excise, 58 lakhs from Forests, and 107 lakhs from Irrigation. On the expenditure side the total (revised estimates) for 1926–27 was 1,274 lakhs. On Education were spent 184 lakhs; on Police 161 lakhs; and on General Administration 131 lakhs. No less than 75 lakhs were spent on the interest on debt incurred on Irrigation Works for which Capital Accounts are kept. On the construction of new Irrigation work, 127 lakhs went in capital expenditure in 1926–27. The contribution made by the Provincial Government to the Central Government of India was 151 lakhs in 1926–27.

Produce and Industry.—Agriculture absorbs 76·8 per cent. of the population; over 84 million acres were under cultivation in 1925-26, and 2 million acres were irrigated from canals. The productive canals gave a net revenue of 6·0 per cent. on the total capital outlay. The Sarda-Oudh Canal project is estimated to cost 750 lakhs and to irrigate nearly  $1\frac{1}{2}$  million acres; and the Sarda-Kachha Canal project will cost 200 lakhs, and will irrigate 370 000 acres. The great centre of industry is Cawnpore. In 1926 there were 335 factories in the United Provinces. The cotton mills employ most labour; then follows engineering.

Communications.—There were, in 1926-27, 7,730 miles of metalled and 27 672 of unmetalled roads. On the River Ganges and Gogra 42½ miles were kept open for navigation. The trunk lines of the East Indian Railway intersect the province.

INDIAN STATES AND AGENCIES.

Information is given below regarding the leading States and Agencies, arranged in alphabetical order.

Assam (Manipur) State.—The only feudatory States with which the Assam Administration has political relations are Manipur and the petty States in the Khasi Hills. Manipur has an area of 8,456 square miles and a population (1921) of 384,016. About one-third are animistic tribes. The revenue is nearly 8 lakhs. There is a tribute of Rs. 5 000. The ruler is H. H. Maharaja Chura Chand Singh, C. B. E., born 1885; succeeded 1891; salute of 11 guns. Capital, Manipur. The State Administration is under a Darbar of a President (whose services are lent by the Assam Government), three ordinary and three additional Members.

Baluchistan States.—There are two States—Kalat and Las Bela—in relation with the Agent of the Governor-General, who is also the Chief Commissioner of Baluchistan and resides at Quetta. There is the Political Agent, Kalat. The leading chief of Kalat is His Highness Beglar Begi Mir Sir Mahmud Khan, G. C. I. E., Wali of Kalat, who was born in 1864 and succeeded in 1893; he has a personal salute of 21 guns. He is the head of a confederacy of chiefs. The area of Kalat State is 73,278 square miles, and the population 328 281 (1921). The Khan's revenue, including the subsidies and rents for the leased areas paid by the British Government, amounts to nearly 17 lakhs of rupees annually. In 1926 private property in slaves in Kalat was abolished.

The ruling chief of Las Bela is Mir Ghulam Muhammed Khan, Jam of Las Bela, who was born in 1895 and succeeded in 1921. The area of the State is 7,132 square miles; population, 50,696 (1921); the revenue is about 3·8 lakhs of rupees. The State is under the immediate control of the Political Agent in Kalat.

Baroda.—The State was carved out of the remains of the Moghul Empire under Sivaji and then under the Peshwa, and is interlaced with territory in Gujarat and Kathiawar. The Gaekwar Pilaji acquired portion of Gujarat in 1721. The influence of the British as suzerain dates from 1780. The Gaekwar, Malhar Rao, installed in 1871, was deposed in 1875 for misgovernment, and in 1881 the widow of Khandi Rao adopted as heir the present ruler, a descendant of the founder of the family. The area is 3,135 square miles; the population, 2,126,522. Baroda City, the capital, has a population of 91,178. The receipts in 1925-26 were 237 lakhs. There were 2,976 educational institutions with 213,639 pupils, including Baroda College with 759 students. There were 731 Co-operative Societies of all kinds, with 24,808 members and a working capital of 37.9 lakhs. The ruler is H. H. Maharaja Sir Sayaji Rao Gaekwar, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., born 1863; succeeded 1875; salute of 21 guns. There is an Executive Council of 4 members, and a Legislative Council of 27 members, 10 being elected. The Government of India is represented by a Resident, who resides at Baroda.

Bengal States.—There are two semi-independent States, Cooch Behar and Tripura, in respect of which the Governor of Bengal acts as Agent to the Governor-General. Cooch Behar is under a Regent, H. H. the Maharani of Cooch Behar, on behalf of her son, H. H. Jagaddipendra Narayan Bhup Bahadur, who, when only seven years of age, succeeded in 1922. The ruler has a salute of 13 guns. There is a Regency Council, the Vice-President of which is an officer lent by the British Government who resides at Cooch Behar. The area is 1,318 square miles; population (1921) 592,489; the approximate annual revenue is 40 lakhs of rupees.

Tripura State covers 4,116 square miles; the population is (1921) 304,437; the approximate revenue 29 lakhs (inclusive of the revenue of the landed properties owned by the State in British India). The ruler is H. H. Maharaja Manikya Bir Bikram Kishor Deb Barman Bahadur; born 1908; succeeded 1923; salute of 13 guns. He was formally invested with the powers of a Ruling Chief by the Governor of Bengal in August, 1927.

Bihar and Orissa Feudatory States.—There are 26 Feudatory States attached to Orissa, the Political Agent of which resides at Sambalpur. Seventeen are administered by their own Chiefs, and 9 are under the administration of the Government of Bihar and Orissa. The total population is 3,959,669, and the total area 28,656 square miles. The real income in 1926-27 was Rs. 1,01,59,889, and their tribute to the Government was Rs. 96,449.

Bombay States.—There are 151 (132 being without a salute) States and Estates which are in relation with the Bombay Government, the chief of which is Kolhapur, with an area of 3,217 sq. miles, a population of 833,726, and an approximate revenue of 91 lakhs. The Maharaja of Kolhapur is H. H. Sir Rajaram Chhatrapati, G.C.I.E.; born 1897; succeeded 1922; salute of 19 guns. From 1926 the Dewan of Kolhapur and three Ministers constitute the Council of the State. Khairpur has an area of 6,050 sq. miles and a population of 193,152. The Mir of Khairpur is H. H. Mir Ali Navaz Khan Talpur; born 1884; succeeded 1921; salute of 15 guns. The State of Idar is under Lieut.-Colonel H. H. Maharaja Sir Daulat Singhji, K.C.S.I. (born 1878; succeeded 1911; salute of 15 guns). The area is 1,669 sq. miles; and the population (1921) 226,355. See also Western India States (p. 171).

Burma States.—The 6 Northern and the 35 Southern Shan States, federated since 1922, are not States on the same footing as States in other parts of the Indian Empire, but are an integral part of British India, forming, as they did, part of the old Burmese Kingdom. They do not, however, form part of Burma proper, and are specially administered. The total area is 56,313 sq. miles, with a population of 1,433,000.

To the south of the Southern Shan States are the three Karen-ni States, with an area of 4,280 sq. miles and a population of 63,000. They form a group of Feudatory States, and are not part of British India. They are administered by their own Chiefs under the advice of the Commissioner of the Federated Shan States through his representative, an Assistant Political Officer, who resides at Loikaw.

Central India Agency.—This Agency, covering 51,531·3 sq. miles, with a population of 5,997,023, includes 28 Salute States and 63 Minor States and Guaranteed Estates. The bulk of the population are Hindus. The Government of India is represented by an Agent to the Governor-General at Indore; and under him are Political Agents for Baghelkhand, Bundelkhand, Bhopal, and in the Southern States of Central India and Malwa. The territories of the different States are much divided and intermingled, and their political relations with the Indian Government and with one another are very varied.

Bhopal has an area of 6,902 sq. miles, a population of 692,448, and an approximate revenue of 56·6 lakhs. The Ruler is Lt.-Col. H.H. Nawab Haji Muhammad Hanidulla Khan Bahadur, C.S.I., C.V.O., B.A., the youngest and surviving son of the Nawab Begam, who abdicated in his favour in 1926: permanent salute of 19 guns. In 1927 the King Emperor recognised the right of a daughter of a Ruler to succeed in the absence of a son; and a Legislative Council was established. Indore has an area of 9,519 sq. miles, a population of 1,151,598, and an approximate revenue of 124 lakhs. The Ruler is H.H. Maharajadhiraja Yeshwant Rao II. Holkar Bahadur; born 1908; succeeded 1926; permanent salute of 19 guns. Rewa has an area of 13,000 sq. miles, a population of 1,401,672, and an approximate revenue of 55·7 lakhs. The ruler is H.H. Maharaja Sir Gulab Singh Bahadur, K.C.S.I.; born 1903; succeeded 1918; salute of 17 guns.

Central Provinces States.—Under the Government of the Central Provinces are 15 Feudatory States covering 31,082 sq. miles, with a population of two millions. Their total revenue is 52 lakhs, and they pay tribute in all of 2·4 lakhs. The largest is Bastar, which has an area of 13,062 sq. miles, a population of 464,407, and an approximate income of 7·5 lakhs, to which the Forest income contributed 2·6 lakhs in 1926. The headquarters of the Political Agent is at Raipur.

Gwalior.—This State is the principal fragment of the great empire of the Marathas. The founder of the dynasty, Ramaji Sindhia, held military rank under Peshwa Baji Rao (1720), and established his headquarters at Ujjain. From 1782 Maharaji Sindhia was recognised by Hastings as an independent ruler, and a British resident was posted at his court. The present area of the territory was finally settled in 1886 when Gwalior Fort was restored by Lord Dufferin.

The area is 26,382 sq. miles, and the population 3,195,476 (1921). Hindus form the bulk of the population. The approximate revenue is 214 lakhs. In 1922-23 there were 1,044 educational institutions with 46,075 pupils, including Victoria College, Lashkar, with 110 students.

There were 13 municipalities. There were 1,978 co-operative societies with 32,778 members and a working capital of 19.9 lakhs. Up to 1923 the capital outlay on State railways was 22.5 lakhs.

The ruler is H.H. Maharaja George Jivaji Rao Scindis Alijah Bahadur; born 1916; succeeded 1925; salute of 21 guns. The State is in direct relation with the Government of India through a Resident, who resides at Gwalior. The administration is carried on by a Council of Regency under the presidency of the Senior Maharani during the minority of the Maharaja.

Administration Report. Lashkar. Annual.

Hyderabad.—The territory of this State, the largest and most populous of Indian States, had become a province of the Moghul Empire in 1687. In 1713 the Emperor appointed Mir Kamruddin Ali Khan, otherwise known as Chin Killij Khan, of Turkoman descent, as Subadar or Viceroy of the Deccan with the title of Nizam-ul-Mulk (administrator of the land). Nizam-ul-Mulk became independent, and founded the present dynasty of the Nizam in 1724; and Hyderabad, founded in 1589 by a descendant of the Golconda dynasty which gave way to the Moghuls, became the capital. The present ruler is a direct descendant of the original Nizam-ul-Mulk.

The area is 82,698 sq. miles; and the population, 12,471,770 (1921). Most of the people are Hindus. The administration is carried on, subject to the order of H.E.H. the Nizam, by an Executive Council. There is a Legislative Council of 20 members, in addition to the President. Of these, 11 are official, 7 non-official and 2 extraordinary members. The Government of India is represented by a Resident whose headquarters are at Hyderabad. Besides the Hyderabad Municipality, there are 15 Districts and 103 Sub-district Boards. There are Regular Troops, Imperial Service Troops and the Golconda Brigade.

In 1924-25 there were 159 officers administering criminal justice, and 146 Civil Judges of all classes. In that year 31,143 criminal cases were instituted and 25,827 civil suits. The District and City Police numbered 14,619. The number of public educational institutions was 4,001 with 244,234 pupils, with a total expenditure from public and private sources of 70 lakhs. There were 560 students in the Arts faculty of the Osmania University. The revenue (estimate) for 1927-28 is 768 lakhs and the expenditure (estimate) 724 lakhs. The number of co-operative credit societies was 1,766 with 46,708 members in 1924-25. Under Industry there were 4 cotton mills, 265 ginning and pressing factories, 156 flour mills and 82 others. Trade covered 2,165 lakhs of Imports, and 1,578 lakhs of Exports.

The ruler is Lieut.-General H.E.H. Sir Mir Usman Ali Khan, Faithful Ally of the British Government, G.C.S.I., G.B.E., Nizam of Hyderabad; born 1886; succeeded 1911; salute of 21 guns.

Jammu and Kashmir.—The State of Kashmir, which had been under Hindu rulers and Mohammedan Sultans, became part of the Moghul Empire under Akbar from 1581. After a period of Afghan rule from 1756 it was overrun by the Sikhs in 1819. Ranjit Singh entrusted in 1820 the territory of Jammu to a feudatory, Gulab Singh, and after the decisive battle of Sobraon in 1846 Kashmir was made over to the latter by Lord Hardinge on payment of the indemnity demanded from the Sikhs. British supremacy was then recognised. The bulk of the population are Mohammedans, though the ruling race is Hindu. The area is 84,258 sq. miles; the population 3,320,518. The Government of India is represented by a Resident, who resides at Srinagar. In addition to the High Court there are 121 Criminal Courts; and 2,984 offences were reported in 1923-24. There were also 21,830 civil suits instituted in 52 courts. There were 9,259 sq. miles of demarcated forests. The trade in that year was: Imports, 301 lakhs; Exports, 196 lakhs. The revenue of the State is 227 lakhs. In 1923-24 there were two Arts Colleges at Srinagar and Jammu with 587 students. There were in all 565 educational institutions with 39,636 pupils.

The present ruler is Colonel H.H. Maharaja Sir Hari Singh, K.C.I.E., K.C.V.O., Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir; born 1895; succeeded 1925; salute of 21 guns.

Mysore.—The ancestors of the present dynasty came to Mysore in 1399. From 1565 the territory passed to the Hindu Wodeyar dynasty. The soldier, Haider Ali, usurped the throne; but his dynasty closed with the defeat of his son Tipu in 1799. The ancient Hindu dynasty was restored from 1811. Owing to misgovernment Lord William Bentinck assumed direct administration in 1831; and for fifty years Mysore was thus governed. In 1865 the father of the present Maharaja was adopted as heir by the deposed ruler. The rendition was effected by Lord Ripon in 1881 by an Instrument of Transfer to the heir on his majority; but Bangalore remained under British administration. In 1913 a Treaty was substituted for the Instrument of Transfer. In 1927 the Government of India remitted in perpetuity 10½ lakhs of the annual subsidy.

The area is 29,607 sq. miles; and the population (exclusive of the civil and military station of Bangalore) 5,859,952 (1921), nearly a 1 Hindu. The administration is carried on under the Maharaja by the Dewan and three Members of the Council. There is a Representative Assembly of 252 members and a Legislative Council of 50 members. The Government of India is represented by a Resident at Bangalore. In 1926-27 there were 116 criminal courts besides the Chief Court, and 30 civil courts. There were 18,449 offences reported and 37,239 civil cases instituted in that year. There were 1,748 co-operative societies with 98,933 members. The University of Mysore has 5 Colleges with 1,749 students. The number of educational institutions, public and private, in 1927 was 8,212, with 319,517 scholars. The total revenue of the State in 1924-27 was 339 lakhs, and the expenditure chargeable to revenue was 347 lakhs. The State forests cover 3,375 sq. miles. The five mining blocks in the Kolar Gold Fields area produced 382,899 ounces of fine gold in 1927.

The Ruler is Colonel H.H. Maharaja Sir Sri Krishnaraja Wadiyar Bahadur, G.C.S.I., G.B.E.; born 1884; succeeded 1895; salute of 21 guns.

Administration Report. Bangalore. Annual.

North-West Frontier Agencies and Tribal Areas.—Between the border of the British Districts of the N.W. Frontier Province and the Afghan frontier is the tribal territory. The Government of India exercises the minimum of interference. The region is divided into five Political Agencies. Malakand (Dir, Swat and Chitral), Khyber, Kurram, North Waziristan and South Waziristan. There are, further, areas known as Tribal Areas under the political control of the Deputy Commissioners of the five British Districts. All are under the Chief Commissioner of the N.W. Frontier Province in his capacity of Agent to the Governor-General. Only in Chitral can anything approaching an organised State be said to exist. Chitral is ruled by H.H. Sir Shujaulmulk, K.C.I.E., the Mehtar of Chitral.

The area under tribal territory, including that of the Agencies, beyond the British border is approximately 25,500 sq. miles, with a population of 2,825,136. The protective units are the North Waziristan Scouts, South Waziristan Scouts, Kurram Militia and the Chitral Scouts in the Frontier Corps; a Frontier Constabulary; and Levies and Khassadars.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

Constitution and Government.

The Straits Settlements, a Crown colony, comprise Singapore, Penang (including Province Wellesley and the Dindings), and Malacca. Malacca is one of the oldest European settlements in the East, having been occupied by the Portuguese in 1511, and held by them until driven out by the Dutch in 1641. It was transferred to the English in 1824. Penang was the first British settlement in the Malay Peninsula, having been ceded to the East India Company in 1786. Singapore was important in the fourteenth century, but was destroyed by the Javanese in 1377, and was almost uninhabited until 1819, when it was ceded by the Johore princes. In 1826 these three settlements were incorporated under one government, which was transferred from the control of the Indian Government to that of the Secretary of State for the Colonies on April 1, 1867. The Cocos Islands were placed under the Straits Settlements in 1886, and Christmas Island in 1889. On January 1, 1907, the boundaries of the Colony were extended so as to include the Colony of Labuan.

172 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS

The administration of the colony is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, composed of the General Officer commanding the troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Resident Councillors of Penang and Malacca, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Colonial Engineer and two unofficial members. There is a Legislative Council, consisting of the officer commanding the troops, twelve other official members, and thirteen unofficial, eleven of the latter nominated and two elected by the Chamber of Commerce at Singapore and Penang.

Governor.—Sir Hugh C. Clifford, M.C.S., G.C.M.G., G.B.E. (March 24, 1927).

Colonial Secretary.—Sir Hayes Marriott, K.B.E., C.M.G.

The Governor is also High Commissioner for the Federated Malay States of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, High Commissioner of Brunei, and British Agent for North Borneo and Sarawak.

There are municipal bodies in each settlement, the members of which are appointed by the Governor.

Area and Population.

The total area of the colony, with dependencies, is about 1,600 sq. miles. Singapore is an island about twenty-seven miles long by fourteen wide, with an area of 217 square miles, separated from the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula by a strait three-quarters of a mile in width. A number of small islands adjacent form part of the settlement. The seat of government is the town of Singapore, at the south-eastern point of the island. Penang is an island of 108 square miles, off the west coast of the Malayan Peninsula, and at the northern entrance of the Straits of Malacca. On the opposite shore of the mainland, distant from two to ten miles, is Province Wellesley, a strip of territory forming part of the Settlement of Penang, averaging eight miles in width, and extending forty-five miles along the coast, including ten miles of territory to the south of the Krian; total area 280 square miles. The chief town of Penang is George Town. Off the coast of Perak is the small island of Pangkor, which, together with a strip of the mainland, is British territory, the whole being known as the Dindings. Malacca is on the western coast of the peninsula between Singapore and Penang—about 110 miles from the former and 240 from the latter; it is a strip of territory 42 miles in length, and from eight to 25 miles in breadth, with an area of 720 square miles.

The population, according to the census of 1921, was 883,769 (558,741 males and 325,028 females). The estimated population for 1926 and the census totals in 1921, inclusive of the military, are as follows:—

In 1926 there were 348,593 immigrants from China, and 174,795 from Southern India.

Education.

There is an Education Board consisting of official and unofficial members, and provision exists for an Education Rate. Vernacular instruction is provided for Malays free of charge, and attendance is compulsory. Instruction in English for all nationalities is provided in Government and numerous aided schools, and fees are charged. All the Government schools are unsectarian. There is a reformatory in Singapore for juvenile offenders and vagrants, where industrial instruction is provided.

The numbers of schools and scholars in 1926 were as follows :—

—	No. of Schools	Enrol- ment	Attend- ance
Government English schools (boys and girls) . .	17	6,995	6,693
Grant-in-aid English schools (boys and girls) . .	29	14,746	13,809

Total . . . . .	274	41,120	38,332

The expenditure on education was 342,990£.

There is a joint training college for teachers in the Federated Malay States

Justice and Crime.

The law in force is contained in local ordinances and in such English and Indian Acts and Orders in Council as are applicable to the colony. The Indian Penal Code, with slight alterations, has been adopted, and there is a Civil Procedure Code based on the English Judicature Acts. There is a Supreme Court which holds assizes at Singapore and Penang every two months, and quarterly at Malacca, civil sittings monthly at Singapore and Penang, and once a quarter at Malacca.

There are, besides, district courts, police courts and marine magistrates' courts. Convictions before the Superior Courts in 1925 were 221; before the other courts, 43,145 persons. Police force, actual strength 3,323 in 1926. Criminal prisoners admitted to the gaols in 1923, 4,083.

Finance.

174 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS

The leading items of revenue for 1926 were: licences, excise, and internal revenue not otherwise classified, 3,229,632*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 247,379*l.*; fees of court or office, payments for specific services, and reimbursements in aid, 139,010*l.*; rents of Government property, 193,980*l.*; interest, 318,360*l.*; land sales, 61,106*l.* Chief items of expenditure: military expenditure, 462,368*l.*; civil service, 77,824*l.*; marine, 74,638*l.*; police, 291,869*l.*; legal, 49,265*l.*; hospitals and dispensaries, 230,202*l.*; medical, 53,909*l.*; education, 129,043*l.*; post office, 178,458*l.*; Government monopolies, 229,807*l.*; public works, 741,565*l.*; pensions, 165,948*l.*

The debt on December 31, 1926, amounted to 6,913,352*l.* borrowed for public works: 9,385,623*l.* war loan; and 9,855,000*l.* other loans lent to Federated Malay States Government, Johore, and municipalities; total, 25,654,975*l.*

Commerce.

The Straits ports are free from customs duties, and their trade, centred at Singapore, is a transit trade. The chief exports comprise tin, pepper, nutmegs, mace, sago, tapioca, buffalo hides and horns, rattans, gutta-percha, rubber, gambier, gum, copra. The cultivation of rice is giving place to rubber and coconuts.

Imports and exports for five years (inclusive of treasure and inclusive of trade with the Federated Malay States), including the trade of Labuan and Christmas Island:—

Imports exclude transshipment goods. Exports do not include coal supplied to ships' bunkers, ships' stores, telegraph cables, &c., materials for building and repairing vessels, and, since 1913, they also exclude Para rubber from the Federated Malay States, transhipped in the Colony.

Trade of the Straits Settlements during two years (inclusive of inter-colonial trade):—

Transit trade, goods changing bottom at Singapore, or landed and stored awaiting re-shipment, is not included in the import and export statistics. The statistics cover goods brought for sale into Singapore and purchased there, either for consumption or for sale to other places whither they are said to be exported. Exchange fluctuations affect the value of past statistical results, in times of low exchange the dollar value of goods having their origin in gold countries being enhanced; the same probably holding good, to a less extent, in the case of produce exported, but the dollar having been fixed early in 1906 at 2s. 4d., this is the rate adopted since.

The following figures are taken from the British Board of Trade Returns, the imports including produce from Borneo, Sarawak, and other eastern places transhipped at Singapore, which is thus entered as the place of export:—

Exports of foreign and Colonial produce to the Straits . . . . .	152,616	159,968	246,091	328,457	333,954

Shipping and Navigation.

The total number of merchant vessels entered at the ports of the Colony during 1926, exclusive of native craft, was 11,898, with a tonnage of 18,979,478. The number of native craft was 31,272, with a tonnage of 1,113,737. The number of merchant vessels cleared at the ports of the colony and dependencies was 11,918, with a tonnage of 19,049,152. The total number of native craft cleared in 1926 was 31,708, with a tonnage of 1,125,853.

Communications.

There is a railway from Singapore to Woodlands on the Johore Straits, and thence across the Johore Causeway to Johore Bahru. The Federated Malay States Railway extends from Parit Buntar in Krian to Kuala Prai in Province Wellesley, whence are steam ferries to Penang. There is a railway from Malacca to Tampin in Negri Sembilan. All the railways have a gauge of one metre, and form a part of the Federated Malay States Railway system, a continuation of which through Johore was opened in 1909. There are electric tramway systems in Singapore and Penang. There are cables connecting Singapore and Penang, and land lines from Singapore to Johore, Malacca, Kuala Lumpur, Ipoh, and Penang, from Penang to Alor Star (Kedah), Song Kila (Siam), Taiping, Ipoh, Kuala Lumpur and Singapore, and from Malacca to Tampin and Kuala Lumpur.

In 1926, 16,273,688 letters and other articles of correspondence were posted, and 20,977,744 delivered. The number of letters sent to China in clubbed packets was 2,063,502. The parcels posted numbered 185,291, those delivered 155,460.

From Labuan there are telegraph cables connecting with Hong Kong, Singapore and Sandakan.

Wireless stations exist at Paya Lebar on Singapore Island and at Penaga in Province Wellesley; their functions at present are limited to ship traffic (except for traffic with Burma, Christmas Island and Kuching in Sarawak).

Money, Weights, and Measures.

There are twenty-seven banks with establishments in the Colony. The amount of deposits in the Post Office Savings Bank on December 31, 1925, was 3,067,801 dollars.

The dollar, value 2s. 4d., is the standard coin of the Colony, and with the half-dollar and the British sovereign is legal tender for the payment of any amount. A bill was introduced in 1923 to base the currency on British sterling. Subsidiary silver coins are 20, 10, and 5 cent pieces; nickel five cent pieces; copper cents, half-cents, and quarter-cents. On December 31, 1925, Government currency notes to the value of 161,432,313 dollars were in circulation.

The measure of length in use in the Settlements is the English yard, with its divisions and multiples, and land is measured by the English acre. The native terms are, however, still in use. Commercial weights are—

1 Kati	= 16 Tahil	= 1½ lbs. avoirdupois
1 Pikul	= 100 Kati	= 133½ „ „
1 Koyan	= 40 Pikul	= 5,333½ „ „

The kati of 1½ lbs. is known as the Chinese kati. Another weight, known as the Malay kati, and still in partial use in Penang, is equal to the weight of 24 Spanish dollars, or 9,984 grains. This gives 142·628 lbs. as the weight of the pikul, and 5,705·143 lbs. as the weight of the koyan. The measures of capacity throughout the Colony are the gantang or gallon, and chupak or quart.

The Cocos or Keeling Islands, a group of about twenty small coral islands, annexed in 1857, lie about 700 miles S.W. of Sumatra and 1,200 miles S.W. of Singapore. They were placed under Ceylon in 1878, under the Straits Settlements in 1886, and annexed to Singapore in 1903. The estimated population in 1921 was about 800. There are large coconut plantations, and copra, oil, and nuts are exported.

Christmas Island is 190 miles south-west of Java and 700 miles east of the Cocos Islands, and was annexed in 1888. It was attached to Singapore in 1900. It is of irregular shape, about  $12\frac{1}{2}$  miles (at the longest point) and about  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles (at the narrowest point). Area about 62 square miles. At the end of 1926 the population was 1,043, the majority being Chinese coolies. All the inhabitants, except the District Officer and his staff and the Sikh police, are directly or indirectly employed by the company which works the enormous phosphate deposits on the island. Revenue, 1926, 12,000*l.* approx.; expenditure, 3,740*l.* Imports, 1926, 12,723*l.*, composed chiefly of machinery and engineering goods; exports, 1926, 128,981*l.*, solely phosphate of lime, value 228,296*l.* Tonnage entered and cleared in 1925 was 54,890, and in 1926 was 66,736 tons; of the latter 19,886 tons were British and 46,850 tons were Japanese. Opium revenue for 1926 was about 7,285*l.*

The island of Labuan lies about 6 miles from the north-west coast of Borneo. It was ceded to Britain in 1846; on January 1, 1907, was incorporated with Singapore, and on December 1, 1912, was created a separate Settlement. Area 30 sq. miles; the population in 1926 was 5,641, mostly Malays from Borneo, with some Chinese traders and about 15 Europeans. Capital, Victoria, which has about 1,500 inhabitants. Revenue (including opium revenue), 1926, 153,355 dollars; expenditure, 144,354 dollars. Shipping entered and cleared, 1926, 257,308 tons. Trade,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  million dollars.

In Perak, Selangor, and Sungai Ujong, which State was subsequently amalgamated with other States to form the Confederation of Negri Sembilan, Residents were appointed in 1874, with a staff of European officers whose duty was to aid the native rulers by advice, and to exercise executive functions. The supreme authority in each State is vested in the State Council, consisting of the Sultan, the Resident, the Secretary to the Resident, and some of the principal Malay chiefs and Chinese merchants. The Residents are under the control of the Chief Secretary and the High Commissioner.

In 1883 the relations of the Straits Settlements with the small Native States on the frontier of Malacca were consolidated. These States were confederated in 1889, under the name of Negri Sembilan (signifying Nine States). In January, 1895, Sungai Ujong (including Jelebu, which had been administered by a Collector and Magistrate under the Resident of Sungai Ujong since 1888) and Negri Sembilan were placed under one Resident; and in July, 1895, a treaty was signed by which the administrations were amalgamated. The new federation, which retains the ancient name of Negri Sembilan, comprises the States of Sungai Ujong, Johol, Jelebu, Rembau and five smaller States. In 1887, by agreement with the Raja of Pahang, the control of his foreign relations, &c., was surrendered to the British Government. This was followed by a further agreement in 1888 with the Raja (now styled Sultan), under which Pahang was taken under British protection, on the same terms as the Protected Native States on the west coast of the peninsula. Pahang is situate on the east coast, within 200 miles by sea from Singapore. In July, 1896, the treaty between the four Protected Native States, Perak, Selangor, Pahang, and Negri Sembilan, and the British Government came into force by which the administrative federation of these States under a Chief Secretary to Government is provided for, and the States agree to furnish a contingent of troops for service in the Colony should His Majesty's Government be at war with any foreign nation.

The laws of each State are contained in enactments passed by the State Councils, up to December, 1909, and from that date, in matters common to the four States, by the Federal Council; the State Councils may still legislate in purely State matters.

The Federal Council was created in 1909 in order to give effect to a desire for the joint arrangement of all matters of common interest to the Federation or affecting more than one State, and for the proper enactment of all laws intended to have force throughout the Federation or more than one State. The Federal Council, as now constituted, consists of the High Commissioner for the Malay States (an appointment held ex officio by the Governor of the Straits Settlements) as President, the Chief Secretary to Government, Federated Malay States, the four British Residents, the Legal Adviser, the Financial Adviser, the Principal Medical Officer, the Controller of Labour, Malaya, the Director of Education, S.S. and F.M.S., the Director of Public Works, the General Manager, F.M.S. Railway, and eleven unofficial members, who are nominated by the High Commissioner with the approval of His Majesty the King. The Federal Council generally meets at least three times a year. All Federal legislation is passed by it, and the estimates of expenditure and revenue require its approval.

Area.—The areas of these States are approximately:—Perak, 7,800 sq. miles; Selangor, 3,156 sq. miles; Negri Sembilan, 2,550 sq. miles; Pahang, 14,000 square miles; total, 27,506 sq. miles.

Population.—Census 1921: Perak, 599,055 (378,902 males and 220,153 females); Selangor, 401,009 (267,165 males and 133,844 females); Negri Sembilan, 178,762 (119,569 males and 59,193 females); Pahang, 146,064 (87,892 males and 58,172 females); total 1,324,890 (853,528 males and 471,362 females). The population contained 510,821 Malays, 494,548 Chinese, 305,219 natives of India, 5,686 Europeans, and 3,204 Eurasians.

The preponderance of males over females is due to the number of Chinese and Indian immigrants. Estimated population, June 1926, 1,476,032. The largest town is Kuala Lumpur (in Selangor) with about 80,000 inhabitants. Births, 1924, 39,512; deaths, 33,585.

Instruction.—In 1926, there were 46 English schools (35 for boys, 11 for girls), with an average enrolment of 11,809 boys and 2,946 girls, and an average attendance of 11,097 and 2,701 respectively, maintained or assisted by the Government; also 1,076 vernacular schools (Malay, Tamil, and Chinese), with an average enrolment of 56,087, and an average attendance of 50,540, which are under the control of the Education Department. The total number of schools (1926) was 1,122 with an average attendance of 64,338. There are many Chinese vernacular schools, of which 47 having an enrolment of 4,654 pupils were assisted by the Education Department. Expenditure on education (excluding buildings) in 1926 was 357,281*l*.

Justice and Crime.—The courts in the States are:—(1) The Supreme Court, comprising the Court of a Judge and the Court of Appeal. (2) The Court of a Magistrate of the first class. (3) The Court of a Magistrate of the second class. (4) The Court of a Kathi and the Court of Assistant Kathi. (5) The Court of a Penghulu. The Court of Appeal consists of two or more Judges the Chief Justice being President. There is a final appeal in civil matters to the Privy Council.

The number of cases of serious crime reported in 1926 was 325, discovered 187. The number of prisoners in gaol on December 31, 1926, was 944.

The Police Force, with European and Malay officers, consists of an Indian and a Malay contingent. The strength at the close of 1926 was: Gazetted Officers, British and Malay, 40; British Chief Inspectors and Inspectors, 53; Malay and Asiatic Inspectors, 29; Malay subordinate police officers and constables, 2,004; Indians, 1,634; others, 254; total, 4,014.

Leading items of revenue in 1926 were—railways, 2,524,730*l*.; licences, 457,536*l*.; customs, 4,156,102*l*.; Excise, 2,032,474*l*.; fees of court, etc., 456,525*l*.; lands and mines, 431,421*l*.; interest, 544,395*l*.; municipal, 260,566*l*.; posts, telegraphs, and telephones 294,289*l*.; and forests, 194,154*l*. Expenditure—police, 343,171*l*.; medical, 491,296*l*.; education, 274,389*l*.; posts and telegraphs, 219,310*l*.; sanitary boards, 223,183*l*.; public works, 623,169*l*.; other departments, 1,958,918*l*.; railways, 1,774,862*l*.; charges on account of public debt, 786,615*l*.; miscellaneous services, 3,174,552*l*.; and pensions, 357,972*l*. Public debt on December 31, 1926, 9,355,000*l*.

Production.—The staple products are coconuts, rice, rubber, sugar, tapioca, pepper, gambier, and nipah palms. The chief industrial enterprises are the cultivation of rubber, and the mining of tin. The Krian irrigation works in Perak irrigate 70,000 acres of rice (padi) land and supply drinking water to the district. The canal is 21 miles long with 16½ miles of branches and 188½ miles of distributory channels. The total area under rubber cultivation in 1924 was 1,231,257 acres; padi, 187,349 acres; coconuts, 215,076 acres. kampong fruit, 19,322 acres. The forests produce many excellent timbers, besides gutta-percha, oils, resins, and canes. In 1925 the total quantity of timber of all kinds taken from the forests, on which payment was made, was 844,605 tons, in addition to a large quantity used free of royalty by the native Malay population and the tin miners. In 1926 the tin export amounted to 45,946 tons, and in 1925 to 45,926 tons. In 1924, 14,475 ounces of gold, and in 1925, 14,185 ounces were produced in the Federated Malay States. Besides gold and tin, many minerals are found, including lead, iron, copper, mercury, arsenic, manganese, wolfram, scheelite, plumbago, silver, zinc, and coal, but with the exception of coal, they have not so far been discovered in workable form. The exports of tungsten ore in 1926 were 89 tons. The labour force engaged in mining at the end of 1926 was 110,293.

Commerce.—The trade (excluding bullion and specie) was as follows in 1926, with total for 1925:—

—	Perak	Selangor	Negri Sembilan	Pahang	Total 1926	Total 1925
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Imports .	6,870,715	10,402,464	1,781,602	856,355	19,861,136	15,596,808

Shipping, 1926. The total number of vessels, exclusive of native craft entered and cleared at the various ports in the F.M.S. was 11,093 with a tonnage of 6,714,015. The number of native craft entered and cleared was 26,796 with an aggregate tonnage of 395,453.

Communications.—There were in 1926, 2,565 miles of metalled cart roads, 160 miles of unmetalled roads, and 1,950 miles of bridle roads and paths; also more than 860 miles of paths maintained by the Forest Department. The Government has made, purchased, leased, or is making, the railway systems of the whole peninsula south of the Siamese boundary, including the railway on Singapore Island. When the system is complete, there will be a main trunk line throughout the peninsula, diverging at Gemas in Negri Sembilan into West Coast and East Coast lines, and linking up with the Southern Siamese railway system on the Perlis-Siam and Kelantan-Siam boundaries respectively. The two Siamese lines converge at Haad Yai, in Singora, and thence a single line continues north to Bangkok. On the West Coast, the line is open for traffic from Singapore to Padang Besar (Perlis Siamese boundary), 585 miles, and on the East Coast from Singapore to Chigar Perah (in Pahang). A section in Kelantan from Tunpat to Krai (53 miles), and one from Pasir Mas to Golok (Kelantan-Siam boundary) (12 miles) are also open. The Siamese line from the Golok to Haad Yai was opened on November 1, 1921, thus making through rail communication between Kelantan and the rest of the Peninsula. The section in Johore, from Johore Bahru to Gemas (120 miles), is leased from the Johore Government. The total length of track open for traffic was 1,073 miles in 1926. The lines under construction during 1926 were about 118.7 miles. A causeway, carrying a double line of railway and a roadway, connects Singapore with the mainland across the Johore Straits.

There were, in 1926, 101 post offices and 57 other places for postal business. In that year 30,053,240 postal packets (registered letters, 1,081,266, and parcels, 256,759) were received and delivered. In 1926 there were 2,618 miles of telegraph and telephone lines, and 19,861 miles of overhead wire, of which 16,872 were telephone wires. In addition there were 79 miles of underground cables containing 7,774 miles of wire single line. The net revenue collected by the department amounted to 294,287 $\frac{1}{2}$ l., and expenditure 309,453 $\frac{1}{2}$ l. Savings Banks: 29,803 depositors and 421,969 $\frac{1}{2}$ l. deposits on December 31, 1926.

Money, &c.—The current money consists of Straits Settlements dollars with subsidiary silver and copper coins. In February, 1906, the value of the dollar was fixed at 2s. 4d. or 60 dollars = 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ l. Currency notes and bank notes also circulate, and the sovereign is legal tender for any amount at the above rate. Weights and measures (as well as currency) are as in the Straits Settlements.

THE MALAY STATES NOT INCLUDED IN THE FEDERATION.

The Malay States not included in the Federation are five in number namely, Johore, Kedah, Perlis, Kelantan, and Trengganu.

The relations of Johore with Great Britain are defined by a treaty dated December 11, 1885; and, by an amendment to this treaty made on May 12, 1914, the Sultan agreed to accept, and to act upon the advice of, a British officer called the General Adviser. The Sultan is assisted in the administration of the State by an Executive Council, and by a Legislative Council consisting of official and unofficial members.

The rights of suzerainty, protection, administration and control of the other four States were transferred from Siam to Great Britain by the Anglo-Siamese treaty of March 10, 1909. In all four States the Rulers are assisted in the administration by State Councils, and by British Advisers appointed by the British Government.

In these States the currency, weights and measures are the same as in the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States. Their trade is almost entirely carried on with the Straits Settlements.

The religion of the Malays is Mohammedanism.

Johore (area 7,678 square miles, population in 1921, 282,284, of whom 157,852 were Malays, 97,253 Chinese, and 24,180 Indians) lies at the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula. Births registered (1926), 14,883; deaths, 12,740. There were (1926) 4 English schools and 84 vernacular schools, and an English College (with 71 boys in residence).

Revenue (1926), 18,781,565 dollars (from Customs, 6,978,710 dollars, land 2,178,477, licences 6,460,016); expenditure, 18,099,232 dollars. Imports (1926), 35,782,755 dollars (animals, food, drink and tobacco, 18,870,490; raw materials and articles mainly unmanufactured, 2,507,532; articles wholly or mainly manufactured, 14,181,541; coin and bullion, 138,395; sundries, nil). Exports, 189,261,451 dollars (rubber, 119,580,069 dollars). Rubber output (1926), 60,169 tons.

At the end of 1926, 627 miles of metalled road had been constructed. The railway from Penang to Singapore traverses Johore for a distance of 120 miles. The Johore section has been leased to the Federated Malay States Government for a term of years. Rubber estates are situated on either side along practically the whole length, and thus, with the help of roads and navigable rivers, good communication is available. A causeway across the Straits of Johore and connecting Johore with the island of Singapore was opened to railway traffic in October, 1923, and to vehicular traffic in June 1924.

182 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—UNFEDERATED MALAY STATES

An efficient medical service and thirteen public hospitals are maintained by the Government. Police force, end of 1926, 978.

The Postal revenue (1926) was 192,525 dollars. Letters, parcels, &c., received, 4,613,572; despatched, 3,117,036.

Ruler.—His Highness Sultan Ibrahim, G.C.M.G., K.B.E.

General Adviser.—C. W. H. Cochrane.

Kedah, on the west coast of the Peninsula, and north of Province Wellesley and Perak, has an area of 8,00 square miles. The population (census 1921) is 338,554, of whom 237,043 are Malays, 59,403 Chinese, 33,019 Indians, 235 Europeans, 75 Eurasians, and 8,779 other races. The capital is Alor Star on the Kedah River about 70 miles from Penang by sea, and 59 by rail or road. Owing to the Sultan's illness, the head of the Government is the Regent. There are (1927) 49 Europeans in the Government service. The police force had a strength (July, 1926) of 735 men (principally Malays). There were at the end of July 1926, 70 Government schools (about 6,400 pupils), 11 telegraph offices, and 13 post offices. A telephone system extends throughout the State, the wire mileage in 1926 being 1,570. The railway connecting the Federated Malay States and Siam passes through the State. A metalled road (26 miles) connects Alor Star with Perlis, and (29 miles) with the Senggora frontier (Siam), and a metalled road (44 miles) connects it with Province Wellesley. Another metalled road (7 miles) connects Baling with Upper Perak in the direction and with Province Wellesley in the opposite direction. The total mileage of metalled road (1926) is 858. 189 miles of canal were maintained in July 1926. The revenue of the State for the year 1926 (Mohammedan year 1345) was 9,179,487 dollars, including Customs, 3,770,011; lands, 972,802; and land sales, 415,779 dollars; and the expenditure, 5,481,218 dollars. Public debt, July, 1926, nil. The principal produce of North Kedah is rice. There are rubber (output 1924, 16,466 tons; export, 1926, 24,674 tons), coconut, and tapioca estates in South Kedah. Several steamers ply between Penang and the various ports of Kedah. Kedah internal trade (1925-26): imports, 10,436,931 dollars; exports, 50,569,669 dollars. Postal and telegraph revenue, 1926, 103,521 dollars; expenditure, 150,405 dollars. Postal articles dealt with, 2,540,602.

Ruler.—H.H. Sultan Sir Abdul Hamid Halim Shah, K.C.M.G., ibni Almarhum Sultan Ahmad Tajudin Mukarram Shah (succeeded in 1881).

Regent.—R.H. Tonku Ibrahim, C.M.G., C.V.O.

British Adviser.—T. W. Clayton, M.C.S.

Perlis, on the west coast of the Peninsula and north of Kedah, has an area of about 316 square miles and a population (1921 census) of 40,091. Malays numbered 34,167 of the population, Chinese 3,589, Indians 816, and other races 1,519. Police force (1927) 76 N.C.O.'s and men. Seventeen boys' and 2 girls' schools were maintained in 1927 with about 2,000 pupils. The principal products are rice, tin, and coconuts. There are guano deposits. There are 36½ miles of metalled and 15½ miles of gravelled road in the State. The revenue for 1945 A.H. (1926-27) was 614,666 dollars (customs 220,158), and the expenditure 680,768 dollars. Public debt, 1927 100,000 dollars.

Ruler.—H.H. Raja Syed Alwi, C.B.E.

British Adviser.—P. S. Williams, M.C.S. (acting).

Kelantan, on the east coast of the Peninsula, has an area estimated at 5,718 square miles and a population (1921 census) of 309,293, including 12,799 Chinese. Kota Bharu, the capital, has a population of about 11,000. There are 61 Government elementary schools in the State. The High Court, the Central Court, and the Small Court are at Kota Bharu, and there are District Courts at Kuala Krai, Pasir Puteh, Pasir Mas, and Tumpat respectively. Police force, 1926, 374. The revenue of the State in 1926 amounted to 2,471,595 dollars (licences, excise, &c., 650,744 dollars; customs, 806,832 dollars; land revenue, 629,380 dollars), and the expenditure to 1,927,134 dollars. Public debt (1926) 4,400,684 dollars.

The chief industry is agriculture. About 422,872 acres were under cultivation in 1926. Chief products: rice (214,950 acres), coconuts (60,557 acres), rubber (106,999 acres). Pepper, tapioca, sugar-cane, and maize are grown in smaller quantities for local consumption. The jungle which covers a large part of the State produces some serviceable timber, resin, and rattans and bamboos. The State supports cattle (108,500 in 1926), buffaloes (25,429 in 1926), sheep, goats, and poultry. Numerous estates are owned by British companies. Mineral resources are said to comprise gold, galena, and tin, but the existence of these metals in payable quantities has not been proved. The principal manufacturing industries are silk-weaving, boat-building, and brick-making. In 1926 total exports, 12,518,719 dollars; total imports, 5,682,902 dollars (1925, 11,185,696 and 5,211,103 dollars respectively). Chief exports, 1926: betanuts, 607,078 dollars; fish, 152,681 dollars; copra, 1,070,256 dollars; Para rubber, 10,419,532 dollars. Chief imports 1926: cattle, 8,456 dollars; fish 44,991 dollars; rice, 988,733 dollars; wheat and flour, 77,128 dollars; milk, 174,611 dollars; sugar, 269,563 dollars; tobacco, 474,997 dollars; salt, 27,702 dollars; gambier, 30,434 dollars; petroleum, 218,835 dollars; cotton goods, 677,841 dollars; silk goods, 61,190 dollars; timber, 31,610 dollars; cement, 35,444 dollars; machinery and metal goods, 599,465 dollars; opium, 125,261 dollars.

Tonnage of steamships inwards and outwards, 1926, 114,264 tons. Small fishing and other boats are registered. There is regular steamship communication with Bangkok and Singapore. The principal roads are the Kota Bharu-Pasir Puteh road and the trunk road from Kota Bharu to Kuala Krai, and there are others extending a few miles from Kota Bharu. The metalling of these roads is not yet completed. Communication inland is by the rivers. There is railway communication between Tumpat (on the coast) and Kuala Krai (60 miles inland). There is also a line to the Siamese border, on which a daily service is run in connection with the Siamese trains to the Kedah boundary, and thence with the Kedah service to Penang and the Federated Malay States. Kota Bharu is in direct telegraphic communication with Bangkok and Penang, and possesses a limited telephone service. There were (1926) 5 post offices and 4 sub-post offices in the State.

Ruler.—H. H. Sultan Ismail, K.C.M.G.

British Adviser.—G. E. Shaw, O.B.E.

Trengganu, with an area of about 5,500 square miles, and a population, at the census 1921, of 153,062, lies on the east coast between Pahang and Kelantan. The capital is Kuala Trengganu, with a population of 12,456. There are 14 vernacular schools (966 pupils enrolled in 1926, average attendance 725, teachers 28), 1 Government English school (40 pupils enrolled in 1926) and 1 Chinese school (average attendance 142, teachers 6 in 1926). Trengganu was the last British possession to tolerate slavery for debt. The practice has been abolished by an enactment passed in 1919. Police force, 1926, 262. There are about 16 miles of metalled cart road at the capital, and about another 15 miles of gravelled roads forming part of the grand trunk road system. There is a telephone exchange, but there are no railways. There is telegraphic communication with other parts of Malaya. Communication with the interior is by rivers, and good native paths. Steamers connect regularly with Singapore and Bangkok, and locally-built motor-boats maintain passenger services along the Trengganu coast. The industries are similar to those of Kelantan, and the country is of the same general character. Revenue, 1926, 1,302,008 dollars; chiefly from farms, 52,895 dollars; chandu and liquor, 809,647 dollars; customs and marine, 667,046 dollars; and including land sales, 131,127 dollars. Expenditure, 1926, 1,067,878 dollars. Debt, 1926, 900,000 dollars. The total imports in 1926 were 5,915,560 dollars, and the total exports 8,052,391 dollars. Chief exports, in dollars, 1926: dried fish, 970,059; copra, 427,564; areca nuts, 253,301; silk and half silk sarongs, 567,331; rubber (para), 2,975,455; tin ore, 1,167,752; wolfram, 40,369; and iron (hematite), 349,864. Chief imports, in dollars: rice, 1,728,742; cotton stuff, 680,439; tobacco, 97,502; cigarettes and cigars, 234,760; sugar, 215,835; petroleum, 146,453; and silk, 489,262.

Ruler.—H. H. Al-Sultan Sir Sulaiman Badaru'l-alam Shah, Yang Pertama, K.C.M.G. He is assisted by a State Council.

British Adviser.—J. W. Simmons.

WEIHAIWEI.

Weihaiwei, in the Chinese province of Shantung, with the adjacent waters was, by a Convention with the Chinese Government, dated July 1, 1898, leased to Great Britain. The territory leased comprises, besides the port and bay, the island of Liu Kung, all the islands in the bay, and a belt of land 10 English miles wide along the entire coast-line of the bay. The boundary has been demarcated and regulations settled for the management of frontier affairs. The area of about 285 square miles contains (1921 census) 154,416 inhabitants, including 600 on the island of Liu Kung. The native city of Weihaiwei is a walled town with about 2,000 inhabitants.

Under an Order in Council of July 24, 1901, the territory is administered by a Commissioner. Legislation is by Ordinances. The seat of government is at Port Edward on the mainland. There is a High Court for both civil and criminal cases, subject to appeal to the Supreme Court at Hong Kong, and provision is made for courts of district magistrates. There are 3 European inspectors of police. There are 7 Chinese sergeants, 13 corporals and 192 warders, detectives, and constables. In the numerous villages the headmen system is maintained. At the Government Free School there were in 1926 200 pupils, and at 6 other schools about 600 pupils. About 6 per cent. of the inhabitants can read and write.

Revenue is derived from (1) a land tax and a road tax; (2) junk registration, shipping dues, wine monopoly; (3) fines and miscellaneous sources. For the year 1926-27 the gross revenue was 258,235 dollars, and the gross expenditure was 216,173 dollars.

The station is used as a flying naval base and as a depot, exercising ground, and sanatorium for the China squadron, which assembles at Weihaiwei during the summer.

The leased territory, consisting of rocky hill ranges with fertile valleys, is most picturesque; it is well populated, and the inhabitants are in general well-to-do. Cereals, vegetables and fruits (apples, grapes and apricots) are grown, and oak-fed silk is produced. Mulberry cultivation is being tried. Seedlings of fir trees, acacias, willows, and plane trees have done well. Those of the inhabitants who are not farmers are mostly fishermen. Some rope and line making, boat-building, and stone-cutting are carried on. The territory contains gold, but, so far as is known, not in workable quantities.

The trade is carried on by junks and steamers. In 1926, 838 steamers entered the port, the tonnage being 943,361, exclusive of Admiralty colliers and Government transports. The total volume of trade in 1926 amounted to 1,632,827 packages valued at 15,794,586 dollars. The chief imports (value in dollars) were: piece goods, 2,577,200; raw cotton and yarn, 2,436,275; ground-nut oil, 811,680; rice, 396,422; flour, 359,801; tobacco and cigarettes, 330,000; Chinese wine, 316,182; Indian corn, 261,524; ground-nuts (shelled and unshelled), 251,258; Gunny bags, 216,400; sugar and sugar-cane, 209,220; fish (salt and dried), 190,140; coal, 160,276; timber, 141,921. The chief exports (value in dollars) were: ground-nuts (kernels), 3,154,369; ground-nut oil, 1,141,482; fish (salt and dried), 177,240; fresh eggs, 126,670; sugar, 101,148; salt, 97,959; sasson, 51,450; grain, 40,476; silk, 24,000; bean oil, 16,810. Weihaiwei is a duty-free port.

Good roads have been made round the coasts and into the interior of the Territory. The value of land is rising, which is a sign of the increasing prosperity of the place. There is a regular weekly mail service to and from Shanghai. Many Europeans visit the place in summer on account of the excellence of the climate, which is unsurpassed in the Far East.

MANDATED TERRITORY IN ASIA. PALESTINE.

THE natural and historic boundaries of Palestine run from the desert on the east, along the slopes of Mount Hermon over to the Litani on the west, where the Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon first break into a series of elevated plateaux, and thence over to the Mediterranean coast, and on the south from the Gulf of Akaba across the Desert of Sinai.

The present political boundaries are: West, the Mediterranean; South, a line running from just west of Rafa to east of Taba at the head of the Gulf of Akaba, the territory below this line being Egyptian and Hijazian; North, as settled by the Franco-British Convention of December 23, 1920, as amended by the Convention of February 3, 1922, a line running from just south of Ras-el-Nakura on the coast, half way between Tyre and Acre, eastwards and northwards to Metulla (British Mandate) and across the Upper Jordan Valley to Banias (French Mandate), thence southwards along the foot-hills to the eastern shore of Lake Huleh and down the left bank of the Jordan and eastern shore of Lake Tiberias to Wadi Samakh, and so to El Hamme in Yarmuk Valley, from which point it follows the river. The boundary between Palestine and Transjordan is a continuation of that line southwards and medially through the Jordan Valley and the Dead Sea.

Government.—After its conquest in 1917-18, by the British Forces, the country remained under British Military Administration till July 1, 1920, when a Civil Administration was set up.

High Commissioner.—Field-Marshal Lord Plumer, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.O.V.O., G.B.E. (Appointed July 1, 1925.)

The country is administered by Great Britain under a Mandate, which was passed by the Council of the League of Nations on July 24, 1922, and came officially into force on September 29, 1923. This provides for the Balfour Declaration of November 2, 1917, to the effect that 'His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of that object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.'

Constitution.—On September 1, 1922, a new constitution was promulgated. It provides for the appointment of a High Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief and an Executive Council.

A Legislative Council will replace the Advisory Council and have authority to pass such Ordinances as may be necessary for the peace, order, and good government of Palestine, provided (1) that no Ordinance shall restrict complete freedom of conscience and the free exercise of all forms of worship, save in so far as is required for the maintenance of public order and morals, or should tend to discriminate in any way between the inhabitants of Palestine on the ground of race, religion, or language; (2) that no Ordinance shall take effect until either the High Commissioner or His Majesty has assented thereto: (3) that the High Commissioner may reserve any Ordinance for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, and shall so reserve any Ordinance which concerns matters dealt with specifically by the provisions of the Mandate; and (4) that His Majesty may disallow any Ordinance to which the High Commissioner may have assented within one year of the date of the High Commissioner's assent.

The Legislative Council will consist, in addition to the High Commissioner, of 22 members, 10 official and 12 unofficial. The latter will be elected, not less than two being Christians, and two Jews. The elected members will be chosen by primary and secondary elections. Every male Palestinian citizen over 25 years of age is entitled to vote at the primary election, unless he has lost his civil rights or claims to be a foreign subject, or under foreign protection, or is otherwise disqualified. The number of secondary electors to be elected in each electoral area is determined on the basis that every 200 primary electors will elect one secondary elector. The secondary electors will be formed into twelve electoral colleges according to the religious community to which they belong; and each electoral college elects one member of the Council.

In exercise of the powers vested in him by the Palestine (Amendment) Order in Council 1921, the High Commissioner has appointed an official Advisory Council composed of the heads of the principal Government Departments and the District Commissioner of the Jerusalem-Southern District. Owing to the abstention from the elections of considerable numbers of the Arab inhabitants, the Legislative Council under the new constitution has not yet been formed, and the Advisory Council will remain in being until such time as the election of a Legislative Council becomes possible.

All Ordinances are laid before the official Advisory Council and made public, as Bills, in the Official Gazette, for one month, before promulgation.

The Jewish population of Palestine have perfected their internal organisation by convening an Elected Assembly, which elects a National Committee, to represent the Jewish population of Palestine in its dealings with the Administration.

The British Government and Palestine Administration recognise the World Zionist Organisation, which in Palestine is represented by the Palestine Zionist Executive, as the Agency of the Jewish people in all matters pertaining to the upbuilding of the Jewish National Home.

There is a Supreme Moslem Council to control Moslem religious affairs. English, Arabic, and Hebrew are the official languages of the country.

Area and Population.—Palestine under British Mandate is about 9,000 square miles in extent. The population, taken by official census on October 23, 1922, was 757,182, of whom 590,890 were Moslems, 83,794 Jews, 73,024 Christians, 7,028 Druzes, 163 Samaritans, 265 Bahais, and the remainder Sikhs, Hindus and Metawilehs. The estimated population on September 1, 1926, was 887,000.

The country is at present divided into two districts: Southern (Jaffa), and Northern (Haifa); and the Jerusalem division.

The chief town, Jerusalem, which had been in Moslem hands since 1244, and under Turkish rule since 1517, surrendered on December 9, 1917. Its population in 1922 was 62,678. The population figures for the other principal towns at the 1922 census were: Jaffa, 47,709; Haifa, 24,634; Gaza, 17,480; Nazareth, 7,424; Nablus, 15,947; Safad, 8,761; Tiberias, 6,950; Hebron, 16,577; Ramleh, 7,312; Bethlehem, 6,658; Lydda, 8,103; Acre, 6,420. There is an appreciable immigration of Jews. Jewish immigrants, year ended December 31, 1926, numbered 13,081—5,947 men, 2,549 women, and children—while Jewish emigrants in the same period numbered 7,365.

There are some 750 Arab villages and a considerable number of Arab tribes, and three German Knights Templar settlements, Wilhelma, Sarona and Neuhardtthof.

The Jewish Settlements are grouped in four districts, namely, in Judea 43; in Samaria 18; in Lower Galilee 43; in Upper Galilee 11. The total population of these settlements is now about 32,000. More than 30 of them are built on land belonging to the Jewish National Fund, which was established by the Zionist Organisation for the purpose of acquiring land to remain the property of the Jewish people, and were founded with the assistance of the Keren Hayesod (Foundation Fund), also created by the Zionist Organisation. The total area of the Jewish Settlements exceed 1,200,000 dunums (4½ dunums equal one acre). The local affairs of the smaller Jewish settlements are controlled by Vaadim or Councils elected by the male and female residents who own registered holdings or pay taxes. The larger villages, Arab and Jewish, are, for internal order and rates, administered by Local Councils, constituted under Ordinance, which exercise modified municipal powers.

Instruction.—The approximate number of children between the ages of 3 and 18 years in Palestine is as follows: Moslems, 175,000; Jews, 48,000; Christians, 25,000. The schools maintained by the Government number 314, and contain 19,737 scholars, the great majority of whom are Moslems. In the Government Training Colleges for teachers there are 75 men and 54 women students. Technical education is being carried out in some of the Government town schools. A Law School exists in Jerusalem, in which lectures are given in the three official languages.

The Christian and Jewish Communities provide, the former to a very large extent, and the latter almost entirely, for the education of their own children.

The Zionist Organisation, through the Department of Education attached to the Palestine Zionist Executive, controls 177 schools attended by 17,174 pupils, and other Jewish bodies control schools attended by 9,307 pupils, making a total of 255 Jewish schools attended by 26,481 pupils. These institutions include secondary schools in Jerusalem, Tel-Aviv and Haifa, Teachers' Training Colleges (General, Orthodox, Women's and Kindergarten), Schools of Music in Jerusalem, Jaffa, and Haifa, Agricultural Schools, an Arts and Crafts Institute (Bezalel), Evening Classes, and a Technical College at Haifa.

There are 183 Christian Schools, including Orthodox, 22 schools with 2,167 pupils; Catholic, 113 schools with 9,438 pupils; Protestant, 46 schools with 3,302 pupils; miscellaneous, 2 schools with 238 pupils.

There are also about 50 private Moslem schools mainly maintained by local committees; these provide for about 3,500 children. Two of these schools are secondary.

Most non-Government schools receive a capitation grant-in-aid from the Department of Education.

A Hebrew University on Mount Scopus, Jerusalem, was inaugurated on April 1, 1925.

Justice.—The Courts in Palestine are either civil or religious courts. The former have jurisdiction over local subjects in all matters save those of personal status and Wakfs or charitable endowments, and over foreign subjects in all matters, subject to the provisions mentioned below.

There is a Magistrate's Court in every sub-district, and in the larger towns such as Jerusalem, Jaffa, and Haifa, two such courts. The magistrate is in every case a Palestinian and has jurisdiction in first instance in minor criminal cases for which the punishment is not more than one year's imprisonment, and in civil cases where the subject-matter does not exceed £E100.

There are four District Courts, each composed of a British President and two Palestinian judges. They serve respectively the sub-Districts of Jerusalem, Hebron, and Be-rsheba; Jaffa and Gaza; Nablus, Jenin, Tulkarem, and Nazareth; and Haifa, Acre, Tiberias, and Safad. They go on circuit within the area of their jurisdiction. A District Court has jurisdiction in first instance over all crimes except those punishable with death, and civil cases outside the jurisdiction of a magistrate; it also hears appeals from the decisions of magistrates both in civil and in criminal cases. Crimes punishable with death are tried by the Court of Criminal Assize, which consists of the Chief Justice or Senior British Judge of the Supreme Court sitting with the District Court.

The highest Court in Palestine is the Supreme Court, which is composed of a British Chief Justice and one other British judge and four Palestinian judges. The Court sits in two forms: (1) as a Court of Appeal, in which capacity it has appellate jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters decided in first instance by the District Courts, the Land Courts and the Court of Criminal Assize; (2) as a High Court of Justice, in which capacity it hears applications of the nature of habeas corpus and of mandamus proceedings.

The Court of Appeal is composed normally of three judges, while the High Court may sit with two judges. In either case a British judge presides. An appeal lies from the Supreme Court in civil cases to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council where the value of the suit exceeds £E500, and leave to appeal may be granted where the suit is of less value.

A Bench of honorary magistrates has been established in Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa, and other towns, who try contraventions for which the maximum penalty does not exceed £E5 fine and 15 days imprisonment.

Special arrangements exist in the Beersheba sub-district, where minor cases are disposed of according to tribal custom by the Court of Sheikhs. The District Court of Jerusalem visits Beersheba every month to hear appeals from the local courts and to try more serious criminal cases.

All matters of personal status affecting Moslems are within the jurisdiction of the Sharia Courts. A Sharia Court consists of a Kadi, and appeals from his decision lie to the Moslem Court of Appeal, which is composed of a President and two members.

Jewish Religious Courts have exclusive jurisdiction in certain matters of personal status of Jews, and jurisdiction by consent in other matters. An appeal from the decision of the Jewish Religious Courts lies to the Rabbinical Council.

The different Christian communities (such as the Latin and Orthodox), have similar jurisdiction to that of the Jewish courts.

Special provisions exist with regard to the trial of foreigners. The general effect of these rules is that where a foreign subject is charged with an offence more serious than a contravention, he may claim to be tried by a British magistrate or by a court containing a majority of British judges. In the Court of Appeal he can claim a majority of British judges, and in matters of personal status that the action be heard by the British President.

Questions of jurisdiction as between the Civil and Religious Courts are decided by a Special Tribunal composed of two British judges of the Supreme Court and the President of the Highest Court of the Religious Community concerned.

Finance.—For the nine months ending December 31, 1927, the receipts were estimated at £E1,728,131, and the expenditure at £E1,875,824.

The main heads of revenue for the period were: customs, £E530,100; house and land tax, £E160,000; animal tax, £E10,000; tobacco taxes, £E1,500; tithes, £E150,000; stamp duties, £E40,000; excise duty on wines, spirits and salt, £E29,000; court fees, £E59,000; land registry fees, £E45,000; railways, £E307,500; posts and telegraphs, £E133,600.

Production and Industry.—Palestine comprises four zones of country. On the west, along the shores of the Mediterranean, which are deficient here in good natural harbours, is the maritime plain, which varies in width from 15 to 20 miles at Gaza to about 2 miles at Acre, and at the Plain of Esdraelon stretches for a considerable distance into the interior, and separates the highlands of Galilee from those of Samaria and Judæa. From the coastal plain the country rises into a plateau intersected by deep wadis or valleys, which drop steeply to the east to the third zone, formed by the great depression down which the river Jordan runs to the Dead Sea, and which is prolonged for another 100 miles to the Red Sea as the Wadi Araba. This depression reaches a depth below sea-level of 2,600 feet in the deepest portion of the Dead Sea, the surface of which is about 1,300 feet below sea-level. The Dead Sea is 46 miles long and has an average width of  $8\frac{1}{2}$  miles; it receives the waters of the Jordan and of six other rivers and has no outlet, the surplus being carried off by evaporation. It is intensely salt, with a specific gravity one-sixth greater than water, and with 24 per cent. of salt. East of the Jordan Valley the country rises again steeply to a plateau and merges into the Arabian desert.

Palestine is essentially an agricultural country. In 1926 the area under British Administration, exclusive of Trans-Jordan, produced:—Wheat, 99,023 tons; barley, 69,358 tons; durra, 23,913 tons; olives, 2,093 tons; olive oil, 4,650 tons; and lentils, 3,321 tons. In 1926 there were in the country 290,854 sheep, 841,289 goats, 27,315 camels, and 4,161 buffaloes.

Limestone is found all over the country; sandstone abounds on the coast; gypsum of good quality is found at Mount Usdum and at Mount Gipsia near Melhamia (Galilee). Rock salt abounds in the Jordan Valley and on the shores of the Dead Sea, where also sulphur is obtainable. Mineral oil is said to have possibilities, but trial drills have not, so far, indicated the presence of oil in paying quantities. The Dead Sea contains cooking salt, carnallite, and bromide. There are medicinal springs near Tiberias.

The principal industries of export importance are those of wine-making, especially in the Jewish Colonies, Zichron Jacob, Rishon le Zion, and Petah-Tikvah; soap-boiling in Nablus and Haifa; olive oil in Nablus, Acre, and the district round Jaffa. Oranges grown chiefly in the Jaffa district are exported to Egypt and Europe. The orange and lemon crop in 1925-26 was 1,515,116 cases. The wine production was 1,483,477 litres.

Further progress has been made in the reservation of state forest; 644,000 dunums have been reserved out of a total area of 1,200,000 dunums of natural forest land. Extensive planting of timber, fruit and shade trees, has been effected by Government and private agency. It is estimated that between 1920 and 1924 some three million trees have been planted, including over half a million olives. Approximately 4 million trees were planted during 1925 and 1926, of which a million were timber trees and the remainder fruit trees, including vines, oranges and olives; 14 nurseries have been maintained during 1926 for the free issue and sale of stock to the public and the provision of material to Government plantations.

The catch of fish in 1925 weighed 172 tons.

Export of oranges and lemons, 1925, 2,146,457 cases.

Commerce.—Trade for 5 Calendar years was as follows:—

Year ended March	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	££	££	££	££	££
Imports . . . . .	5,471,637	4,825,185	5,266,349	7,603,923	6,513,831
Exports . . . . .	1,070,171	1,143,234	1,200,312	1,588,157	1,498,045

The trade was distributed as follows in 1926:—

Countries	Imports	Exports	Countries	Imports	Exports

The principal articles of import in 1926 were: flour, £E353,020; cement, £E82,979; sugar £E174,787; wood and timber, £E157,551; cotton fabrics, £E603,369; motor cars, £E127,976; rice, £E179,971; olive oil, unrefined, £E75,479; kerosene, £E204,097; benzine, £E173,688; cigarettes, £E27,870. The principal articles of export were: laundry soap, £E170,489; oranges, £E566,194; water melons, £E102,720; wool, raw, £E12,780; wine, £E27,038; almonds, £E18,018; sesame, £E17,060; hides and skins, £E20,237.

Exports to the United Kingdom, 1927, 1,593,078*l.*; imports from the United Kingdom, 1927, 759,488*l.*

Shipping and Communications.—The most important ports of Palestine are Jaffa and Haifa; the two ports of lesser significance are Acre and Gaza. For the calendar year 1926, 712 steamers, totalling 1,580,540 tons and 1,939 sailing vessels, totalling 34,094 tons, arrived at Palestinian ports, whilst 722 steamers of 1,596,238 tonnage and 1,995 sailing vessels of 34,868 tonnage, cleared Palestine possessions no shipping of its own, other than some small sailing vessels and power launches.

A regular passenger service to Palestinian ports is provided by 30 shipping lines.

The following railways are being worked, all by the Palestine Government:—Kantara-El Arish-Rafa-Lyddá-Tulkarem-Haifa, 259½ miles; Jaffa-Lyddá-Jerusalem, 54½ miles; Safrieh-Saratand, 2¾ miles; Kafr Jinis-Beit Nabala, 2½ miles; Ras El Aiu-Petah Tikva, 4½ miles. Hijaz railway: Haifa-Afulé-El Hamme, 59½ miles; Nassib South Kalat (Transjordan), 282½ miles; Acre Junction-Acre, 11 miles; Afulé-Jenin-Nablus-Tulkarem, 61 miles; making a total of 737½ miles. The section Kantara to Rafa, known as the 'Sinai Military Railway' (125 miles), is being worked by the Palestine Railways on behalf of the Air Ministry.

The length of public highways in the country is 523 miles, of which approximately 373 are metalled.

Posts and Telegraphs.—In 1926 there were conveyed 11,996,470 letters, 980,158 postcards, 4,607,603 printed communications and samples, 147,172 parcels, and 278,583 telegrams. Length of telegraph and telephone trunk lines, 13,922 km.; local lines, 7,104 km. Number of telephone subscribers, 1,795.

Banking and Currency.—The most important bank in Palestine is Barclay's Bank with branches at Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa, Nazareth, and Tel-Aviv. The Anglo-Palestine Company has its head office in Jaffa, with branches in Jerusalem, Tel-Aviv, Haifa, Tiberias, and Safad. In addition there are branches in Jerusalem of the Banco di Roma, and the Crédit Lyonnais. The Ottoman Bank has branches in Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa, Nablus, and Amman (Transjordan).

There are also established, in addition, a Jewish Workers' Bank, several Co-operative Credit Institutions, a Building Loan and Saving Association, a Central Bank of Co-operative Institutions and other savings societies.

A Palestine currency based on the pound sterling was introduced on November 1, 1927; the units are the Palestine pound divided into one thousand mils.

The metric system is followed by the Government, but the local weights and measures are still commonly employed by the public.

Trans-Jordan.—This territory is governed by a local Arab Administration under His Highness the Amir Abdullah Ibn Hussein, K.O.M.G., G.B.E., second son of ex-King Hussein of the Hijaz and elder brother of King Feisal of Iraq, who became its ruler in April 1921 and is assisted by an Executive Council. The country is covered by the Palestine Mandate, but the clauses relating to the establishment of a national home for the Jews are expressly excluded from operation therein. In April 1923 a Declaration was made that subject to the approval of the League of Nations, His Majesty's Government will recognise the existence of an Independent Government in Trans-Jordan, under the rule of His Highness the Amir Abdullah, provided such government is constitutional and places His Britannic Majesty's Government in a position to fulfil its international obligations in respect of the territory by means of an Agreement to be concluded between the two Governments. No constitution has yet (March 1928) been promulgated, nor has the Agreement yet been signed.

The High Commissioner for Palestine is responsible for Trans-Jordan. The western frontier of Trans-Jordan (i.e. the frontier between Trans-Jordan and Palestine) is a line drawn from a point 2 miles west of the town of Akaba on the gulf of that name, up the centre of the Wady Araba, of the Dead Sea, and of the River Jordan, up to its junction with the River Yarmuk and thence up the centre of that river to the Syrian frontier which meets the Yarmuk river at the bridge which is situated about 500 metres to the East of El Hamme Station. The eastern frontier of Trans-Jordan (i.e. between Trans-Jordan and Nejd) is defined in Article 1 of the Hadda Agreement of the 2nd November, 1925 (Cmd. 2566) and starts in the north-east from the point of intersection of meridian  $39^{\circ}$  E. and parallel  $32^{\circ}$  N., which marks the termination of the frontier between Nejd and Iraq. Thence it proceeds in a straight line to the point of intersection of meridian  $37^{\circ}$  E. and parallel  $31^{\circ} 30'$  N., and thence along meridian  $37^{\circ}$  E. to the point of its intersection with parallel  $31^{\circ} 25'$  N. From this point it proceeds in a straight line to the point of intersection of meridian  $38^{\circ}$  E. and parallel  $30^{\circ}$  N. leaving all projecting edges of the Wadi Sirhan in Nejd territory, and thence proceeds along meridian  $38^{\circ}$  E. to the point of its intersection with parallel  $29^{\circ} 35'$  N. The exact southern frontier of Trans-Jordan, and the exact frontiers between Trans-Jordan and Syria, and between Trans-Jordan and Iraq have not yet been finally defined, but the following may be considered as the provisional frontiers between Trans-Jordan and the Hedjaz, Syria and Iraq:—

Frontier between Trans-Jordan and the Hedjaz.—A line drawn from a point 2 miles south of Akaba to a point on the Hedjaz Railway 2 miles south of Mudawara, and thence proceeding to the intersection of meridian  $38^{\circ}$  E. and parallel  $29^{\circ} 35'$  N.

Frontier between Trans-Jordan and Iraq.—A line drawn from the intersection of meridian  $39^{\circ}$  E. and parallel  $32^{\circ}$  N. to the nearest point on the frontier laid down in Article 1 of the Franco-British Convention of the 23rd December, 1920.

Frontier between Trans-Jordan and Syria.—As laid down in Article 1 of the Franco-British Convention of 23rd December, 1920. The relevant extract of this article reads as follows: From Abu Kemal on the Euphrates in a straight line to Intan to the S. of the Jebel Druz, then a line to the South of Nesib on the Hedjaz Railway, then a line traced to the South of the Railway, which descends towards Lake Tiberias and parallel to the Railway. . . . The line will be traced as close as possible to the Railway. . . .

The population is probably about 260,000. Of these, 220,000 are Arab Moslems, 30,000 Arab Christians; the remaining 10,000 are Caucasian elements (chiefly Circassian) settled by the Turks in Trans-Jordan some 45 years ago following the Turco-Russian war. Most of the towns and larger villages have schools, and the Budget provision for education in 1927-28 is £21,619. The Police Force, which is known as the Arab Legion, consists of a body of 855 officers and men under the command of a British officer who has a British officer as his Second in-Command. The Headquarters of the Royal Air Force in Trans-Jordan and Palestine is located at Amman, and there is a military force of some 750 men raised locally, but officered principally by British Officers stationed in the country. This Force is known as the Trans-Jordan Frontier Force. The country to the E. of the Hedjaz Railway line is largely desert, but to the West of this line is potentially of high agricultural value. The resources of the country are agricultural and pastoral products, while several antiquity sites, of which the most notable are Amman, Jerash, Kerak and Petra are becoming an essential part of the itinerary of Eastern tourists. There are also phosphate deposits (undeveloped, though examined). Potash is found in the Dead Sea, and possibly there is oil in the southern area. A metalled road, fit for motor traffic, connects Amman with Jerusalem while unmetalled roads have been constructed making motor traffic possible from Amman to all the chief towns in the country. The road running from Amman to Maan has been continued to Aqaba, and, from this main road, branches run to Madeba, Kerak, Tufileh and Wady Musa (Petra). The towns of Jerash, Irbid, Ajloun, Kufrinji, Remte and Deraa, the last named being in Syrian territory, are joined by good roads to Amman. From Irbid a branch runs to Jisr Mejamie and Jisr Sheikh Hussin on the Palestine boundary. An alternative route from Amman to Deraa may be taken, the road running via Zerka and Mafrak. From this latter, a branch road runs to Remthe, El Hosn and Irbid. The oasis of Azrak may be reached by motor car from Mafrak, Zerka or Amman, and from Azrak cars can pass across the desert via Rutba to Baghdad. The Hedjaz Railway from Deraa to Kalat Mudawara runs, with the exception of the first few miles, through Trans-Jordan territory. South of Maan, however, the Railway is in disrepair. The Cairo-Baghdad air route traverses the country from west to east, and there is an aerodrome with a Royal Air Force detachment at Amman, while at Zizia there is a landing ground used by the Imperial Airways Co. as a fuel replenishing station. The estimated revenue of the country in 1927-28 is £227,990. The estimated Grant in Aid from the Imperial Government for 1927-28 is £68,000. Great Britain is represented by a Chief British Representative subordinate to, and the agent of, the High Commissioner for Palestine. The official language of the country is Arabic.

BRITISH EAST AFRICA.

British East Africa consists of a large area on the mainland, together with the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba. For details as to international agreements, &c., with regard to the British sphere in East Africa, see the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1907, pp. 216 and 217.

KENYA COLONY AND PROTECTORATE.

Government.—The Kenya Colony and Protectorate extends, on the Indian Ocean, from the Umba River to Dick's Head, and inland as far as Lake Victoria and Uganda. The Protectorate consists of the mainland dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar, viz., a coastal strip of territory ten miles wide, to the northern branch of the Tana River; also Kau, Kipini, and the Island of Lamu, and all adjacent islands between Rivers Umba and Tana, these territories having been leased to Great Britain in 1895 for an annual rent of 10,000*l*. The colony and protectorate were formerly known as the East Africa Protectorate. On April 1, 1905, this was transferred from the authority of the Foreign Office to that of the Colonial Office, and in November, 1906, the Protectorate was placed under the control of a Governor and Commander-in-Chief and (except the Sultan of Zanzibar's dominions) was annexed to the Crown as from July 23, 1920, under the name of 'The Colony of Kenya,' thus becoming a 'Crown Colony.' The territories on the coast rented from the Sultan of Zanzibar were proclaimed as the Kenya Protectorate.

A treaty was signed (July 15, 1924) with Italy under which Great Britain ceded to Italy the Juba River and a strip from 50 to 100 miles wide on the British side of the river. Following on ratification of the treaty, cession took place on June 29, 1925, and the boundaries of the territory ceded were investigated by a Boundary Commission during 1926 and 1927.

In 1906 Executive and Legislative Councils were constituted, the former consisting of 4 members, in addition to the Governor, the latter of 8 official and 4 unofficial members. In 1919 the Legislative Council was enlarged to consist of 11 elected representatives of the European community, three nominated members, two representing the Indian population and one the Arabs, and a sufficient number of official members to give a majority in the Council. A new constitution was adopted in December, 1925, under which the Executive Council consists of 11 members, in addition to the Governor, while the Legislative Council consists of 11 elected European members, 5 elected Indian members, 1 member nominated to represent African interests, 1 elected Arab member, and a sufficient number of ex-officio and nominated official members to give to these a majority. Until such time as five Indian members have been elected, as many Indian members may be nominated as will make the number of Indian members, including elected Indian members, five in all. The constituencies for Europeans, Indians and Arabs are separated from one another (i.e. communal franchise). Legislation is by Ordinances made by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council. In 1908 foreign consular jurisdiction in the Zanzibar strip of coast was transferred to the British Crown.

There are 7 provinces, which are as follows: Coast (capital Mombasa), Ukamba (capital Nairobi), Kikuyu (capital Nyeri), Nyanza (capital Kisumu), Northern Frontier Province (capital Meru), Kerio Province (capital Eldama Ravine), and the Masai Province (capital Ngong). There are also five extra provincial districts.

Area and Population.—The territory has an area of 225,100 square miles; population in 1926 estimated at 2,736,517, including 12,529 Europeans, 30,583 Asiatics, and 10,557 Arabs. On the coast the Arabs and Swahilis predominate; further inland are races speaking Bantu languages, and non-Bantu tribes such as the Nilotic Kavirondo, the Nandi, the Lambwa, the Masai, the Somali, and the Gallas. Mombasa is the largest town; population about 39,824, of whom 869 are Europeans. The harbour is situated on the eastern side of an island of the same name, and is the terminus of the Kenya and Uganda Railway. Kilindini harbour on the south-western side of the island is the finest land-locked and sheltered harbour on the east coast of Africa and is accessible to vessels of deep draught. The principal river in the North is the Tana, which flows into the Indian Ocean. It is navigable for about 400 miles by shallow-draught steamers. Nairobi, the capital and the headquarters of the administration, has 32,864 inhabitants, of whom about 3,612 are European. There are about 2,324 European farmers in the Colony.

Religion, Instruction, Justice.—The prevailing religious beliefs are Pagan; but on the coast Mohammedanism has made great progress. There are many Christian mission societies, British, French, Italian, Swedish, and American, several being Roman Catholic. There were twenty (including 6 European) Government schools in operation in 1925, and over 900 mission and native schools. The Supreme Court is at Nairobi, and sessions are held at Mombasa, Nakuru, Eldoret, Kisumu, and other places. District Courts presided over by magistrates are held in each district. In native cases local ideas and customs are considered. The legal status of slavery has been abolished throughout East Africa.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for 6 years :—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1922	1,649,082	1,972,212	1925	2,430,509	2,339,996
1923	1,839,447	2,137,633	1926	2,627,223	2,414,681

Of the revenue for 1926, customs accounted for 741,374*l.*; licences, duties, taxes, etc., 842,587*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 148,258*l.*; port, harbour and light dues, 21,357*l.*; fees of court, etc., 125,734*l.*; earnings of Govt. depts., 48,713*l.*; revenue from Govt. property and royalties, 106,908*l.*; sale of Govt. property, 26,774*l.*; miscellaneous receipts, 11,648*l.*; reimbursements, 385,558*l.*; interest, 128,952*l.*; and land sales, 39,363*l.* Public debt at end of 1926, 8,500,000*l.*

Agriculture and Mining.—The agricultural products in the low-lying areas, where rainfall is sufficient, are rice, coconuts, cotton, simsim, ground-nuts, cassava, sugar-cane. In the Highlands of the Colony, where the temperature is moderate and the rainfall good, considerable areas now exist under coffee, maize, wheat and sisal, while dairy and wool industries are growing in importance.

The merchantable forest area extends over 4,500 square miles, of which 316 square miles are tropical. Near the coast are mangroves, rubber trees, ebony, copal, and other trees. The commonest and most important tree is Pencil cedar; the sawing of pencil slats for export is an important industry.

The mineral resources are not yet fully explored. They consist of natron, diatomite, gold, graphite, marble, limestone and manganese. Gold is being exploited in the S. Kavirondo district.

Commerce and Shipping.—There is a uniform Customs tariff in Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika. The Colony and Protectorate of Kenya and Uganda Protectorate are one administrative unit for Customs purposes, and complete freedom of trade exists between the two territories and Tanganyika.

Imports into Kenya and Uganda (excluding Government stores, bullion and specie), the domestic exports of Kenya and Uganda, and the tonnage entered and cleared—Colony and Protectorate of Kenya—were :—

Years	Imports for Home Consumption	Domestic Exports	Customs Revenue	Tonnage entered and cleared
1922	2,871,240	5,504,579	575,595	2,127,117

1926	7,440,649	7,844,681	1,150,593	3,108,792

Communication between the ports of Kenya is kept up by small steamers owned by the British India S.S. Co. and Messrs. Cawasji Dinshaw Brothers at Aden.

Communications.—The Kenya and Uganda Railway is a State railway consisting of: Main Line, Mombasa Island to Kisumu on Lake Victoria, 589 miles; Voi-Kahe Branch, 92 miles, with running power over the Tanganyika Railway to Moshi; Lake Magadi Branch, 91 miles; Nyeri Branch, 80 miles; Uasin Gishu line, 142 miles; Solai Branch, 26 miles; Kitali Branch, 41 miles. Railways under construction or under survey are: Turbo to Mbulamuti on the Busoga Railway (Uganda) via Tororo, 185 miles; Tororo to Mbale (Uganda) 40 miles; North Kavirondo Branch, 45 miles; Thika-Nyeri extension, 48 miles; Gilgil to Thomson's Falls, 47 miles.

The Kenya and Uganda Railway also controls the Busoga Railway (Uganda), steamer services on Lakes Victoria and Kioga (Uganda), a motor transport service between Lakes Kioga and Albert, and a steamer service on Lake Albert. During the year ending December 31, 1926, 573,282 tons of goods and 991,753 passengers were carried; revenue, 2,058,710*l.*; expenditure, 1,216,773*l.* There is a telegraph along all lines of rail. The country is fairly well provided with roads and tracks. There is a motor road from Nairobi, across Uganda, to Mongalla in the Sudan.

The Post Office of the Colony and Protectorate (inclusive of the Uganda Post Office, which is worked by the Kenya Post Office) received and despatched 11,451,700 letters, packets, &c., and 522,044 telegrams during 1926. The telegraph system has 7,124 miles of wire (exclusive of Uganda). A cable connects Mombasa with Zanzibar.

Money.—The currency of the Colony and Protectorate, which is the same as that of the Uganda Protectorate and the Tanganyika Territory, is controlled by the East African Currency Board domiciled at 4 Millbank, London, S.W. 1, who maintain a stable rate of sterling exchange. The standard coin is the East Africa shilling (20 = 1*l.*) introduced as from January 1, 1922, which is legal tender to any amount. The subsidiary coins consist of 50 cent (silver), 10 cent, 5 cent and 1 cent (bronze). The paper currency consists of notes of the following denominations: 5, 10, 20, 100, 200 and 1,000 shillings. Three banks operate in the colony. Savings bank deposits end of December, 1926, 64,721*l.*

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Lt.-Col. Sir Edward W. M. Grigg, K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., D.S.O., M.C. (1925). (Salary, with allowances, 8,500*l.*)
Colonial Secretary.—Sir Edward B. Denham, K.B.E., C.M.G.

THE UGANDA PROTECTORATE.

The territories now comprised within this Protectorate came under British influence in 1890, and a portion of them was for a time administered by the Imperial British East African Company. In 1894 a British Protectorate was declared over the kingdom of Uganda and some of the adjoining territories. The present limits are approximately as follows:—On the north, the Uganda-Sudan boundary; on the east, a line drawn from Mt. Zulia on the Sudan boundary along the Turkana escarpment over the top of Mt. Elgon, and along the west boundary of the Colony of Kenya to the eastern shores of Lake Victoria; on the south by Tanganyika Territory (late German East Africa); and on the west by the eastern boundary of the Belgian Congo. Within these boundaries lie part of the Victoria Nyanza, part of Lake Edward, the whole of Lake George, half of Lake Albert, the whole of Lake Kioga, the whole of Lake Salisbury, and the course of the Nile from its exit from Lake Victoria to Nimula, where the Egyptian Sudan commences. Total area 94,204 square miles, including 15,017 square miles of water. For administrative purposes it is divided into 4 provinces: (1) the Eastern Province, comprising the districts of Busoga, Teso, Lango, Karamoja, Bugwere, Bugishu, and Budama; (2) the Northern Province, comprising the districts of Bunyoro, Gulu, Chua, and West Nile; (3) the Western Province, comprising the districts of Toro, Ankole, and Kigezi; and (4) Buganda Province, with islands in Lake Victoria, comprising the districts of Mengo, Masaka, Mubende, and Entebbe.

The whole Protectorate is now under direct administration; but the native kings or chiefs, whose rights are in some cases regulated by treaties, are encouraged to conduct the government of their own subjects. The province of Buganda is recognised as a native kingdom under a 'Kabaka,' with the title of 'His Highness.' He is assisted in the government by three native ministers and a Lukiko, or native assembly. In Buganda, and in Bunyoro, Ankole and Toro, also ruled over by native 'Kings,' purely native matters are dealt with by the various Lukikos, but in serious cases there is an appeal to higher courts. For Europeans and non-natives justice is administered by his Majesty's courts. The principal British representative is the Governor, who is assisted by a Legislative Council and an Executive Council in carrying out the functions of Government. The headquarters of the British Administration is at Entebbe; the native capital of Buganda is at Mengo, Kampala.

The total population of Uganda (December, 1926) was estimated at 3,136,946, composed as follows: Native, 3,123,581; Asiatic, 11,613; European, 1,752. Among the natives approximately 790,000 belong to the intelligent, civilised Baganda, a race converted to Christianity by British and French missionaries. Until recently educational work has been in the hands of the various Missionary Societies, who receive grants towards scholarships, &c., for students and teachers. Their efforts are now being supplemented by a Government educational scheme. The attendance at the Mission Schools in 1926 was 110,000 boys and 71,000 girls. About 2,000,000 natives speak Bantu languages; there are a few Congo pygmies living near the Semliki river; the rest of the natives belong to the Masai, Nilotic, and Sudanese groups.

There are local and special courts of justice, and a High Court with civil and criminal jurisdiction. The appeal court consists of the judges of the High Courts of the Colony of Kenya, Uganda, Nyasaland, and Zanzibar. In 1926, 5,141 criminal cases were tried, 199 of which were cases of serious crime. There is an armed constabulary force under a British Commissioner of Police and British officers. There is also a volunteer reserve of Europeans.

Cotton is the principal product, and is grown almost entirely by natives. The area under cultivation in 1926 was estimated at about 583,400 acres. Other products are coffee, Para rubber, cocoa, oil-seeds. There are valuable forests.

Total exports in 1926, 3,597,437*l.*; mainly cotton, 3,051,791*l.*; coffee, 147,884*l.*; cotton seed, 194,887*l.*; rubber, 135,619*l.*; ivory, 18,289*l.*; hides and skins, 27,857*l.* The import figures are now merged in those of the Colony of Kenya. The trade is chiefly with Great Britain, the United States, and India. There is a uniform Customs tariff in Kenya, Uganda, and Tanganyika.

The revenue and expenditure (exclusive of loan disbursements) for 6 years were:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1921	808,847	786,375	1924	1,239,700	918,662
1922	820,865	920,228	1925	1,479,284	1,108,396
1923	999,750	938,990	1926	1,389,641	1,295,612

In 1926 the poll-tax amounted to 427,000Z., and customs to 409,300Z. Debt, 1,114,300Z.

There are steamer services on Lakes Victoria, Kioga, and Albert. The steamers on Lake Albert descend the Nile to Nimule, on the Sudan boundary, whence there is a motor road (about 100 miles) round the rapids extending to Rejaf, the terminus of the Nile steamers from Khartum. The Busoga Railway (62 miles) from Jinja (on Lake Victoria) to Namasagali, the highest point on the Nile served by the Lake Kioga steamers, is the main outlet for the Uganda cotton crop. A railway runs from Mbulamuti on the Jinja-Namasagali Railway and joins up with the Kenya and Uganda Railway, via Tororo, Turbo, and Eldoret. There is a railway from Port Bell to Kampala,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  miles in length. A network of motor roads has been constructed, and a fleet of Government motor vans serves the main routes.

Mail services by motor and relays of runners radiate from Entebbe, Kampala and Jinja. Money and postal orders and parcel post exchange systems are working in most districts. The Sudan-Egyptian telegraph and telephone system is established to Rejaf. The Uganda telegraph line is extended to Mutir and Nimule, 89 miles from Rejaf, and also connects with the Belgian Congo via Fort Portal and the Semliki. The length of telegraph and telephone line in the Protectorate is (1926) 1,490 miles. Telephone exchanges are installed at Entebbe, Kampala, Jinja, and Mbale.

The currency was based on the rupee (originally valued at 1s. 4d., but in and after 1920 at 2s.), and consisted of silver rupees, with a subsidiary coinage of silver 50 and 25 cent pieces, and nickel 10 cent, 5 cent, 1 cent, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  cent pieces. The shilling has been introduced and standardised. East Africa Government currency notes of 500, 100, 50, 20, 10, 5, and one florin, are also in circulation. New cental coins were issued during 1922. The Savings Bank had 15,052l. deposits and 1,012 depositors on December 31, 1926. The National Bank of India (Limited) has branches at Entebbe, Kampala and Jinja, and the Standard Bank of South Africa has opened branches at Kampala and Jinja.

ZANZIBAR.

The Island of Zanzibar is situated in 6° S. latitude, and is separated from the mainland by a channel  $22\frac{1}{2}$  miles across at its narrowest part. It is the largest coralline island on the African coast, being 53 miles long by 24 broad, and having an area of 640 square miles. To the north-east, at a distance of some 25 miles, lies the Island of Pemba in 5° S. latitude, 42 miles long by 14 broad, having an area of 380 square miles.

In the sixteenth century the Arabs of the East Coast sought the assistance of the Imams of Muscat to drive out the Portuguese. The subsequent allegiance to Muscat, however, was of a more or less nominal character until Seyyid Said transferred his capital to Zanzibar in 1832. On his death in 1856 the African possessions were, under an arbitration by Lord Canning (then Governor-General of India), declared independent of the parent State. In 1890 the supremacy of the British interests in the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba was recognised by France and Germany, and they were declared a British Protectorate in accordance with conventions by which Great Britain waived all claims to Madagascar in favour of France and ceded Heligoland to Germany. In the same year the mainland possessions, which extended over the coast from Warsheikh in 3° N. latitude to Tunghi Bay in 10° 42' S. latitude, were ceded to Italy, Great Britain, and Germany, respectively, Great Britain and Italy paying rent for the territories under their protection, while Germany acquired the Sultan's rights by the payment of a sum of 200,000*l.* At a later date Italy also acquired similar rights by payment of a sum of 144,000*l.* The British-rented territories on the mainland were included in the East Africa Protectorate, and now form the Protectorate of Kenya (see above under Kenya). Thus the Zanzibar Protectorate is confined for administrative purposes to Zanzibar, Pemba, and adjacent small islands. In 1891, a regular Government was formed for the Protectorate with a British representative as first minister. In 1906 the Imperial Government assumed more direct control over the Protectorate and reorganised the Government. On July 1, 1913, the control of the Protectorate was transferred from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office, legal effect being given to the change in the following year.

Constitution and Government.—The Sultan, Seyyid Khalifa bin Harub, K.C.M.G., K.B.E. (born 1879), succeeded on the abdication of his brother-in-law, Ali bin Hamoud bin Mahomed, December 9, 1911. The Government is administered by a British Resident, who is appointed by commissions under His Majesty's Sign Manual and Signet, and exercises his functions under the Zanzibar Order-in-Council, 1924, as amended by the Zanzibar Order in Council, 1925.

Legislation consists of Decrees of His Highness the Sultan, which are binding on all persons when countersigned by the British Resident under the Order-in-Council.

In 1926 Executive and Legislative Councils were established. The former is presided over by His Highness the Sultan, and the latter by the British Resident. The Legislative Council consists of three ex-officio official members and five others. There are six unofficial members, representing various communities.

Population, Religion, Education, &c.—The population of Zanzibar and Pemba, according to the census of 1924, was 216,790 (Zanzibar, 128,099; Pemba, 88,691). The registered birth rate in 1926 was 17·0 per 1,000 for Zanzibar and 18·6 for Pemba; and the death rate 29·7 and 18·5 respectively. The Arabs are the principal landlords and employers of labour. The black population is mostly Swahili, but there are representatives of nearly every African tribe. According to the 1921 census there were 14,125 non-native inhabitants, including about 270 Europeans, most of whom are English, and about 12,000 British Indian subjects, through whose hands almost the whole trade of East Africa passes. Zanzibar town has a population of 38,700.

Most of the natives are Mohammedans (Sunnis of the Shafi school); the Sultan and the principal Arabs are of the Ibadhi sect. There are 3 Christian Missions: the Universities Mission to Central Africa (Church of England), the Catholic Mission (Roman Catholic), and the Friends' Industrial Mission.

Education is free. Subjects of H.H. the Sultan are liable to compulsion, but for others education is voluntary. There are Government schools mainly for Moslems, a number of mission schools, Indian schools supported by different communities for the children of their sects, private schools and a non-sectarian school. The total number of children attending these schools in 1926 was 3,407. There is a Teachers' Training School and a Commercial School. In 1927 education for Arab girls was started under the auspices of government.

There are two Government hospitals, one for Europeans and one for Government subordinate employees and poor natives, in Zanzibar, and two in Pemba, at Chake Chake and Weti.

Justice.—In cases in which persons subject to the Zanzibar Order-in-Council, 1924, are concerned, justice is administered by His Britannic Majesty's High Court and the Courts subordinate to it, and in other cases by H.H. the Sultan's Court for Zanzibar and the Courts subordinate to that Court. Subordinate Courts are held by Resident Magistrates, Administrative Officers and Arab Qadis, and an appeal lies from those Courts to the British or Zanzibar Court as may be required. An appeal lies from the British Court and from the Zanzibar Court in the exercise of their original civil and criminal jurisdiction to His Majesty's Court of Appeal for Eastern Africa and thence to the Privy Council.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for 6 years were as follows:—

Year	Revenue from Customs	Total Revenue (excluding loans)	Expenditure	Year	Revenue from Customs	Total Revenue (excluding loans)	Expenditure
	£	£	£		£	£	£
1922	251,756	426,418	508,789	1925	341,021	577,023	543,000

Besides Customs, the chief sources of revenue in 1926 were: interest on loan to Kenya and other investments, 33,722% ; railway and electricity department, 26,519% ; agriculture, 48,759% ; court fees, fines, etc., 106,200% ; rent of Kenya Protectorate, 11,000% ; rent of Government property, land and houses, 10,954% . The chief heads of expenditure in 1926 were: public works department, 251,909% ; port and marine, 51,549% ; police and prisons, 31,859% ; railway and electricity department, 36,734% ; judicial department, 21,637% ; agricultural department, 65,086% ; district offices, 30,812% ; medical, 44,494% ; education, 15,836% ; pensions, 25,443% .

Public debt at end of 1926, 100,000% ; sinking fund, 100,976% .

Production and Industry.—The clove industry is by far the most important in the Protectorate, the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba yielding the bulk of the world's supply. It is estimated that there are in both islands about 48,000 acres under cloves and over 3 million trees in bearing, the average output of the last 20 seasons being 18,648,035 lbs. The exports in 1926 were 158,425 cwts., and clove-stems 39,550 cwts. The large plantations are chiefly owned by Arabs, but many natives possess small holdings. The coconut industry ranks next in importance after cloves. It is estimated that there are about 55,000 acres under cultivation and 2½ million trees in both islands. The export of copra amounted in 1925 to 347,080 cwts.

The manufactures are pottery, coir fibre and rope, soap, oil (coconut and simsim), jewellery, and mats. There are no mines in the Protectorate.

Commerce.—The total imports, exports, and shipping for 5 years were:—

Shipping and Communications, &c.—Several British and foreign Steamship Companies have regular services to Zanzibar and all the important ports on the coast of East Africa. The Government possesses two steamers which maintain regular weekly connection with Pemba, as well as making calls at Dar-es-Salaam.

Ocean-going shipping dealt with in 1926, 1,238,892 tons net (351 vessels); coastwise, 50,870 tons (228 vessels); dhows, 87,696 tons entered and 87,918 tons cleared.

There is cable communication with Europe either via Aden or via Durban.

There are 138 miles of roads throughout the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba suitable for motor traffic. A light railway runs north from the town to Bububu, seven miles distant.

The Government maintains wireless stations in Zanzibar and Pemba, and a telephone system in the town of Zanzibar, which is connected with the District and Agricultural stations in the country. There is also a Telephone Service connecting the three Administrative Districts in the island of Pemba. There are six post offices in the two islands. The number of articles dealt with at the post office in 1926 was 1,322,294 (letters, 1,309,915). The Post Office Savings Bank at the end of 1926 had 2,425 depositors, with 9,527l. on deposit.

The British Indian rupee is universally current; currency notes of 5 to 500 rupees are in circulation. The value of notes in circulation on December 31, 1926, was 30,37,440 rupees. Seyyidieh copper pice are legal tender up to 64 pice (= one rupee). A frasila (or frasila) of cloves is equivalent to 35lbs. av.

MAURITIUS.

Mauritius was discovered by the Portuguese early in the 16th century, but the Dutch were the first settlers. In 1710 they abandoned the island and it was occupied by the French under the name of Isle de France. The British occupied the island in 1810, and it was formally ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of 1814.

Constitution and Government.—Under Letters Patent of 1885, 1901, 1904, and 1913, partially representative institutions have been established. The government of the Colony, with its dependencies, Rodrigues, Diégo Garcia, &c., is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, consisting of the officer in command of His Majesty's troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Procureur-General, the Receiver-General, and such other persons holding office in the service of the Government of the Colony as the Governor, through instructions from the Secretary of State, may from time to time appoint. There is also a Council of Government, consisting of the Governor and twenty-seven members, ten being elected under a moderate franchise, eight ex-officio, and nine nominated by the Governor. The official councillors comprise the four Executive members, the Collector of Customs, the Protector of Immigrants, the Director of Public Works and Surveys, and the Director of the Medical and Health Department.

Governor of Mauritius.—Sir Herbert James Read, K.C.M.G., C.B.

Area, Population, &c.

Mauritius, in the Indian Ocean, 500 miles east of Madagascar, has an area of about 720 square miles. According to the census of 1921, the population of the island, including Dependencies (8,394) and Military (206), was 385,074, consisting of general population, 112,370, Indian population, 265,884, Chinese population, 6,820. The estimated population of Mauritius at end of 1926 was 398,236.

Birth-rate (exclusive of Indians) in 1926, 41·8, Indian birth-rate, 38·4 per thousand; death-rate (exclusive of Indians) in 1926, 25·0, Indian death-rate, 25·4 per thousand. Population of Port Louis, the capital, with its suburbs, 53,663 (1926).

In 1921 there were 117,491 Roman Catholics, 3,371 Protestants (Church of England and Church of Scotland). State aid is granted to the Churches, amounting in 1926-27 to Rs. 196,107; the Indians are mostly Hindus.

Education, &c.

Primary education is free but not compulsory. At the end of 1926 there were 57 Government, 94 aided and 3 technical schools. Average attendance at Government schools, 1926, 10,469 (14,244 on roll); at State-aided schools, 14,202 (19,501 on roll, of whom more than three-fourths were in Roman Catholic schools). For secondary education there is a Royal College (with many scholarships and exhibitions) with (1926) 359 pupils. There were also in 1926 nine aided secondary schools for boys and girls. The total Government actual expenditure in 1925-26 on education was Rs. 1,419,138; the estimated expenditure for 1926-27 was Rs. 1,408,005.

The total number of convictions at the inferior courts in 1926 was 17,057, and at the Supreme Court 12.

Imports into United Kingdom, 1926, 3,481,132*l*.; 1927, 3,804,285*l*.; exports to Mauritius, 1926, 700,080*l*.; 1927, 832,418*l*.

Shipping and Communications.

The registered shipping January 1, 1927, consisted of 20 sailing vessels of 3,929 tons, and 2 steamers of 2,060 tons; total, 22 vessels of 5,989 tons. There was also 1 motor vessel of 35 tons net. Vessels entered in 1926, 187 of 508,555 tons (115 British of 274,056 tons); vessels cleared 194 of 541,120 tons (117 British of 288,858 tons).

There are railway lines of 144 miles, of which 24 miles are narrow gauge. The Railway Department is run on a commercial basis. Its receipts are excluded from the general revenue of the Colony. Gross earnings, 1926, Rs. 4,048,616. Working expenditure, Rs. 3,860,580.

Of telegraphs and telephones there were (1926) 594 (including block telegraph for the railway) and 202 miles of line respectively; there is cable communication with Zanzibar, Australia, Réunion, Madagascar, and Durban. In 1926 the Post Office dealt with 1,681,122 letters, 131,342 postcards, 1,904,142 newspapers, 28,457 parcels, and 225,754 telegrams.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On June 30, 1926, the Government Savings Bank held deposits amounting to Rs. 5,026,698, belonging to 36,481 depositors.

The currency consists of Mauritius bronze pieces (1, 2, and 5 cents); silver pieces (10 and 20 cents); Indian rupees and its silver subdivisions; nickel pieces (Indian 4 annas); Government notes (Rs. 50, 10, 5, and 1); and Indian currency notes (Rs. 50, 10, and 5). All accounts are kept in Indian rupees. Average note circulation in 1925-26, Rs. 15,460,500. The metric system is in force.

Dependencies.

Rodrigues (under a Magistrate) is about 350 miles east of Mauritius, 18 miles long, 7 broad. Area, 42 square miles. Population (census 1921, 6,584) on 31st Dec., 1926, 7,269. Estimated revenue (1927-28), 6,458*l*., and estimated expenditure, 10,560*l*.; imports (1926), Rs. 384,067; exports, Rs. 361,304. Two Government and two Aided schools had (1926)

877 pupils on roll. Savings Bank (December 31, 1926), 119 depositors and Rs. 49,344 deposits.

The Lesser Dependencies are Diego Garcia, Six Islands, Pecos Banhos, Solomon Islands, Agalega, St. Brandon Group, Trois Frères. The nearest island is 230 miles from Mauritius, and the most remote about 1,200 miles. Total population of the lesser dependencies, census 1921, 1,810 (1,038 males, 772 females).

Diego Garcia (the most important of the Oil Islands Group), in 7° 20' S. lat., 72° 26' E. long., is 12½ miles long, 6½ miles wide, with 445 inhabitants (census 1921), a large proportion negro labourers from Mauritius. 483,438 litres of coconut oil were exported in 1926 from the Lesser Dependencies. Other exports are coconuts, copra, guano, and salted fish.

NYASALAND PROTECTORATE (BRITISH).

The Nyasaland (until 1907 British Central Africa) Protectorate, constituted on May 14, 1891, lies along the southern and western shores of Lake Nyasa, and extends towards the Zambezi. It is administered under the Colonial Office by the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, assisted by an Executive and a Legislative Council, both consisting of nominated members, the Governor having the right of veto (Order in Council of September 4, 1907). The Laws consist of local Ordinances duly enacted, with such British Acts as are of general application.

Land area, 37,890 square miles, divided into four Provinces, each in charge of a Provincial Commissioner, and twenty districts, each administered by a Resident and his assistant. Population, census of 1926, 1,656 Europeans (mostly in the Shiré Highlands), 850 Asiatics, and 1,290,885 natives. The chief settlements are Blantyre and Limbe in the Shiré Highlands, with about 400 European inhabitants; others are Zomba (the seat of Government), Port Herald, and Mlanje; on Lake Nyasa are Fort Johnston, Kota-Kota, Bandawe, Chintechi, Nkata, Likoma, and Karonga. Good roads are being made in all directions, and life and property are safe. Education is controlled by the Education Department, but there are no Government schools; native education is undertaken by various missionary societies. Eleven Christian missions are at work; in 1926 there were 2,702 schools, with 195 European teachers, 179,053 pupils and 115,240 in average attendance. A grant of 4,000% was made to the missionary societies in 1927 and is distributed in accordance with the conditions laid down in the Education Ordinance, 1927.

Justice is administered in the High Court, which has jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters, and also as a Court of Admiralty. Subordinate courts are held by magistrates and assistant magistrates in the various districts. Appeals from decisions of the High Court are heard in H.B.M.'s. Court of Appeal for Eastern Africa, sitting at Mombasa.

In the Shiré Highlands coffee is cultivated; in 1926, 56,931 lbs., and in 1925, 20,365 lbs. were exported. Tobacco exported: in 1925, 6,917,439 lbs.; and in 1926, 9,142,437 lbs. The area under tobacco in 1926 was 22,908 acres. The area under cotton cultivation in 1926 was 13,358 acres. In 1925, 2,291,875 lbs., and in 1926, 3,085,022 lbs. were exported. Tea-growing is tried on estates aggregating about 5,788 acres; in 1925, 1,155,781 lbs., and in 1926, 1,182,405 lbs. were exported. Cattle in the Protectorate (1926), goats, 204,657; horned cattle, 135,432; sheep, 951,249; pigs, 54,633; asses and mules (mostly belonging to the natives), 319; horses, 3.

The trade ports are Port Herald (Lower Shiré), Kota-Kota, Fort Manning, Karonga, and Fort Johnston (Lake Nyasa).

Direct imports from Great Britain, 1926, 44·66 per cent. of total; direct exports thereto, 1926, 97·6 per cent. of total.

The imports (1926) consisted chiefly of manufactured articles, 651,198%; provisions, 74,571%; raw materials, 22,474%. The principal exports (1926) were tobacco, 457,122%; cotton, 93,243%; tea, 62,675%.

The revenue in 1925-26 was derived chiefly from Customs, 84,269%; Port Dues, 26,256%; Licences, Excise and Internal Revenue, 158,094%; Fees of Court, 21,192%; Posts, Telegraphs, 13,002%; Rents, 10,909%; Miscellaneous, 6,594%.

Public debt, March 31, 1927, 727,105%.

There are military, volunteer reserve, and civil police forces. Police force, December 31, 1926, 16 European officers and 459 African ranks. There is a Marine Transport Department on Lake Nyasa, consisting of three vessels. For ordinary traffic there are small steamers, besides small sailing vessels.

There are 28 post offices through which, in 1926, about 2,017,040 postal packets passed. The postal savings bank had 535 depositors at end of 1926; deposits, 8,768%. A railway, of 3 ft. 6 in. gauge, from Chindio on the Zambezi in Portuguese East Africa to Blantyre has been constructed (174 miles). A railway from Murraça on the southern bank of the Zambezi to the Port of Beira (175 miles) in Portuguese East Africa was opened for traffic in April, 1922, thus establishing direct railway communication between Blantyre and Beira. The question of a bridge across the Zambezi to connect these two railways is under consideration (1926), as is also a proposal to extend the railway system northwards to Lake Nyasa. There is a telegraph line through the Protectorate connecting southwards with Cape Town and northwards with Tanganyika, Kenya and Uganda. Telegraphs are controlled by the Government. At Zomba there is a water-power electric light installation which provides for the whole settlement.

At Blantyre, Zomba, and other centres there are branches of the Standard Bank of South Africa and at Blantyre there is a branch of the National Bank of South Africa. The currency consists of British coin, gold, silver, and bronze. There is no note circulation.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Sir C. C. Bowring, K.C.M.G., K.B.E.

Chief Secretary.—Lt.-Col. W. B. Davidson-Houston, C.M.G.

ST. HELENA.

Governor.—C. H. Harper, C.M.G., O.B.E.

St. Helena, of volcanic origin, is 1,200 miles from the west coast of Africa. Area, 47 square miles. Population, 1921 Census, 3,747; estimated civil population, December 31, 1926, 3,728. Births (living), 1925, 111; deaths, 67; marriages, 41. Civil emigrants (1925), 63; immigrants, 48. Four Episcopal, 4 Baptist, 1 Roman Catholic chapels. Education, 8 elementary schools (of which 3 are Government schools), with 674 pupils in 1926. Police force, 6; cases dealt with by the Supreme Court, 5; by police magistrate, 43 in 1926. A detachment of the Royal Marine Artillery is stationed on the island. The port of the island is called Jamestown.

The following table gives statistics for St. Helena:—

	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue <sup>1</sup>	16,282	11,509	12,699	21,731	23,944

Imports <sup>3</sup>	44,636	47,948	51,421	57,805	56,040

The revenue from customs in 1926 was 5,000*l.*

Public debt, nil, but the Colony's assets at December 31, 1926, exceeded the liabilities by 4,956*l.*

The principal export is fibre and tow, 1,168 tons in 1926.

Savings-bank deposits on December 31, 1926, 12,082*l.*, belonging to 243 depositors.

Fruit trees, Norfolk pines, eucalyptus, and cedars flourish in St. Helena. Cattle do well, but there is no outside market for the meat. The flax (phormium) industry is now established, a Government mill having commenced operations in 1908. There are six private mills. The area of land under flax was estimated at 1,800 acres in 1926. A lace-making industry has been started. The number of vessels that called at the Island in 1926 was 40 (38 British).

The Post Office in 1926 received 352 bags of mail, 2,212 parcels and 1,436 registered articles, and despatched 121 bags of mail, 326 parcels and 2,068 registered articles.

The Eastern Telegraph Company's cable connects St. Helena with Cape Town and with St. Vincent. There are telephone lines, with 40 miles of wire.

St. Helena is an Admiralty coaling station. About two of the Cape of Good Hope Squadron visit St. Helena every year.

Ascension is a small island of volcanic origin, of 34 square miles, in the South Atlantic, 700 miles N.W. of St. Helena. Down to November 1922 it was under the control and jurisdiction of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, but it was then transferred to the administration of the Colonial Office and annexed to the colony of St. Helena. There are 10 acres under cultivation providing vegetables and fruit.

The island is the resort of the sea turtle, which come in thousands to lay their eggs in the sand annually between January and May. Rabbits, wild goats, and partridges are more or less numerous on the island, which is, besides, the breeding ground of the sooty tern or "wideawake," these birds coming in vast numbers to lay their eggs about every eighth month. Phosphates and guano are collected. The island is included in the Postal Union.

Resident Magistrate.—Hon. E. Lee Lander.

Tristan da Cunha, a small group of islands in the Atlantic, half-way between the Cape and S. America, in 37° 6' S. lat. 12° 1' W. long. Besides Tristan da Cunha and Gough's Island, there are Inaccessible and Nightingale Islands, the former two and the latter one mile long, and a number of rocks. Tristan consists of an extinct volcano rising to a height of 8,000 feet, with a circumference at its base of 21 miles. The habitable area is a small plateau on the north-west side of about 12 square miles, 100 feet above sea-level. Here the struggle for life is great: it is now impossible to grow corn owing to the depredation of rats, which came from a wreck in 1882; and fuel is scarce owing to deforestation. The staple food appears to be the potato. There are apple and peach trees; bullocks, sheep and geese are reared, and fish are plentiful. Besides being inhospitable, the island is extremely lonely. Until the middle of the last century the neighbouring waters were frequented by numerous American whalers, but these have now disappeared, as have also the clippers which called occasionally. Since 1900 the annual visits of a warship have been discontinued. Despite these disadvantages, the community is a growing one. In 1880 it numbered 109, declining to 52 in 1893, since when it has increased to the present figure of 130. The characteristics of the people are longevity, good health, and a certain shyness of disposition. It had been argued that inter-marriage must have a bad effect upon their qualities, but Surgeon Commander Rickard, of the Dublin, who visited the island in 1923, reported that this was not the case. The original inhabitants were shipwrecked sailors and soldiers who remained behind when the garrison from St. Helena was withdrawn in 1817. Many attempts have been made to induce the inhabitants to leave. The lack of educational facilities for their children was the sole argument which carried weight in the eyes of the inhabitants. A proposal to establish a settlement in South Africa for the surplus population has been revived in order to prevent the recurrence of times of scarcity. There is no form of government.

SEYCHELLES.

Seychelles and its Dependencies consist of 101 islands and islets with a total estimated area of 156 square miles. The principal island is Mahé (55 square miles), smaller islands of the group being Praslin, Silhouette, La Digue, Curieuse, and Félicité. Among dependent islands are the Amirantes, Alphonse Island, Bijoutier Island, St. François, St. Pierre, the Cosmoledo Group, Astove Island, Assumption Island, the Aldabra Islands, Providence Island, Coetivy, Farquhar Islands, and Flat Island.

The islands were first colonised by the French in the middle of the eighteenth century, the object being to establish plantations of spices to compete with the lucrative Dutch monopoly. They were captured by the English in 1794 and incorporated as a dependency of Mauritius in 1810. In 1888 the office of Administrator was created, an Executive Council of 2 ex-officio members and 1 nominated member was appointed, with a Legislative Council of 3 official and 3 unofficial members, the Administrator being president of both Councils and having an original and casting vote in the Legislative Council. In 1897 the Administrator was given full powers as Governor, and in November, 1903, he was raised to the rank of Governor.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—His Excellency Mr. de Symons M. G. Honey, C.M.G. (January, 1928).

The population at December 31, 1926, was estimated to be 26,397; census of April 24, 1921, 24,523 (11,974 males and 12,549 females). The death-rate for 1926 was 17·8; the birth-rate 27·16. The number of births in 1926 was 717; deaths, 186; marriages, 470. The capital is Victoria, which has a good harbour. Education is not compulsory. There were in 1926, 22 grant-in-aid schools and 6 other primary schools. In addition, there is a Catholic secondary school for boys, and one for girls. Total number of children attending school in 1926 was 2,735; average attendance, 75·5%. In 1926, 244 cases were brought before the Supreme Court (Criminal Side). The police force numbered 86 of all ranks (1926).

Revenue, expenditure and debt for five years:—

Shipping entered and cleared (1926), 201,339 tons, mainly British, exclusive of coasters trading between Mahé and the dependencies. The British India steamers call every four weeks from Bombay on their way to Mombasa, and every eight weeks on their way from Mombasa to Bombay. There is fairly regular communication between the islands.

There is a good road system in Mahé, and further road-making is in progress in Mahé and in Praslin. In 1926 the post office despatched and received 142,500 letters and post cards, 136,500 newspapers, &c., and 4,947 parcels. There is direct telegraphic communication with Mauritius, Zanzibar, Aden, and Colombo, and a Government wireless telephone service has been recently opened up between Victoria and the Praslin group of islands.

At the end of 1926 the Savings Bank deposits amounted to 15,143*l.* to the credit of 541 depositors.

Current money in the islands consists of rupees and notes.

SOMALILAND PROTECTORATE.

The Somali Coast stretches from Lahadu, west of Zeyla, to Bandar Ziyada 49° E. long. After 1884, when Egyptian control ceased, the territory was administered by the Government of India, but was taken over by the Foreign Office on October 1, 1898, and was transferred to the Colonial Office on April 1, 1905.

By an arrangement with Italy in 1894 the limits of the British Protectorate were defined; but in 1897, by an arrangement with Abyssinia, a fresh boundary as required by that country was determined, and about 15,000 square miles were ceded to Abyssinia. An agreement for the regulation of Anglo-Italian relations in Somaliland was concluded on March 19, 1907. The area is about 68,000 square miles; population about 344,700—Mohammedan, and entirely nomadic, except on the coast, where considerable towns have sprung up during the British occupation.

The chief town, Berbera, had, at the 1921 census, 30,000 inhabitants in the trading season; Zeyla, 7,000. There is a Government school with average attendance, 1923, of 48. Police, 511 officers and men on March 31, 1926. Convictions in 1926, 916. Revenue in 1925-26, 89,057*l.*; 1926-27, 90,568*l.*, reckoned at 15 rupees to l. (customs in 1926-27, 67,090*l.*); expenditure, 1925-26, 167,955*l.*; 1926-27, 149,125*l.* Free Grant-in-aid in respect of military expenditure, 1926-27, 45,000*l.* Imports, 1926, 307,423*l.*; exports, 1926, 245,301*l.* Bullion and specie are included. The imports are chiefly rice (56,259 cwt.), dates (47,761 cwt.), sugar (31,762 cwt.), textiles (4,064,652 yds.), and specie; the exports, skins and hides, gum and resins, ghee, cattle and sheep, and specie. Tonnage entered in 1926, 39,920; cleared, 40,870. The rupee is the basis of the currency. Government of India notes are also in circulation. Transport is by camel and motor-car; there are no porters. Besides ordinary telegraphs there are wireless telegraph stations at Berbera, Burao, Hargeisa, Zeyla, and Erigavo.

The Protectorate forces now comprise a Camel Corps of 400, with a reserve of 150 men, and 500 Police.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—His Excellency Mr. H. B. Kittermaster, C.M.G., O.B.E. Appointed January 26, 1926.

SOUTH AFRICA.

BASUTOLAND.

Basutoland, an elevated but rugged plateau, forms an irregular parallelogram on the north-east of the Cape of Good Hope Province. The provinces of the Orange Free State, Natal, and the Cape of Good Hope form its boundaries. Area, 11,716 square miles. The territory, which is well watered and has a fine climate, is stated to be the best grain-producing country in South Africa, and the abundant grass enables the Basutos to rear large herds of cattle.

Basutoland has been under the authority of the Crown since 1884, and is governed by a Resident Commissioner under the direction of the High Commissioner for South Africa, the latter possessing the legislative authority which is exercised by proclamation. The country is divided into seven districts, namely : Maseru, Leribe, Mohale's Hoek, Berea, Mafeteng, Quthing, and Qacha's Nek. Each of the districts is subdivided into wards, mostly presided over by hereditary chiefs allied to the Moshesh family.

According to the census of 1921 the population numbered 495,937 natives, 1,603 Europeans, 172 Asiatics, and 1,069 coloured. European settlement is in general prohibited, and is more or less limited to the few engaged in trade, Government, and missionary work. Maseru, the capital and largest town, has a population of 1,890 natives and 399 Europeans.

There were 531 native elementary schools with 44,252 pupils at the end of December, 1926; expenditure in connection with education amounted during the year ended March 31, 1927, to 41,412*l*. There are some Normal and Industrial schools (aided). There is also a large and well-fitted Government native industrial school at Maseru. There are 8 white schools with 114 pupils.

The police force at 31st December, 1926, numbered :—14 European officers, 1 drill instructor, 4 European constables, 28 non-commissioned officers (native) and 313 men (natives).

The revenue arises mainly from the Post Office, native tax, licences, and income tax customs rebate from neighbouring territories. Under the Native Tax Law every adult male native pays 1*l*. 5*s*. per annum, and if he has more than one wife by native custom he pays 1*l*. 5*s*. per annum for his wives up to a maximum of 3*l*. 15*s*. An Income Tax has been recently enacted on the lines of that existing in the Union of South Africa, and the collections for the year 1926-27 amounted to 10,784*l*.

—	1921-22	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . .	209,802	212,538	252,300	260,577	281,522	274,404
Expenditure .	243,078	224,547	241,570	250,053	267,880	272,627

Native tax yielded 132,072*l*. in 1926-27, and customs, 87,352*l*. Balance of assets over liabilities, March 31, 1927, was 94,135*l*.

The products are wool, wheat, mealies, and Kaffir corn. There are indications of iron and copper, and coal has been found and is used in some parts.

Basutoland is in the South African Customs Union. The total trade in recent years was :—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . .	702,125	827,054	942,279	850,978	665,014
Exports . .	689,830	803,769	958,810	756,106	696,950

The imports consist chiefly of blankets, ploughs, clothing, iron and tin ware, and groceries, and the exports of wool (427,047*l*. in 1926), wheat and wheat-meal (111,694*l*.), mohair (121,098*l*.), Kaffir corn (2,277*l*.), maize and maize-meal (3,092*l*.).

There are telegraph offices at the various magistracies in connection with the systems of the Cape Province and Orange Free State.

A railway built by the C.S.A.R., 16 miles, connects Maseru with the Bloemfontein-Natal line at Marseilles Station.

The currency is exclusively British.

BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE.

The Bechuanaland Protectorate comprises the territory lying between the Molopo River on the south and the Zambezi on the north, and extending from the Transvaal Province and Matabeleland on the east to South-West Africa. That part of the territory of South-West Africa east of long. 21° E., known as Caprivi Zipfel, is, by reason of its geographical position, now administered as if it were a portion of the Bechuanaland Protectorate. Area about 275,000 square miles; population, according to the census of 1921, 152,983, of whom 1,743 were Europeans. The most important tribes are the Bamangwato (35,000), under the Chief Tshekedi (acting as regent during the minority of the son of Sekgoma, who died in November, 1925) whose capital is Serowe (population 17,000), 40 miles west of the railway line at Palapye Road; the Bakhatla (11,000), under Chief Isang Pilane (acting during minority of Kgafella, grandson of the late chief Linchwe); the Bakwena (13,000), under Sebele II.; the Bangwaketse (18,000), under chieftainess Ntebogani, acting during minority of Bathoeh, the eldest son of the late chief Gaseitsiwe; the Batawana, under Mathibe; and the Bamalete (4,500), under Seboko Mokgosi, who assumed the Chieftainship on July 9, 1917. In 1835, the territory was declared to be within the British sphere; in 1889 it was included in the sphere of the British South Africa Company, but was never administered by the company; in 1890 a Resident Commissioner was appointed, and in 1895, on the annexation of the Crown Colony of British Bechuanaland to the Cape of Good Hope, new arrangements were made for the administration of the Protectorate, and special agreements were made in view of the extension of the railway northwards from Mafeking. Each of the chiefs rules his own people as formerly, under the protection of the King, who is represented by a Resident Commissioner, acting under the High Commissioner. The headquarters of the Administration are in Mafeking, in the Cape Province, where there is a reserve for Imperial purposes, with ample buildings. An assistant Resident Commissioner was appointed in 1923, and stationed at Francistown.

The Territory is divided for administrative purposes into 11 districts, each under a Resident Magistrate. There is a tax of 1*l.* on each hut and 3*s.* (increased to 5*s.* in certain reserves for a Native Fund), for education, &c. Licences for the sale of spirits are granted only at certain railway stations. The police force consists of 31 European officers, warrant officers and sergeants, 50 mounted police, chiefly Basutos, and 200 dismounted constables.

Education is provided (there were 10 European and 81 native schools, 1926-27). The European schools were assisted financially by the Government to the extent of 1,680*l.* The native schools, with the exception of the school at Serowe, which is supported by the Chief, are now mainly financed by the Native Fund, the charge to which for 1926-27 was 4,057*l.* The schools are supervised by the various missionary bodies operating in the Reserves (chiefly the London Missionary Society, Church of England, and Dutch Reformed Church).

Cattle-rearing, and agriculture to a limited extent (production of maize and Kaffir corn), are the chief industries, but the country is more a pastoral than an agricultural one, crops depending entirely upon the rainfall. Cattle numbered on May 3, 1921, 495,000 head, sheep and goats, 380,000. During the year 1926-27, 31,889 head of cattle were exported.

Gold and silver to the total value of 16,020*l.* were mined in 1926-27.

Revenue and expenditure for six years:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1921-22	84,982	89,598	1924-25	90,581	87,373
1922-23	91,905	82,486	1925-26	107,344	104,173
1923-24	99,996	81,574	1926-27	131,551	108,578

Chief items of revenue, 1925-26: income tax and poll tax, 21,046*l.*; customs, 27,136*l.*; hut-tax, 36,822*l.*; licences, 5,622*l.*; posts, 10,081*l.*; Chief items of expenditure, 1925-26: Resident Commissioner, 9,345*l.*; district administration, 10,852*l.*; posts, 4,621*l.*; police, 24,372*l.*; administration of justice, 4,462*l.*; public works (extraordinary and recurrent), 13,192*l.*; medical, 7,353*l.*; veterinary, 13,959*l.* There has been no Imperial grant-in-aid since 1911-12, when the grant amounted to 10,000*l.*

There is no public debt. Excess of assets over liabilities on April 1, 1927, 65,077*l.*

When the Union of South Africa was established, an agreement was made with the Union Government under which duty on all dutiable articles imported into the Protectorate is collected by the Union Customs Department and paid into the Union Treasury, a lump sum representing a certain portion of the annual Customs Revenue of the Union being paid over to the Protectorate. Under this arrangement full figures relating to imports and exports of the Protectorate are not available. The export of dairy products was in 1925-26, 22,537*l.*; 1926-27, 15,386*l.*

The telegraph from the Cape of Good Hope to Rhodesia passes through the Protectorate. Similarly the railway extending northwards from the Cape of Good Hope traverses the Protectorate. It is the property of the Rhodesia Railways, Limited. In the Protectorate are 22 post offices; receipts, in 1926-27, 19,430*l.*; expenditure, 4,925*l.* In 1926-27, 1,679*l.* was deposited in the Savings Bank and 1,120*l.* withdrawn.

The currency is British. There is no bank in the Protectorate.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

Rhodesia includes the whole of the region extending from the Transvaal Province northwards to the borders of the Belgian Congo and Tanganyika Territory, bounded on the east by Portuguese East Africa, Nyasaland, and the Tanganyika Territory, and on the west by the Belgian Congo, Portuguese West Africa, and Bechuanaland. The region south of the Zambezi (Matabeleland and Mashonaland) is called Southern Rhodesia; that north of the Zambezi is known as Northern Rhodesia.

Prior to October, 1923, Southern Rhodesia, like Northern Rhodesia, was under the administration of the British South Africa Company. In October, 1922, Southern Rhodesia voted in favour of responsible government. On September 12, 1923, the country was formally annexed to His Majesty's Dominions, and on October 1, 1923, the new form of government was established under a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, and a Legislature. The latter consists at first of a single elected Legislative Assembly, but that body may pass a law constituting a Legislative Council in addition. There must be a session at least once a year, and the duration of the Legislature is five years, unless sooner dissolved. The Legislature may amend, by a two-thirds vote of the total membership, the Letters Patent setting up the Constitution, with certain exceptions (relating to reservation of bills by the Governor, native administration, Crown Land Agent, and Governor's salary). The Crown reserves the right to disallow laws. The powers of the Legislative Council respecting appropriation and Taxation Bills are limited. The franchise is extended to women.

A native Council may be established in any native reserve, representative of the local chiefs and native residents, to advise the Governor and manage such local affairs as may be entrusted to it.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Lieut.-Col. Sir John R. Chancellor, G.C.M.G., D.S.O. (Salary, 4,000*l.*)

The Cabinet is as follows (June 1924)—

Premier and Secretary for Native Affairs.—Sir C. P. J. Coghlan, K.C.M.G.

Mines, Works, and Industries.—Mr. H. U. Moffat.

Agriculture and Lands.—Mr. J. W. Downie.

Attorney General.—Major R. J. Hudson, M.C., K.C.

Colonial Secretary.—Mr. W. M. Leggate, C.M.G.

Treasurer.—Mr. P. D. L. Fynn, C.M.G.

High Commissioner in London.—Sir Francis Newton, K.C.M.G., C.V.O.

Area and Population.—The area is 149,000 square miles. According to the census taken in May, 1926, the European population was 39,174 (21,808 males and 17,366 females). The native population was estimated (1926) at about 834,473. There are also approximately 3,500 Asiatics and other coloured persons. The chief towns are Salisbury (the capital), Bulawayo, Victoria, Umtali, Gwelo, Enkeldoorn, Melsetter, Hartley, Selukwe, Gwanda, and Gatooma. In 1926, Bulawayo had a white population of 7,650, Salisbury 5,606, and Umtali 1,964.

Education.—At the end of 1925 the schools for Europeans numbered 75 primary and 8 secondary, the latter including one school—the Matopos School—of a new type specially designed to prepare boys for life on the land. There were also 92 aided farm schools, taught by private tutors or governesses, with an aggregate enrolment of 394 pupils. Including these, the total enrolment of European children at the end of the year 1925 was 6,929. There were also six schools for coloured children, including Eurafrian and Asiatic, with a total enrolment of 370 pupils; and 1,297 schools for native pupils, with a total enrolment of 87,306 pupils. The total expenditure on public education in the Colony in the calendar year 1925 amounted to 243,791*l.*, against which receipts from boarding and tuition fees were 78,893*l.*

Justice.—There is a High Court with criminal and civil jurisdiction. Single Judges are stationed at Salisbury and Bulawayo and sittings are held at five of the other principal towns twice a year. There are nine principal Courts of Magistrate, also courts presided over by detached Assistant Magistrates and several periodical courts. Natives are subject mainly to the same laws as Europeans, though there are special restrictions relating to arms, ammunition and liquor, and there are laws particularly applicable to natives, such as those dealing with marriage, taxation and registration and passes. Native Commissioners have jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters in which natives only are concerned, but generally exercise jurisdiction in their capacity as Assistant Magistrates.

Early in 1924 the first Southern Rhodesia Loan was floated. The loan bears interest at 5 per cent. per annum, and was for 3,000,000*l.*, issued at 98.

Production and Industries.—The British South Africa Company has relinquished all rights and interests in the land in Southern Rhodesia, except in the estates which it was already developing and working on 10th July, 1923. The Crown has recognized the Company as the owner of the mineral rights throughout both Southern and Northern Rhodesia. Land has been set apart for tribal settlements ('native reserves'). The country is well adapted for agriculture and European settlers. Live stock (1925): cattle, 2,101,927; sheep, 348,753. Acreage under crops (1925): maize, 232,947; tobacco, 8,441; winter wheat, 4,526; ground-nuts, 5,067; cotton, 62,858. Large fruit orchards have been planted, and nearly all fruit trees thrive, the cultivation of oranges and lemons constituting a rapidly expanding industry. The sale of dairy produce is a profitable industry. Creameries, bacon factories, an oil-expressing plant, and, during 1925, ginneries in the principal cotton producing centres have been successfully established.

A Land Bank makes loans to settlers on easy terms of repayment, for the purpose of improving and developing their agricultural holdings, and numerous companies have been formed with the purpose of developing land and minerals.

The country contains gold and other minerals. The total output of gold from 1890 to December 31, 1925, is valued at 63,001,347*l.* The gold output in 1926 was valued at 2,508,527*l.*, and in 1927 at 2,458,862*l.* The output of other minerals was: silver, 152,705 oz., valued at 20,234*l.*; coal, 759,718 tons raised, sales, &c., 324,511*l.*; copper, 1,889 tons, 109,343*l.*; chrome ore, 135,827 tons, 337,317*l.*; asbestos, 34,349 tons, 766,381*l.*; mica, 146 tons, 20,754*l.*; arsenic, 187 tons, 6,603*l.*; barytes, 42 tons, 42*l.*; corundum, 48 tons, 263*l.*; tin, 19 tons, 4,472*l.*; tungstic, 22 tons, 2,288*l.*; antimony, 21 tons, 390*l.*; iron, 1,172 tons, 818*l.*; lead, 5 tons, 150*l.*; diamonds, 189 carats, 1,152*l.* The total mineral output for 1925 was valued at 4,134,260*l.*, for 1926 at 4,100,592*l.*, and for 1927 at 4,238,257*l.* Mineral production in 1927 included asbestos, 33,176 tons (794,215*l.*) ; coal, 1,001,724 tons ; silver, 113,241 ozs. ; chrome ore, 218,028 tons (490,653*l.*).

Commerce.—The total value of imports into Southern Rhodesia in 1925 was 4,892,180*l.*, the chief being: food and drink, 549,537*l.*; textile goods, wearing apparel, boots, etc., 1,243,144*l.*; machinery, 510,343*l.*; metals and manufactures, 775,450*l.*; railway and tramway materials and locomotives, 209,777*l.* The value of the exports, including gold, was 5,723,207*l.*, the chief being: raw gold, 2,057,070*l.*; asbestos, 636,213*l.*; copper (blister), 259,682*l.*; maize, 211,904*l.*; chrome ore, 315,397*l.*; animals, 260,789*l.*; tobacco, 157,616*l.* Imports from the United Kingdom, 1927, 1,665,271*l.*, exports to the United Kingdom, 1,871,954*l.*

Communications.—The British South Africa Company has a controlling interest in the Rhodesian railway system, the total mileage of which (including the Beira Railway) at the end of 1922 was 2,468. The system begins at Vryburg in the Cape Colony, and extends through the Bechuanaland Protectorate and Southern and Northern Rhodesia to the Belgian Congo and Portuguese East Africa. In conjunction with the railways of the Union of South Africa it provides through communication from Cape Town to the Congo border (2,149 miles), and (by a line from Bulawayo via Salisbury) to the port of Beira on the Indian Ocean (2,036 miles). There are also several branch lines in Southern Rhodesia. At a conference in London in 1926, attended by the representatives of the Company and of the Governments of Southern and Northern Rhodesia, a scheme was drawn up for the public control of traffic rates.

On December 31, 1924, there were in Southern Rhodesia 166 post offices, 35 of which are money order and savings bank offices. During the year 1925, 8,745,414 letters and post-cards were despatched; 4,131,203 newspapers, books, and parcels, and 145,184 registered articles. The postal revenue for the year was 86,470*l.*, and the expenditure, 58,766*l.* Telegraphic revenue, 76,338*l.*, expenditure, 68,330*l.* There is an extensive telephone system in operation.

On January 1, 1905, a Post Office Savings Bank was established, and on December 31, 1925, the deposits amounted to 167,215*l.*

NORTHERN RHODESIA.

By an Order in Council, dated May 4, 1911, the two provinces of North-Eastern and North-western Rhodesia were amalgamated under the title of Northern Rhodesia, the amalgamation taking effect as from August 17, 1911. The limits of the territory, as defined by the Order in Council, are 'the parts of Africa bounded by Southern Rhodesia, German South-west Africa (now South-west Africa), Portuguese West Africa, the Congo Free State (now the Belgian Congo), German East Africa (now Tanganyika Territory), Nyasaland, and Portuguese East Africa.'

An Administrator was appointed by the British South Africa Company with the approval of the Secretary of State, and had, for consultative purposes, an Advisory Council of five members, chosen by the white settlers.

By an Order in Council dated February 20, 1924, the office of Governor was created, an Executive Council constituted and provision made for the institution of a Legislative Council. This latter Council is composed of five ex-officio members, who also constitute the Executive Council, four nominated official members and five elected unofficial members. On April 1, 1924, the British South Africa Company was relieved of the administration of the Territory by the Crown, from which date the Order in Council of February 20, 1924, took effect.

Northern Rhodesia has an area of 287,950 square miles, and consists for the most part of high plateau country, covered with thin forest. Much of the country is suitable for farming and contains areas carrying good arable and grazing land. The permanent European population in December 1925 was 4,624. The native population on December 31, 1925, was 1,140,642. The territory is divided into nine magisterial districts. The seat of Government is at Livingstone, on the Zambezi. The most important centres are Broken Hill, Fort Jameson, Lusaka, Mazabuka, Abercorn, Fort Rosebery, Ndola, and Lealui. The police force, called the Northern Rhodesia Police, is composed of natives, with European officers and non-commissioned officers.

There were in December 1926, 6 Government, 3 Farm Schools, and 1 aided school for Europeans, with 21 teachers and 352 pupils. There is 1 Government school for natives, at Mongu, and a large number of Mission stations and schools.

Imports, inclusive of specie, 1926, 1,725,682*l.*; exports (including specie), 490,382*l.*, including living animals, 52,606*l.*; pig lead, 42,284*l.*; copper, 23,561*l.*; gold (bar), 2,697*l.*; vanadium, 4,498*l.*; wheat, maize and maize meal, 60,415*l.*; tobacco, 155,832*l.*; hides, skins, and horns, 15,591*l.*; ivory, 7,117*l.*; timber, 12,217*l.*; cotton (raw), 4,746*l.*

Agricultural products are maize, tobacco, cotton, wheat, and European fruits. There is timber of various kinds; gold, copper, zinc, lead and vanadium are mined; coal has been discovered. ### SWAZILAND.

Swaziland lies at the South-eastern corner of the Transvaal. On June 25, 1903, an Order in Council was issued conferring on the Governor of the Transvaal authority over Swaziland, and by Order in Council of December 1, 1906, this authority was transferred to the High Commissioner for South Africa.

The present seat of the administration is at Mbabane; altitude 3,800 feet.

Area, 6,704 square miles. Population, census 1921: 112,838 (Europeans, 2,235). The Government maintains 13 European schools at different centres, average attendance, 385 in 1926; and 1 native school at Zombode, the kraal of the ex-Chief Regent, average attendance, 150 in 1926. The Government also subsidises certain native schools with an average attendance in 1926 of 4,065, and two schools for coloured children, at which the total average attendance in 1926 was 54 and 28 respectively.

A Special Court, having the full jurisdiction of a Superior Court, and Assistant Commissioners' Courts have been established. A local Swaziland police force was created in 1907. Authorised strength (1926) 22 Europeans and 147 natives. During 1926, there were 3,307 summary convictions, and 20 convictions in the Superior Court. Native chiefs continue to exercise jurisdiction according to native law and customs in all civil matters between natives, subject to a final appeal to the Resident Commissioner.

Gold is subject to a tax of 10 per cent. on profits; base metals to a royalty of 2½ per cent. on output, in addition to any rentals now payable.

The public debt of Swaziland amounts (1926) to 55,000*l*.

The agricultural and grazing rights of natives are safeguarded, and delimited. The agricultural products are cotton, tobacco, maize (the staple product), millet, pumpkins, ground-nuts, beans, and sweet potatoes, grown in insufficient quantities for local supply. Stock numbers approximately (1926): horses, 1,000; cattle, 300,000; native sheep and goats, 200,000; pigs, 9,500. About 350,000 sheep are brought into Swaziland from the Transvaal each year for winter grazing. The territory is reported to be rich in minerals, but it has not yet been systematically prospected. Alluvial tin is being mined and shipped. In 1926 the output was 189 tons, valued at 52,947*l*. A few gold mines are worked on a small scale, the output in 1926 being 1,510 oz. valued at 6,342*l*.

By agreement (dated June 30, 1910) with the Union of South Africa, Swaziland is treated for customs purposes as part of the Union and receives a pro rata share of the Customs dues collected. Separate returns of Swaziland imports and exports are not available. The exports consist mainly of cassiterite tin, slaughter oxen, tobacco and cotton.

There is bi-weekly communication by motor between Bremersdorp, Mbabane and Breyten, and between Piet Retief and Hlatikulu. Elsewhere communication is by carts, donkey packs, or runners. Post offices working in 1926, 16. There are telegraph and telephone offices at Mbabane, Pigg's Peak, Bremersdorp, Ezulweni, Hlatikulu, Dwaleni, Mahamba, Stegi, and Nsoko. Post Office Savings Banks deposits, 1,903*l*. on March 31, 1927, belonging to 403 depositors.

The currency is British coin and coins of the late South African Republic, which are of similar denomination to the British. The National Bank of South Africa, Ltd., has branches at Mbabane and Hlatikulu. This bank conducts savings bank business—72 depositors, total deposits during 1926, 2,272*l*.

THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Constitution and Government.

THE Union of South Africa is constituted under the South Africa Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, Ch. 9), passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom on September 20, 1909. Under the terms of that Act the self-governing Colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony were united on May 31, 1910, in a legislative union under one Government under the name of the Union of South Africa, these Colonies becoming original provinces of the Union under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State respectively. There is a Governor-General, and an Executive Council in charge of the Departments of State.

Legislative power is vested in a Parliament consisting of the King, a Senate, and a House of Assembly. The Governor-General has power to summon, prorogue, and dissolve Parliament, either both Houses simultaneously or the House of Assembly alone. There must be a session of Parliament every year.

The Senate consists of forty members, eight (four being selected mainly for their acquaintance with the reasonable wants and wishes of the non-European races) being nominated by the Governor-General in Council and thirty-two being elected, eight for each Province. Each senator must be a British subject of European descent, at least 30 years of age, qualified as a voter in one of the provinces, and resident for five years within the Union; an elected senator must be a registered owner of property of the value of 500*l.* over any mortgage.

The House of Assembly consists of 135 members chosen in Electoral Divisions in numbers as follows:—The Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 17; Transvaal, 50; Orange Free State, 17. Parliamentary voters must have the qualifications existing in the several colonies at the time of the Union. Each electoral district in each province returns one member, who must be a British subject of European descent, qualified as a registered voter, and resident five years within the Union. A House of Assembly continues five years from the date of its first meeting unless sooner dissolved.

The House of Assembly, not the Senate, must originate money bills, but may not pass a bill for taxation or appropriation unless it has been recommended by message from the Governor-General during the Session. Restrictions are placed on the amendment of money bills by the Senate. Provision is made respecting disagreements between the Houses, the Royal Assent to Bills, and the disallowance of laws assented to by the Governor-General.

Each member of each House must make Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance. A member of one House cannot be elected to the other, but a Minister of State may sit and speak, but not vote in the House of which he is not a member. To hold an office of profit under the Crown (with certain exceptions) is a disqualification for membership of either House, as are also insolvency, crime, and insanity.

Pretoria is the seat of government of the Union, and Cape Town is the seat of Legislature.

Governor-General, Commander-in-Chief, and High Commissioner for South Africa.—Earl of Athlone, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., D.S.O., A.D.C. (salary £10,000 per annum).

The Executive Council was constituted (November 1924) as follows:—

The Governor-General.

Prime Minister and Minister of Native Affairs.—General The Honourable J. B. M. Hertzog (3,500*l.*).

Minister of the Interior, of Public Health and of Education.—The Honourable Dr. D. F. Malan (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Mines and Industries.—The Honourable F. W. Beyers, K.C. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Railways and Harbours.—The Honourable C. W. Malan (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Finance.—The Honourable N. C. Havenga (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Justice.—The Honourable Tielman J. de V. Roos, K.C. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Defence.—Colonel The Honourable F. H. P. Creswell, D.S.O. (2,500*l.*). (November 1925.)

Minister of Labour.—The Honourable T. Boyde (2,500*l.*). (November 1925.)

Minister of Agriculture.—General The Honourable J. C. G. Kemp (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Lands.—The Honourable P. G. W. Grobler (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs and of Public Works.—The Honourable W. B. Mudeley (2,500*l.*). (November 1925.)

Clerk to the Executive Council and Secretary to the Prime Minister.—H. Gordon Watson, I.S.O.

Assistant Clerk of the Executive Council.—W. J. H. Farrell.

The result of the elections in June 1924 was: Nationalists, 63; South African Party, 53; Labour, 18; Independent, 1; total, 135.

In each province there is an Administrator appointed by the Governor-General for five years, and a Provincial Council elected for three years, each council having an executive committee of four (either members or not of the council), the administrator presiding at its meetings. Members of the Provincial Council are elected on the same system as members of Parliament, but the restriction as to European descent does not apply. The number of members in each Provincial Council is as follows:—Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 25; Transvaal, 50; Orange Free State, 25. The provincial committees and councils have authority to deal with local matters such as provincial finance, education (elementary), charity, municipal institutions, local works, roads and bridges, markets, fish and game, and penalties for breaches of laws respecting such subjects. Other matters may be delegated to these Councils. All ordinances passed by a Provincial Council are subject to the veto of the Governor-General-in-Council.

There is a provincial Revenue Fund in each province. The old colonial capitals are the capitals of the provinces.

The railways, ports, and harbours are managed by a Harbour and Railway Board, under the chairmanship of a Minister of State. The revenues therefrom are paid into a special fund. All other moneys received by the Union are paid into a Consolidated Revenue Fund, on which the interest on debts of the colonies forms a first charge. To the Union has been transferred the public property, real and personal, of the colonies.

The English and Dutch languages are both official. The word 'Dutch' has now been expressly declared by Act of Parliament to include Afrikaans. The administration of native affairs and affairs specially or differentially affecting Asiatics vests in the Governor-General-in-Council. The government of native territories may be transferred to the Union Government.

High Commissioner in London.—Mr. J. S. Smit.

Area and Population.

The total area of the Union is 472,347 square miles divided between the Provinces as follows:—Cape of Good Hope, 276,966; Natal, 35,284; Transvaal, 110,450; Orange Free State, 49,647.

The census taken in 1904 in each of the four Colonies was the first simultaneous census taken in South Africa. In 1911 the first Union census was taken.

The following tables give the returns of population at the various censuses, classified according to race and sex:—

Year	All Races			European		Non-European
	Total	European	Non-European	Males	Females	Males	Females
1904 . . .	5,175,824	1,116,806	4,059,018	685,117	481,689	2,047,118	2,011,900
1911 . . .	5,978,894	1,276,242	4,697,152	685,164	591,078	2,884,228	2,812,924
1918 . . .	—	1,421,761	—	728,866	692,915	—	—
1921 . . .	6,928,580	1,519,488	5,409,092	782,085	737,453	2,754,957	2,654,135
1926 . . .	—	1,676,600	—	856,018	819,742	—	—

The 1926 population census was a quinquennial one of Europeans only, and was taken under the provisions of the South Africa Act for the delimitation of political constituencies.

Walvis Bay, area 430 sq. miles, previously included in the area of the Cape Province, has been included for administrative purposes in the mandated territory of South West Africa.

Of the non-European population in 1921, 4,697,813 were Bantu, 165,731 Asiatic, and 545,548 of other races.

The increase in the total population, 1911-21, was: Union, 15·99 per cent.; Cape, 8·49 per cent.; Natal, 19·71 per cent.; Transvaal, 23·81 per cent.; O. F. S. 19·06 per cent. The increase in the European population in the Union, 1911-21, was 19·06 per cent., and in other races 15·16 per cent. The proportion of Europeans to the total population in 1921 was 21·93 per cent.

Principal towns (including suburbs) in the Union classified according to the number of inhabitants of European race, 1921 and 1926:—

12. Krugersdorp . . . .	Transvaal . . . .	13,489	29,077	42,516	14,524
13. Boksburg . . . .	Transvaal . . . .	12,416	25,563	37,979	12,144

For occupational census in 1921, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1925, p. 223.

Migration.—1926. Gross Figures (excluding "Intransit.") European: Arrivals, 30,431; departures, 28,178. Non-European: Arrivals, 8,347; departures, 5,168.

Vital Statistics.—The following table gives the total numbers of marriages, births and deaths registered in the Union for recent years for all races:—

Year	European			Non-European <sup>1</sup>
	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1922	42,632	14,753	12,184	74,301	52,915	14,528
1923	42,181	15,438	11,709	62,645	54,145	14,544
1924	42,346	15,503	12,742	54,235	44,709	15,832
1925	43,411	15,371	14,002	51,611	41,181	16,231

Owing to wide variation of the laws relating to the registration of births and deaths of natives in the four provinces, and to the entire absence of native registration in one province, the figures of 1922 and 1923 must be regarded as merely recording registrations and not the total number of actual events. Unifying Act No. 17 of 1923, which came into effect as from January 1, 1924, abolished compulsory registration of native vital events in rural areas, but made registration compulsory in all urban areas throughout the Union.

Religion.

Religions.—The results of the European census of 1921 as regards religions are as follows:—Europeans: Dutch Churches, 838,982; Anglicans, 294,026; Presbyterians, 74,999; Congregationalists, 10,598; Wesleyans, 102,771; Lutherans, 19,098; Roman Catholics, 61,246; Baptists, 15,414; Jews, 62,103; others and unspecified, 40,251; total, 1,519,488. Non-Europeans as at the census of 1921: Dutch Churches, 276,486; Anglican, 420,059; Presbyterians, 115,897; Independents (Congregationalists), 145,723; Wesleyans, 730,022; various Christian Sects, 57,186; Lutherans, 241,807; Roman Catholics, 82,008; Hindus, 109,261; Buddhists and Confucians, 14,127; Mahomedans, 49,936; no religion, 2,402,652; others and unspecified, 763,928; total, 5,409,092.

Instruction.

Under the South Africa Act, for a period of five years after the establishment of the Union and thereafter subject to decree of Parliament, control of education other than higher education was granted to the four Provincial Administrations. This arrangement still obtains. For practical purposes it has been provisionally determined that all post-matriculation instruction shall be deemed to constitute Higher Education.

Higher Education.—By legislation of 1916 three Universities, with teaching and examining functions, were established on April 2, 1918, in place of the University of the Cape of Good Hope, provision being made for the conversion of the South African College into the University of Cape Town, of the Victoria College into the University of Stellenbosch, and of the University of the Cape of Good Hope into a federal University, styled the University of South Africa, with the remainder of the University Colleges as constituent colleges, the names of which, with appropriate details, will be found in the table hereunder. In 1921 the University College of Johannesburg was created the University of the Witwatersrand, and Potchefstroom University College was incorporated as a constituent college of the University of South Africa.

Justice.

The Common Law of the Union is the Roman-Dutch Law, that is, the uncodified law of Holland as it was at the date of the cession of the Cape in 1806. The sources of the law are the Dutch Commentaries and text-books of the seventeenth, eighteenth, and early nineteenth centuries. The Law of England as such is not recognised as authoritative, though by Statute the principles of English Law relating to mercantile matters, e.g., companies, patents, trademarks, insolvency and the like, have been introduced. In shipping, insurance, and other modern business developments English Law is followed, and it has also largely influenced civil and criminal procedure. In all other matters, family relations, property, succession, contract, &c., Roman-Dutch Law rules, English decisions being valued only so far as they agree therewith. The prerogatives of the Crown are, generally speaking, the same as in England.

The Supreme Court consists of an Appellate Division with a Chief Justice and two ordinary and two additional Judges of Appeal. In each Province of the Union there is a Provincial Division of the Supreme Court; while in the Cape there are two Local Divisions, and in the Transvaal one, exercising the same jurisdiction within limited areas as the Provincial Divisions. The Judges hold office during good behaviour. The Circuit System is fully developed.

Each Province is further divided into Districts with a Magistrate's Court having a prescribed civil and criminal jurisdiction. From this Court there is an appeal to the Provincial and Local Divisions of the Supreme Court, and thence to the Appellate Division. A distinctive feature of the Criminal system is that Magistrates' convictions carrying sentences above a prescribed limit are subject to automatic review by a Judge.

Persons convicted, all courts, 1926: males, 354,156, females, 51,762.

Finance.

Prior to 1913-14 the expenditure of the four Provinces was entirely met from grants by the Union Government. Since then various Financial Relations Acts have been passed defining the conditions upon which subsidies shall be granted to the Provinces, assigning and transferring to them certain revenues and limiting their powers of taxation. Act No. 46 of 1925 bases the subsidy on the attendance of pupils receiving education, assigns cent in revenues collected by the Union to the Provinces and gives special grants to the two smaller Provinces.

Revenue and expenditure of the Union (excluding Interest on Railway Capital, now paid direct to the Public Debt Commissioners, and Subsidies to Provincial Administrations).

230 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA

The gross Public Debt of the Union at March 31, 1927, was 231,475,948*l.* and the net debt, 216,397,410*l.*

Defence.

The South Africa Defence Act 1912, which became law on June 14, 1912, as amended by the South Africa Defence Act Amendment Act of 1922, provides for the establishment of Defence Forces comprising:—

1. The South African Permanent Force, which consists of:—(i) The South African Staff Corps; (ii) The South African Instructional Corps; (iii) The South African Naval Service; (iv) The South African Field Artillery; (v) The South African Permanent Garrison Artillery; (vi) The South African Engineer Corps; (vii) The South African Air Force; (viii) The South African Service Corps; (ix) The South African Medical Corps; (x) The South African Ordnance Corps; (xi) The South African Veterinary Corps; (xii) The South African Administrative, Pay, and Clerical Corps.

The South African Naval Service includes the officers and men of the South African Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve engaged for whole-time service. A surveying vessel of 800 tons and two minesweeping trawlers are maintained in commission.

2. The Active Citizen Force; 3. The Citizen Force Reserve; 4. The Coast Garrison Force Reserve; 5. The Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve; 6. The National Reserve; 7. Rifle Associations; and 8. Cadets.

Every citizen of European descent between the ages of 17 and 60 is liable to render personal service in time of war, and those between 17 and 25 are liable to undergo a prescribed peace training with the Active Citizen Force spread over a period of four consecutive years. The Act states, however, that only 50 per cent. of the total number liable to peace training shall actually undergo that training unless Parliament makes financial provision for the training of a greater number.

The establishment of Rifle Associations is a marked feature of the Act; citizens between the ages of 21 and 25 who are not entered for peace training with the Active Citizen Force are to be compelled to undergo training during these four years in a Rifle Association, thus ensuring that, in course of time, all citizens will at least know how to handle and use a rifle.

Provision is also made in the Act for the cadet training of boys between 13 and 17 in urban and other populous areas where facilities can conveniently be arranged.

The Union is divided into 15 military districts. To each military district have been allotted various units of different arms, to which the citizens entered for peace training in their 20th and 21st years are posted.

Under the 1922 Act the Permanent Force is relieved of all Police duties in peace time for which they were liable under the Act of 1912, and becomes a purely military force. Its strength in June, 1927, was 151 officers and 1,082 white and 273 native other ranks. The strength of the South African Air Force was 36 officers and 244 white and 109 native other ranks.

The provision of a Police Reserve to take the place of the South African Mounted Riflemen, when on active service, is no longer necessary, and has been expunged from the Act of 1912 accordingly.

A complete reorganisation of the Defence Forces has recently taken place. The more important changes involve the disbanding of the S.A. Mounted Rifles and the disappearance of the Field Force; the disbanding of the Brigade Head-Qrs. of the S.A. Field Artillery, and the distribution of sections of that force to various centres, and the reduction of establishment of the Service Corps, Engineering Corps, Garrison Artillery and Instructional Corps; and the reduction of the number of Military Districts to 6.

Production and Industry.

Other products, excluding Native Reserves, &c., 1925: barley, 49,213,800 lbs.; oats, 239,006,250 lbs.; Kaffir corn, 312,214,000 lbs.; potatoes, 310,893,000 lbs.; tobacco, 12,762,476 lbs.

The 1925 census (Agriculture) showed the numbers of live-stock in the Union as follows: 9,738,337 cattle; 814,894 horses; 124,010 mules; 729,856 donkeys; 162,732 ostriches; 35,569,712 sheep; 8,022,857 goats; 800,883 pigs.

The production of wool in 1925 was 156,969,334 lbs., and of mohair, 8,051,114 lbs. The export of ostrich feathers in 1926 was valued at 71,922*l.*; hides and skins at 2,619,045*l.* and wattle bark at 917,167*l.*

Cotton-growing is now undertaken by many farmers, the plant being found a better drought resistant than either tobacco or maize. The 1925 yield was 20,391,818 lbs. of seed cotton. The output of sugar in 1924-25 was 161,210 tons. The area under tea is 3,177 acres, from which the yield for 1925-26 was 4,146,371 lbs. (green leaf). It is estimated that some 15,000 acres of land suitable for tea plantations are available.

On March 31, 1925, the forest reserve areas comprised 2,132,033 acres demarcated, and 506,592 acres undemarcated: total, 2,638,625 acres.

Irrigation.—Technical and financial assistance is given by the State under the Union Irrigation Law of 1912, which was designed to encourage irrigation.

132 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA

Manufactures.—The report on the industrial census in the Union in 1924-25 gives the value added by process of manufacture, &c., as 41,867,288*l.*, and the value of the gross production of the industries covered at 84,159,604*l.* The total number of factories which made returns was 7,206. Value of land and buildings, 21,671,888*l.*, machinery, plant, and tools, 31,952,302*l.*, of materials used, 42,292,316*l.*, and cost of fuel, light, and power, 3,453,954*l.* Average number of persons employed, 191,598 (Europeans, 71,004). Wages paid, 21,504,084*l.* The gross value of the output of the principal groups of industries was: food, drink, &c., 26,338,945*l.*; metals, engineering, &c., 18,274,324*l.*; chemicals, &c., 5,884,413*l.*; heat, light, and power, 4,669,477*l.*; building, &c., 8,463,116*l.*; clothing, textiles, &c., 3,193,207*l.*; books, printing, &c., 4,021,645*l.*; leather, &c., 2,888,980*l.*; stone, clay, &c., 2,704,449*l.*; vehicles, 1,543,605*l.*; furniture, &c., 1,794,373*l.*

Mining.—The table hereunder gives the total value of the principal minerals produced in the Union from the earliest dates of existing records to December 31, 1926. The value of gold is calculated at 4·24773*l.* per fine ounce up to 1919, when the gold premium came into effect, as from the 24th of July. Copper, tin, antimony, scheelite, and silver are valued on the estimated pure metal contained in shipments according to the average current prices in London. The value of other base minerals is calculated on average local prices.

The total value of general merchandise, exclusive of specie and Government stores, imported into British South Africa in 1926 was 70,824,438*l.*, of which 34,889,149*l.* came from the United Kingdom, 8,807,122*l.* from the rest of the British Empire, 11,915,251*l.* from the United States of America, and 5,758*l.* from the Belgian Congo. The imports of Government stores amounted to 5,369,212*l.*

The total exports, excluding specie, in 1926, were 75,609,095*l.* (excluding ships' stores value 2,470,408*l.*), of which 50,781,727*l.* went to the United Kingdom, 9,583,886*l.* to the rest of the Empire and 2,320,647*l.* to the U.S.A.

Shipping and Communications.

Oversea shipping 1926: entered, 1,321 vessels of 4,937,406 tons net; cleared, 1,303 of 4,945,337 tons. Coastwise: entered, 3,667 vessels of 8,941,822 tons net; cleared, 3,684 of 8,982,837 tons.

Prior to the Union the State Railways of the several colonies were operated by the separate Governments. In May, 1910, the Government lines were merged into one system, the South African Railways, under the control of the Union Government. The total open mileage of this system at the end of March, 1926, was 12,002 (1926-27, 12,206) [comprising Cape 4,536 (1926-27, 4,932) miles, Orange Free State 1,489 (1926-27, 1,504) miles, Transvaal 2,939 (1926-27, 2,953) miles, Natal, 1,379 (1926-27, 1,460) miles, and South West Africa 1,352], of which 11,017 (1926-27, 11,286) miles are 3 ft. 6 in. gauge, and 985 (1926-27, 920) miles 2 ft. gauge. The capital expenditure on Government Railways up to March 31, 1926, amounted to 123,273,570*l.*, 1926-27, 128,024,206*l.* Earnings, 1924-25, 21,747,631*l.* and 1925-26, 24,151,407*l.*, 1926-27, 24,098,347*l.*; working expenditure. 1925-26, 18,735,325*l.* (including depreciation), 1926-27, 19,437,177*l.*; passengers, 76 millions, 1926-27, 80 millions; goods carried, 21,072,082, 1926-27, 20,615,369 tons (exclusive of live-stock tonnage). Mileage of private lines, 418, 1926-27, 418 miles (Cape, 249, Natal, 84, Transvaal, 7, O.F.S., 4, and South West Africa, 74).

At the end of 1926-27 there were in the Union 3,154 post offices. Telegrams dealt with numbered 6,055,679. The number of money orders issued during the year 1926-27 was 577,844, and the value 2,761,470*l.*, while 539,620 orders of the value of 2,483,984*l.* were paid. 4,461,276 postal orders amounting to 2,439,810*l.* were issued, and 3,912,519, valued at 2,085,772*l.*, paid. The revenue of the Post Office in 1925-26 was 1,892,063*l.* and 1926-27 was 1,717,588*l.* The expenditure in 1925-26, was 1,645,138*l.* The revenue of the telegraph and telephone services (excluded from the previous figures) was in 1925-26, 1,646,091*l.* and in 1926-27 was 1,777,929*l.* Expenditure in 1925-26, 1,143,231*l.*, 1926-27, postal and telegraph, 1,686,299*l.*, telephone, 1,220,372*l.*

At the end of March, 1927, there were 7,492 miles of telegraph line, carrying 37,836 miles of wire, and 11,290 (excluding telegraph lines on telephone routes) miles of telephone trunk route; the total mileage of wire on all routes was 320,488. 12,857 wireless messages were dealt with during the year 1926-27. A powerful international wireless station is to be established about 30 miles from Cape Town. It will be a link in the wireless "chain" of the British Empire.

The number of depositors in the Government Savings Bank in the Union at the end of March, 1927, was 350,587, and the amount standing to their credit 6,510,666*l.*

Money, Weights, and Measures.

An Act of 1922 provided for the issue of a Union Coinage with denominations identical with those of British Coins, which remain legal tender, and a branch of the Royal Mint has been established at Pretoria.

Union of South Africa silver and bronze coins of 2s. 6d., 2s., 1s., 6d., 3d., 1d.,  $\frac{1}{2}$ d.,  $\frac{1}{4}$ d. are being coined and are in circulation. A considerable portion of the gold output is being minted.

An Act (No. 22 of 1922) was passed legalizing the optional use of either the metric or the imperial standard weights and measures, but under a proclamation of 1923 the cwt. has been replaced by the 'cental' of 100 lbs. The following old Dutch measures are, however, still in use:—Liquid Measure: Leaguer = about 128 imperial gallons; half aum = 15½ imperial gallons; anker = 7½ imperial gallons. Capacity: Muid = 3 bushels. The customary surface measure is the Morgen, equal to 2·1165402 acres; 1,000 Cape lineal feet are equal to 1,033 British imperial feet.

PROVINCE OF THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Constitution and Government.—The Colony of the Cape of Good Hope was originally founded by the Dutch in the year 1652. Britain took possession of it in 1795 but evacuated it in 1803. A British force again took possession in 1806 and the Colony has remained a British Possession since that date. It was formally ceded to Great Britain by the Convention of London, August 13, 1814. Letters Patent issued in 1850 declared that in the Colony there should be a Parliament which should consist of the Governor, a Legislative Council, and a House of Assembly. On the 31st May, 1910, the Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa, thereafter forming an original province of the Union.

Cape Town is the seat of the Provincial Administration.

Administrator.—The Hon. A. P. J. Fourie. (Salary 2,500*l.*)

The Province is divided into 122 magisterial districts, and the Colony proper, including Bechuanaland, but exclusive of the Transkeian territories, into 90 fiscal divisions. Each division has a Council of at least 6 members (14 in the Cape Division) elected triennially by the owners or occupiers of immovable property. These Councils look after roads, boundaries, and beacons; return 3 members to the Licensing Court, and perform other local duties.

There are 128 Municipalities, each governed by a Mayor or Chairman and Councillors, a certain number of whom are elected annually by the ratepayers. There are also 77 Village Management Boards.

Area and Population.—The following table gives the population of the Cape of Good Hope at each census :—

1926	18,675	7,053	5,972	38,793	26,114	9,154

Religion.—In 1921 there were 1,684,906 Christians—546,065 members of Dutch Churches, 358,827 Anglicans, 105,696 Presbyterians, 115,941 Congregationalists, 394,085 Methodists, 76,421 Lutherans, 47,293 Roman Catholics, 16,102 Baptists, and 24,476 other Christian sects. Mohammedans 24,513, Jews 21,224, Heathen 1,002,450, others 49,606.

Instruction.—Local school administration is conducted by school boards and school committees, the unit of administration being the school district. There are now (1927) 112 such districts, each under the control of a school board, two-thirds of whose members are elected by the ratepayers and one-third nominated by Government and local authority. Education is compulsory for children of European parentage. Grants in support of education are provided from Provincial Council revenues, primary education being free. Aided schools 1926, 4,585. There are 137,843 European pupils and 176,955 non-European. Total number of teachers 11,236 (6,328 in European schools, and 4,908 in non-European schools).

Provincial expenditure on education (excluding Higher Education, which is under control of the Central Government) in 1925-26 amounted to 2,896,420*l*.

Pauperism.—There is no system of poor-law relief.

Finance.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there is only one financial statement for the four provinces together. Particulars are given above under the Union. Since the passing of the Financial Relations Act, 1913, the Provincial revenue consists of certain revenues assigned to the Province and an amount voted by Parliament by way of subsidy. The following figures show the provincial revenue and expenditure for five years.—

PROVINCE OF NATAL.

Constitution and Government.—Natal was annexed to Cape Colony in 1844, placed under separate government in 1845, and under charter of July 15, 1856, erected into a separate Colony. By this charter partially representative institutions were established, and, under a Natal Act of 1893, assented to by Order in Council, June 26, 1893, the Colony obtained responsible government. The province of Zululand was annexed to Natal on December 30, 1897. The districts of Vryheid, Utrecht and part of Wakkerstroom, formerly belonging to the Transvaal, were annexed in January, 1903. On May 31, 1910, the Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa, becoming an original province of the Union.

The seat of provincial government in Natal is Pietermaritzburg.

Administrator.—The Hon. H. Gordon Watson (Jan. 1928) (2,000*l.*)

Area and Population.—The Province (including Zululand, 10,427 square miles) has an area of 35,284 square miles, with a seaboard of about 360 miles. The climate is sub-tropical on the coast and somewhat colder inland. It is well suited to Europeans. The Province is divided into 40 Magisterial Divisions.

The European population has more than trebled since 1879. The returns of the total population at the last six censuses were :—

Census Year	All Races			European		Coloured
	Total	Males	Females	Males	Females	Males	Females
1891 . .	543,913	268,002	275,911	25,787	21,001	242,275	254,850
1904 . .	1,108,754	550,631	558,123	56,768	40,351	448,873	517,772

The figures for 1891 exclude Zululand; those for 1904 and 1911 include the districts of Vryheid, Utrecht, Paulpietersburg, Ngotshe, and Babanango.

Population of Durban according to the census of 1921: European 57,095 other 89,215, total 146,310; and of Pietermaritzburg: European 17,998, coloured 18,025, total 36,023. The European population of Durban in 1918 was 48,413, and of Pietermaritzburg, 18,525. The census figures for the European population of Durban in 1926 are 70,883, and of Pietermaritzburg, 19,748.

Marriages, births and deaths for 1925 and 1926 are as follows :—

Instruction.—With the exception of Higher Education, which is under the control of the Union Government, Education comes under the Provincial Administration. In 1926 there were, for children of European extraction, 171 schools giving primary, 24 giving beyond primary education, in all 195 schools, which were supported either entirely or partially by Government funds. In addition there were 2 technical colleges, 1 physical culture school, 3 night continuation classes, 1 training school for teachers, and 300 farm schools. For coloured children, there were 553 native schools; 52 Asiatic schools and 23 other coloured schools, State and State-aided. The aggregate number of European pupils in regular attendance at the Government and inspected schools was 32,422 for 1925; the average daily attendance 90·0 per cent. of the number on the registers. The number of native, Asiatic, and coloured children receiving instruction in 1925 amounted to 41,792. A sum of 111,421*l.* was spent on native, Asiatic and coloured education during 1925–26 out of public funds; the corresponding figure in respect of European education was 439,250*l.* It is estimated that only a very small percentage of European children are receiving no education.

Finance.—For financial arrangements, see p. 228 above. The following figures show the provincial revenue and expenditure for six years —

Instruction.—All education except that of a university and of a vocational type is under the provincial authority. The Province has been divided for the purposes of local control and management into thirty-one school districts. Instruction in Government Schools, both primary and secondary, is free. The new University of the Witwatersrand was established in Johannesburg in 1921.

The following statistics of education are for the year ending Dec. 31, 1926: 1,162 primary schools with 112,294 pupils; 41 beyond primary schools, with an enrolment of 10,163 pupils; 432 State and State-aided schools for coloured, native and Indian children, with 48,059 pupils. There are four training institutions for European teachers, with 815 students; and three for coloured teachers, with 253 students. During the year 1926, 2,844,470*l.* was expended for educational purposes.

The medium of instruction up to the fourth standard is the home language (English or Afrikaans) of the pupil, but parents may request that the other language be gradually introduced as a second medium. Above the fourth standard both languages may be used at the parents' option or as occasion allows. Bible History is taught in every school, but no doctrine or dogma peculiar to any religious denomination or sect may be taught.

Finance.—For financial arrangements, see p. 228 above.

The following figures show the provincial revenue and expenditure for six years:—

The Provincial Revenue is mainly derived from Employers' Tax, Licences, Native Pass Fees, Poll Tax, Transfer Duty and Companies' Tax.

Production and Industry.—The Province is in the main a stock-raising country, though there are considerable areas well adapted for agriculture, including the growing of tropical crops. The extent of land under cultivation is given as 3,523,218 acres: fallow land as about 398,644 acres. The maize and tobacco crops may be regarded as the most important.

The live-stock numbered in 1925, 2,862,411 cattle, 4,116,490 sheep, 354,525 goats (including 31,513 of the valuable Angora breed).

For mineral production, see above, p. 232. The Province has iron and brass foundries and engineering works, grain-mills, breweries, brick, tile, and pottery works, tobacco, soap, and candle factories, coach and wagon works, &c. The Transvaal gold output in 1926 was valued at 42,342,122*l.*, and in 1927 at 43,055,178*l.*

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records of trade for each of the Provinces. The British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province. The following figures show the value of the trade between the Transvaal Province and the United Kingdom for five years:—

PROVINCE OF THE ORANGE FREE STATE.

The Orange River was first crossed by Europeans about the middle of the 18th century. Between 1810 and 1820, settlements were made in the southern parts of the Orange Free State, and the Great Trek greatly augmented the number of settlers during and after 1836. In 1848, Sir Harry Smith proclaimed the whole territory between the Orange and Vaal Rivers as a British Possession and established what was called the Orange River Sovereignty. Great dissatisfaction was caused by this step, as well as by the native policy of the British Government. In 1854 by the Convention of Bloemfontein, British Sovereignty was withdrawn and the independence of the country was recognised.

During the first five years of its existence the Orange Free State was much harassed by incessant raids by, and fighting with, the Basutos. These were at length conquered. The British Government then stepped in and arranged matters much to the dissatisfaction of the conquering party. By the treaty of Aliwal North, only a part of the territory of the Basutos was incorporated in the Orange Free State.

On account of the Treaty between the Orange Free State and South African Republic, the former State took a prominent part in the South African War (1899-1902), and was annexed on May 28, 1900, as the Orange River Colony. After peace was declared Crown Colony Government was established and continued until 1907, when responsible government was introduced. On May 31, 1910 the Orange River Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa as the Province of the Orange Free State.

The seat of provincial government is at Bloemfontein.

Administrator.—The Hon. E. R. Grobler (salary, 2,000*l.*)

There are municipalities at Bloemfontein and other centres, 61 in all; local authorities have, so far as possible, the usual local administrative powers.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 49,647 square miles; it is divided into 30 districts. The census population has varied as follows:—

Census Year	All Races			European		Coloured
	Total	Males	Females	Males	Females	Males	Females
1880 .	138,518	70,150	68,368	81,906	29,116	38,244	34,252

1923 .	—	—	—	104,392	93,593	—	—

The capital, Bloemfontein, had, in 1921, 19,367 white inhabitants, and 19,667 natives and other coloured persons; total, 39,034. The 1926 Census figures for the European population are 22,695.

Vital statistics are shown as follows:—

Religion.—The census of 1921 gave the following results: Dutch Churches, 207,536; Anglican Churches, 50,807; Presbyterians, 13,562; Congregationalists, 2,763; Methodists, 135,778; Lutherans, 7,931; Roman Catholics, 9,879; Jews, 4,761; Heathen, 174,697; others, 607,714.

Instruction.—Higher and vocational education is under the control of the Union Education Department while primary and secondary education and the training of teachers are controlled and financed by the Provincial Administration. Under the Education Ordinance of 1920 the Province is divided into 59 School Board Districts, for each of which there is a School Board elected by the School Committees in the district. In 1926 there were 759 public schools and 98 aided private schools in the Province, with a total enrolment of 44,691 pupils. Education is free in all public schools up to the University Matriculation standard, but two secondary schools are allowed to charge fees and to expend the proceeds for the advantage of the schools. Attendance is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 16, but exemption may be granted in special cases or when a child has passed Standard VI and is in regular employment. Unless parents object, the two official languages—English and Afrikaans—are taught to all pupils, the home language of the pupil being the chief medium of instruction and the second language being introduced gradually during the primary school course. In all the towns and villages of the Province there are either secondary or intermediate schools preparing pupils up to the standard of the University Matriculation. The Normal College trains from 150 to 200 teachers annually.

Finance.—For financial arrangements see p. 232 above. The following figures show the provincial revenue and expenditure for five years:—

Production and Industry.—The Province consists of undulating plains, affording excellent grazing and wide tracts for agricultural purposes. The rainfall is moderate. The country is still mainly devoted to stock-farming, although a rapidly increasing quantity of grain is being raised, especially in the Eastern Districts.

For Mineral Statistics see p. 232.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records of trade for each of the Provinces. The British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province separately. The following figures show the value of the trade between the Orange Free State Province and the United Kingdom :—

WEST AFRICA.

These Possessions are the Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria; the Gambia Colony and Protectorate; the Gold Coast Colony with Ashanti and Northern Territories; and the Sierra Leone Colony and Protectorate.

Parts of Togoland and the Cameroons are also included as mandated territories.

NIGERIA.

History and Constitution.—This territory comprises a number of areas formerly under separate administrations. Lagos, bought in August, 1861, from a native king, was placed under the Governor of Sierra Leone in 1866. In 1874 it was detached, together with the Gold Coast Colony, and formed part of the latter until January, 1886, when a separate 'Colony and Protectorate of Lagos' was constituted. Meanwhile the National African Company had established British interests in the Niger valley, and in July, 1886, the company obtained a charter under the name of the Royal Niger Company. This Company surrendered its charter to the Crown in 1899, and on January 1, 1900, its territories were formed into the two Protectorates of Northern and Southern Nigeria. The latter absorbed the 'Niger Coast Protectorate,' which was formed in May, 1893, from the 'Protectorate of the Oil Rivers,' which had been constituted in June, 1885. In February, 1906, Lagos and Southern Nigeria were united into the 'Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria,' and on January 1, 1914, the latter was amalgamated with the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria to form the 'Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria,' under a Governor. Lagos is the seat of the Central Government.

The Colony of Nigeria had its boundaries defined afresh, and the Protectorate was divided into two groups of provinces, the 'Northern Provinces' and the 'Southern Provinces,' each under a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the King, and subject to the control and authority of the Governor.

The British mandated territory of Cameroon is now attached to Nigeria for administrative purposes.

The Executive Council of the Colony was made, from January 1, 1914, the Executive Council of the Protectorate also. It consists of a few of the senior officials. There is a Legislative Council, created by Order in Council in November 1922, consisting of the Governor, the members of the Executive Council, and other official members (total official membership 27); three members elected by the ratepayers of Lagos; one member elected by the ratepayers of Calabar; four members selected respectively by the Chambers of Commerce of Lagos, Port Harcourt and Kano, and the local Chamber of Mines; two members to represent respectively Banking and Shipping interests; and eight members to represent African interests in those parts of the Colony and Southern Provinces which do not return elected representatives. This Council legislates for the Colony and the Southern Provinces of the Protectorate, laws affecting the Northern Provinces being enacted by the Governor as heretofore.

Governor of Nigeria.—Sir Graeme Thomson, G.C.M.G., K.C.B.

Chief Secretary to the Government.—F. M. Baddeley, C.M.G.

Lieutenant-Governors in the Protectorate.—Major Upton Fitzgerald Ruaxton, C.M.G. (Southern Provinces); and H. R. Palmer, C.M.G., C.B.E. (Northern Provinces).

There are altogether 24 provinces, including Cameroons, each under the immediate control of a Resident. In many provinces the administration is in the hands of the permanent chief and his officials.

Area and Population.—Area approximately 335,700 square miles; population, 18,765,690, including about 5,200 Europeans (Northern Provinces: 258,000 square miles, 10,282,834 population. Southern Provinces: 78,000 square miles, 8,532,856 population). In 1900 a proclamation was issued in Northern Nigeria which, without abolishing domestic slavery, declared all children born after January 1, 1900, free, and forbade the removal of domestic slaves for sale or transfer. In 1917 the Slavery Ordinance abolished the legal status of slavery throughout the Protectorate. Slave markets have been suppressed by native rulers, but cases of slave dealing are still found among the tribes east of the Niger. In recent years very many slaves have been liberated in the Northern Provinces.

Justice.—The Supreme Courts of Northern and Southern Nigeria are united under one Chief Justice of Nigeria. There are police magistrates at Lagos, Ebute Metta and Calabar. In each province is a Provincial Court consisting of the Resident and his assistants, and such justices of the peace as may be appointed by the Governor. Native courts exist in Mohammedan localities where there are chiefs and councillors, and amongst pagan tribes Judicial Councils with limited judicial powers have been established in localities where the intelligence of the natives renders such a policy possible. There are cantonments at Kaduna, on the river of the same name, Kano, Zaria, Lokoja on the Niger, and Port Harcourt, and there station magistrates have been appointed. The number of persons apprehended or summoned before the Provincial Courts in 1925 was 7,727, of whom 5,527 were convicted. Out of 18,443 brought before Magistrates' Courts in 1925, 14,862 were convicted, and 184 were convicted in the Supreme Court.

Religion and Education.—Northern Provinces.—Mohammedanism is widely diffused, the Fulani and Hausas and other ruling tribes being of that religion, but in some parts of the territory paganism is predominant. Protestant and Catholic missions are at work, and have industrial and other schools at several stations. The principles governing the education of natives in the Egyptian Sudan are being closely followed. Secular subjects only are compulsory; the acceptance of religious teaching is optional. At present the principal schools are situated at Kano, a great Mohammedan centre. In 1925 there were 53 Government schools, and 124 unassisted private schools, the total average attendance in Government schools being about 2,125. It is estimated that there are 28,702 Mohammedan schools, with 335,203 pupils. In 1921 a Training College for Mohammedan native teachers was opened at Katsina.

Southern Provinces.—There is a system of primary and secondary schools. There are also a residential school at Bonny, supported by Government grants, and by Chiefs' subscriptions, a Government secondary school and mission grammar school at Lagos, and a high school at Calabar. In 1925 there were 49 Government schools with 9,074 scholars on the roll, and an average attendance of about 7,751; 205 assisted schools, 37,077 on the roll, and 29,718 in average attendance; and 3,200 unassisted schools, with about 133,900 on the roll, and 87,876 in average attendance.

Four British Protestant Societies and two French Roman Catholic Societies are established, each with several stations, and altogether there are approximately 1,000 places of worship with an average attendance of about 130,000.

Finance.—Revenue, expenditure, and debt of Nigeria as a whole:—

Year (ending March 31)	Revenue	Expenditure— Ordinary Recurrent	Total Expenditure	Public Debt
	£	£	£	£
1922-23 . . . . .	5,506,165	4,884,965	6,509,244	13,609,209
1923-24 . . . . .	6,260,561	4,093,750	5,501,242	19,309,210
1924-25 . . . . .	6,944,220	5,820,027	5,768,715	19,309,210
1925-26 . . . . .	8,265,928	5,663,223	6,583,167	19,309,210
1926-27 . . . . .	7,734,429	6,259,086	7,584,092	23,559,209

The expenditure for the year ending March 31, 1927, on railway construction was 689,978*l*.

The main items of revenue for the year 1926-27 were:—Customs, 2,929,460*l*.; railway, 2,459,850*l*.; direct taxes, 787,713*l*.; fees of court, 479,479*l*.; marine, 317,129*l*. The chief items of expenditure were:—Railway, 1,230,990*l*.; Public Debt, 1,059,685*l*.; Public Works, 1,230,990*l*.; Political, 497,863*l*.; Military and Police, 567,804*l*.

There is established in each native State in the Northern Provinces a Treasury, locally known as a 'Beit-el-Mal,' which regulates the expenditure of that portion of the local revenue which is annually assigned to the native administration of each Emirate for its support and maintenance. There are also native treasuries in a few of the more advanced States in the Southern provinces.

Production and Industry.—The products are palm-oil (exports 1926, 113,267 tons) and kernels (exports 1926, 249,100 tons); cotton lint (export 1926, 179,815 cwt.), cocoa (export 1926, 39,099 tons). Mahogany is exported. Sheep and goat skins are tanned and dyed. The natives have worked iron, lead, and tin for centuries. Tin ore exported in 1926, 10,562 tons. There are also deposits of coal, silver, galena, manganese ore, liguite, and monazite (which contains thorium).

Mining rights are vested in the Government, but under an agreement made with the Royal Niger Company at the date of the revocation of the charter, that Company receives half the gross profits derived from royalties on minerals won between the main stream of the Niger on the west and a line running direct from Yola to Zinder on the east, for a period of 99 years with effect from January 1, 1900.

Commerce and Communications, &c.—The principal ports are Lagos, Warri, Burutu, Forcados, Sapele, Brass, Akassa, Degema, Port Harcourt, Bonny, Opobo, Calabar, and Victoria. Numerous rivers and creeks form the chief routes for transport, and there are many well-made roads.

Considerable trade is carried on in the Northern Provinces. There is also a large trade by caravans which, coming from Salaga in the west, the Sahara in the north, and Lake Chad and Wadai in the east, make use of Kano as an emporium.

The trade and shipping of Nigeria are shown as follows (bullion and specie are included):—

Year	Trade		Shipping entered and cleared
	Imports	Exports	Total	British only
	£	£	Tons	Tons
1922	10,907,335	10,450,511	1,780,387	1,137,265

1924	12,921,337	15,083,077	2,193,905	1,344,090
1925	16,273,349	17,370,161	2,655,001	1,616,679
1926	18,597,480	17,839,618	3,006,115	1,737,417

Imports from the British Empire, 1926, 10,256,549*l.*, and from U.S.A., 988,510*l.* Imports from the United Kingdom, 1927, 8,380,720*l.*; exports to the United Kingdom, 7,554,663*l.*

The railway system comprises (1) a Western line from Lagos to Kano (685 miles), crossing the Niger by bridge at Jebba, with branches from Minna to Baro (111 miles) and from Zaria to the Bauchi tin fields (114 miles, light railway); (2) an Eastern line (560 miles) from Port Harcourt to Kaduna on the Western Railway, crossing the Benue by train ferry at Makurdi and connecting from Kaffanchan junction with the tinfields line. Total capital expenditure on Nigerian railway, to end of March, 1926, 14,188,511*l.*; gross receipts, 1926, 2,353,464*l.*; working expenses, 1,141,628*l.*; net receipts, 1,211,836*l.*; passengers carried, 2,413,113; goods and minerals transported, 797,279 tons.

There is a wireless station at Lagos.

In 1925 there were 130 Post Offices in Nigeria and the British sphere of the Cameroons. The Savings Bank on Dec. 31, 1925, had 5,425 depositors, with 32,753*l.* to their credit.

A special silver coinage for West Africa was introduced in 1913, the denominations being 2*s.*, 1*s.*, 6*d.*, and 3*d.*, of the same size, weight, and fineness as corresponding coins of the United Kingdom. The new currency, with adequate reserves in London, based on gold and securities, is under the control of the West African Currency Board. A nickel coinage (penny, half-penny, and tenth of a penny) is also in use. In 1916 local currency notes were introduced (present denominations 5*l.*, 20*s.*, 10*s.*, 2*s.*, and 1*s.*). and in 1920 an alloy coinage of similar denominations to the silver coinage was added.

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd., and the Colonial Bank have branches in Nigeria.

GAMBIA.

Governor.—Sir John Middleton, K.B.E., C.M.G. (2,500*l.*, and 750*l.* allowances).

Gambia was discovered by the early Portuguese navigators, but they made no settlement. During the seventeenth century various companies of merchants obtained trading charters and established a settlement on the river, which, from 1807, was controlled from Sierra Leone; in 1843 it was made an independent Crown Colony; in 1866 it formed part of the West African Settlements, but in December, 1888, it again became a separate Crown Colony. It is administered under a Governor with an Executive and a nominated Legislative Council containing an unofficial element. With the exception of the Island of St. Mary, on which Bathurst, the capital, stands, the whole Colony is administered on the Protectorate system. Since 1901 both banks of the Gambia have been under direct British control up to the Anglo-French boundary.

Area of Colony proper, 4 square miles; population, 10,000. In the Protectorate (area, 4,130 square miles) the population in 1921 was about 200,000.

There were, in 1926, 7 elementary Government-aided schools, with 1,687 pupils enrolled, and an average attendance of about 848 pupils; Government grant, proportionate to results (1926), 1,652*l.* Of the elementary schools two are Roman Catholic, three Wesleyan, one Anglican, and one Mohammedan. The Wesleyans have also 2 secondary schools with 37 boys and 43 girls, and the Roman Catholics 1 secondary school for girls with 45 pupils. Total Government expenditure on education (1926), 8,007*l*.

There is a company of the West African Frontier Force of 142 men. The armed police has a strength of 142 men.

The tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in the foreign trade in 1926 was 1,252,796 tons, of which 771,022 were British.

Internal communication is maintained by steamers or launches. There are four post offices, but postal facilities are afforded to all river towns by means of a weekly travelling post office on the Government river mail-steamers. Postal packets and parcels dealt with in 1926, 263,957. Bathurst is connected with St. Vincent (Cape de Verde) and with Sierra Leone by cable, but there are no local railways. Bathurst is in wireless communication with Georgetown, Kuntaur and Basse in the Protectorate. The Post Office Savings Bank had 148 depositors holding deposits value 1,939*l*. in 1926. A special West African alloy currency was introduced in 1920 (see under Nigeria, p. 251). West African currency notes in circulation December 31, 1926, amounted to 152,734*l*. There is one bank in the Colony, the Bank of British West Africa.

GOLD COAST.

The Gold Coast first became known through Portuguese navigators in the fourteenth century, and English and Dutch traders and companies exploited the district in the seventeenth century, their main object being the slave traffic. The Dutch held settlements on the coast until 1871, when a convention was made transferring them to the English. The Colony stretches for 334 miles along the Gulf of Guinea, between the French Ivory Coast and Togoland. It is administered by a Governor with an Executive and a Legislative Council. Attached to it inland are Ashanti and the Northern Territories. The British mandated territory of Togoland is also attached to the Gold Coast for administrative purposes.

The area of the Colony, Ashanti, and Protectorate is about 80,000 square miles; population, census 1921, 2,078,043; Europeans, 2,165. Chief towns: Accra, 38,000; Sekondi, 10,000; Cape Coast, 15,000; Keta, 10,000; Winneba, 7,000. Saltpond, 6,500; Koforidua, 5,500. There were (in 1925-26) 22 Government schools, and 221 assisted schools which are under the control of various missions; average attendance of primary and secondary schools (exclusive of Northern Territories), 29,332 (in 1926-27); enrolled, 32,461; Government expenditure on education in 1926-27, 166,299*l*. There are also a large number of non-assisted primary schools supported by the various religious bodies. A University College for Secondary Education at Achimota was formally opened on Jan. 28, 1927.

The strength of the police (1926-27), 31 European officers and 1,586 other ranks. The constabulary (Northern Territories) consists of 4 officers and about 476 other ranks. Summary convictions in 1926-27, 12,106; convictions in Supreme Courts, 131.

Staple products and exports, cocoa, palm oil, kola nuts, palm kernels, lumber, india-rubber, manganese, gold, and diamonds; in 1926 there were 3,200 horses, 9,600 asses, 415,000 sheep and goats, and 16,000 pigs. Many of the coast inhabitants are fishermen, and there is considerable traffic in dried fish by rail into the interior.

Ashanti was placed under British protection on August 27, 1896. Under Orders in Council of September 26, 1901, the country was definitely annexed by Great Britain, the Governor of the Gold Coast being appointed Governor of Ashanti, though only some of the laws and ordinances of the Gold Coast apply to the annexed territory. The area is 13,470 square miles and the population (census 1921) was 407,000; Europeans (1921), 400. Kumasi, the chief town, has about 20,000 inhabitants. The number of children in the Government schools was (1926-27) 789, and in the mission schools 3,091. At the Agricultural and Forestry Training Centre 38 students were in residence during 1926-27—32 agricultural and 6 forestry. Police force (1926-27), 239; convictions, 1926-27, 2,952, but there is little serious crime. Local receipts, 1926-27, 102,214*l.*; local expenditure (except railway, posts, and telegraphs), 427,417*l.* Motor vehicles in use, 988 cars and lorries. Agriculture is extending, cocoa and rubber plantations are being formed. 70,848 tons of cocoa were exported in 1926-27. Gold output (1926-27), 9,545·57 oz. (406,176*l.*). Average number employed in mining industry, 2,485 in 1926-27. Imports for 1926-27, 4,013,969; exports, 5,068,324. In the western parts of the Colony are rich forests of mahogany, cedar, &c., and trees yielding fruits, oil, rubber, and gum copal. This district has been opened up by a trunk motor road from Kumasi to Pamu on the western frontier, via Sunyani, with the accompanying branch roads. The country is well watered, and with proper restraints it would contain inexhaustible supplies of valuable forest products. On the eastern side the forests are sparser, though timber and oil trees are common and game plentiful; the products there are chiefly maize, coco-yams, bananas, ground-nuts, and cocoa, the plantations of which are rapidly extending.

The Northern Territories lying to the north of the parallel of 8° N. lat., bounded on the west and north by the French possessions and on the east by Togoland, were placed under British protection in 1901. They are administered, under the Governor, by a Chief Commissioner and 21 Political officers. The country is divided into two provinces Northern and Southern, with headquarters at Tamale in the Southern Province, 237 miles north of Kumasi. Population (1921), 527,914; Europeans (1921), 49. Chief towns, Tamale, 4,000; Navaro, 15,000. Area of the Protectorate, 35,000 square miles. Constabulary, 481 (476 rank and file) in August 1927. The Mohammedans have substantial mosques; there are Roman Catholic and other missions. A new scheme of Education was inaugurated on April 1, 1927, under a Superintendent of Education, with European masters on his staff. Government schools have been established at Tamale, Gambaga, Lawra, Salaga, and Wa. Pupils in 1926-27, 377. There are now Veterinary, Trade, Primary and Kindergarten schools all situated outside Tamale. There are also Mohammedan schools. There are 1,389 miles of motorable roads in dry season. Local revenue in 1926-27, 19,027*l.*; expenditure, 118,793*l.* The chief crops grown are yams, Guinea corn, millet, maize, rice, and tobacco. Livestock, 1921: cattle, 69,500; sheep and goats, 242,400; donkeys, 8,500; horses, 2,550. There are 13 quarantine stations through which foreign cattle and sheep enter the Protectorate. Gold-bearing quartz and alluvial deposits, and mica, exist.

Governor of the Gold Coast.—Sir Alexander Ransford Slater, K.C.M.G., C.B.E.

Chief Commissioner of Northern Territories.—Major A. H. C. Walker-Leigh.

SIERRA LEONE.

The Colony of Sierra Leone originated in the sale and cession, in 1788, by a native King to English settlers, of a piece of land intended as a home for natives of Africa who were waifs in London; and later it was used as a settlement for Africans rescued from slave-ships. It lies between French Guinea on the north and the Republic of Liberia on the east and south-east. Sierra Leone proper consists of a peninsula about 26 miles long, and 12 miles broad, with an area of about 260 square miles, terminating in Cape Sierra Leone. The Colony of Sierra Leone extends from the Scarcies River on the north, to the border of Liberia on the south, 180 miles. Inland it extends to a distance varying from 8 to 20 miles and includes the Yellaboi and other islands towards the north, as well as Sherbro and several smaller islands to the south, but the Isles de Los were ceded to France under the Convention of 1904. There are for the Colony and Protectorate a nominated Executive Council and a Legislative Council consisting of the Governor, twelve official members, three elected unofficial members, and not more than seven nominated unofficial members, of whom three are paramount chiefs of the Protectorate. Elected members must be 25 years of age, and hold their seats for five years. The franchise is confined to males.

Area of the Colony 4,000 square miles approximately; population (census 1921), 85,163. Europeans, 1921, numbered 1,161. The birth-rate (1926) was 24 per thousand, and the death-rate 27·9; infantile mortality-rate 296 per 1,000 registered births. Owing to the fact that many births escape registration, the birth-rate appears lower and the infantile mortality-rate higher than they really are. Chief town, Freetown, 44,142 inhabitants (1921), headquarters of H.M.'s forces in West Africa. The battalion of the West African Frontier Force has its headquarters at Daru on the Moa River. Freetown, the greatest seaport in West Africa, is a second-class Imperial coaling-station, with an excellent harbour.

In 1926 there were 58 primary schools, belonging to missionary societies and assisted from public funds, and 4 Government primary schools. The average attendance in these 62 schools was 5,397. The grant paid to the assisted primary schools amounted to 3,900*l*. There were 7 assisted secondary schools with an average attendance of 582. The grant awarded these secondary schools amounted to 1,191*l*. One of these (the Albert Academy) includes industrial work in its curriculum. There were also 2 assisted industrial schools with an average attendance of 71, and one (The Sir Alfred Jones' Trades School) controlled by Government with an average of 16 boys. The assisted industrial schools received grants amounting to 214*l*. 10*s*. Besides these there were 4 Secondary and 7 Primary unassisted schools.

The Government conducts in Freetown a Model School for primary education with an average attendance of 185, and a secondary school for boys with an average attendance of 66. Fourah Bay College which is under the management of the Church Missionary and Wesleyan Missionary Societies is affiliated to the University of Durham.

Police force at end of 1926 had an authorised strength of 316, including 6 European officers. In 1926, 83 persons were convicted in the Supreme Court, and 11 in the Circuit court.

The tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in the foreign trade (excluding vessels in Admiralty service) was 4,058,059 tons, of which 2,748,704 tons were British.

A Government railway, a single line of 2ft. 6in. gauge, is open from Freetown to Pendembu, near the Liberian frontier, a length of 227½ miles. From Boia Junction, 64½ miles from Freetown, a branch line runs to Kamabai, a distance of 104 miles. There is also a mountain section from Freetown to the official quarters at Hill Station, a distance of 5½ miles. Total line open, 1923, was 339 miles, excluding sidings. Total receipts 1926, 228,527*l.*, expenditure 184,288*l.* There are over 1,265 miles of telegraph and telephone, including electric-train-staff lines. In 1926, 1,777,783 postal packets were dealt with in the Colony; money order transactions amounted to 42,590*l.* There are 544 miles of combined telegraph and telephone wires in operation. There are 69 post offices and postal agencies. At the end of 1926 there were 5,819 depositors in the savings bank with 62,129*l.* (inclusive of interest) to their credit. The West African Silver Currency was introduced in 1913 (see under Nigeria, p. 251), and in 1920 West African Alloy Coinage was put into circulation; but British coins are still largely used. Currency notes of the West African Currency Board are in circulation (150,000*l.* at the end of 1926). The Bank of British West Africa and the Colonial Bank have their headquarters at Freetown.

The Protectorate.—The Protectorate was proclaimed August 21, 1896. On March 7, 1913, an Order in Council was issued providing for its administration; this was revoked and replaced by an Order in Council of January 16, 1924. The Order applies to the territories, not being portions of the Colony of Sierra Leone, lying between the sixth and tenth degrees of north latitude and the tenth and fourteenth degrees of west longitude, and beginning at the extreme southerly point of the Colony on the Anglo-Liberian boundary, as delimited under the provisions of the Anglo-Liberian Conventions, November 11, 1885, and January 21, 1911. The Protectorate extends inland about 180 miles.

The Governor and Commander-in-Chief for the time being of the Colony of Sierra Leone is also the Governor of the Protectorate. Authority is given to the Legislative Council of Sierra Leone, by ordinance, to exercise and provide for giving effect to the powers and jurisdiction acquired by the Crown.

The Protectorate has an area of 27,000 square miles, and a population, according to the census of 1921, of 1,456,148 (natives, 1,450,903). The whole territory has been divided into three Provinces, each of which is placed under a European commissioner. Circuit courts are held at the chief centres of population; convictions in 1925, 11. There are also district commissioners' courts, chiefs' courts for purely native cases (not serious crime), and combined courts (a chief and a non-native) for small debts and trivial misdemeanours (assaults, abusive language) arising between native and non-native. The chief articles of imports are cotton goods, spirits, hardware and tobacco; the chief exports are palm kernels, kola nuts, palm oil, and ginger. A platinum-bearing area of about 40 square miles has been discovered. There were 134 mission primary schools, 69 of which received assistance from the Government. The average attendance at the assisted schools was 2,923 and the grant paid them was 2,517*l.* 8*s.*; 3 assisted secondary schools with an average attendance of 171, and which received grants amounting to 331*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*; one industrial school with an average attendance of 41, and which received a grant of 81*l.*; a Government School for the sons and nominees of chiefs at Bo, with 157 pupils at the end of 1926; a senior rural school at Njala with 94 pupils, and 8 smaller Government Rural Schools, with a total of 341 pupils; 20 apprentices were in training at the Agricultural College at Njala.

Governor.—Brig. Gen. Sir J. A. Byrne, K.B.E., C.B.

Colonial Secretary.—H. C. Luke, C.M.G.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN.

Government.

The rule of Egypt in the Sudan, after having gradually extended during the course of 60 years, was interrupted in 1882 by the revolt of the Mahdi, who, with his successor, the Khalifa, held the country from 1885 for about 13 years under a desolating tyranny. In 1896 an Anglo-Egyptian army commenced operations for the recovery of the lost provinces, and on September

2, 1898, the overthrow of the Khalifa was completed. In November, 1899, he was killed by the Egyptian forces near Gedid.

A convention between the British and Egyptian Governments, signed at Cairo, January 19, 1899, provides for the administration of the territory south of the 22nd parallel of latitude by a Governor-General, appointed by Egypt with the assent of Great Britain, and declares the general principles in accordance with which the administration shall be carried on. The British and Egyptian flags shall be used together; laws shall be made by proclamation; no duties shall be levied on imports from Egypt, and duties on imports from other countries, via the Red Sea, shall not exceed those levied in Egypt; the import and export of slaves is prohibited, and special attention shall be paid to the Brussels Act of 1890 respecting the import and export of arms, ammunition, and spirits.

The Sudan has been divided into fifteen Provinces under Governors. Administration is carried out through British District Commissioners in charge of one or more districts into which the provinces are subdivided, these units being supervised by District officials. An increasing number of natives of the country are being employed in administrative posts.

In 1910 a Governor-General's Council was created to assist the Governor-General in the discharge of his executive and legislative powers. All ordinances, laws and regulations are now made by the Governor-General in Council.

Area and Population.

Extending southwards from the frontier of Egypt to Uganda and the Belgian Congo (approximately N. lat. 5°), a distance of about 1,650 miles, and stretching from the Red Sea to the confines of Wadai in Central Africa, the subject territory has an area of about 1,014,400 square miles. The population in 1926 was estimated at 7,005,966. The Gambela Enclave, situated within the boundaries of Abyssinia, is leased by the Sudan Government from the Abyssinian Government as a Trading Post. The Eritrea-Sudan frontier and the frontier with French Equatorial Africa have been delimited and demarcated, as also has the greater part of the frontier with Abyssinia (see under Abyssinia). The chief towns are: Khartum, population 30,797, the capital; Omdurman (the old Dervish capital), population 78,624; Khartum North, population 14,319; Wadi Halfa, Merowé, El Damer, Athara, Port Sudan, Suakin, Kassala, El Dueim, Kosti, El Obeid, Nahud, Wad Medani, Singa, and El Fasher.

Instruction.

The schools under the Central Authority are classified as follows:—(1) The elementary vernacular schools (Kuttab), 88 in number (January, 1927), situated in all parts of the country, and with a total number of about 8,200 pupils. Instruction is given to boys from 7 to 12 years of age. (2) The primary schools, of which there are now 11—at Khartum, Omdurman, Wad Medani, Athara, El Obeid, Suakin, Halfa, Rufaa, Berber, El Dueim and Port Sudan. The number of boys in attendance is 1,200. After completing their primary course, boys can proceed to the upper school at the Gordon College, or they may be employed as clerks or translators in Government Offices. The school at Gordon College is attended by 370 pupils, some of whom take a course in engineering and surveying, while the rest are trained to be teachers in primary schools or translators. There is also in the Gordon College buildings a training college attended by 16 students, who undergo a five years' course, after which they are drafted out as Kadis in district courts. The industrial workshops, of which there are three, at Khartum, Omdurman and Atbara, are attended by 336 boy apprentices. There is a training college for girls in Omdurman attended by 25 students, and girls' schools at Omdurman, Rufaa, El Obeld, Dongola, Merowe, Kamlin and El Duseim, which are attended by 555 girls altogether. Affiliated to the Gordon College are the Wellcome Tropical Research Laboratories, where investigations are carried on in connection with diseases and with the economic products of the country. In addition to the above the Central authority aids some 400 native schools (Khalwas) attended in 1927 by 15,000 boys.

Justice.

The Courts of Justice as well as the Registry of Lands, the Department of Government Lands, and the offices which deal with the legal business of the Government, are administered by the Legal Secretary, who has a permanent seat ex-officio on the Governor-General's Council.

The High Court of Justice for the trial of civil suits comprises the Court of Appeal and Courts of original jurisdiction. Judges of the High Court sitting singly have general original jurisdiction. The Court of Appeal is constituted by any three or more Judges of the High Court sitting together.

The general superintendence of the High Court is vested in the Chief Justice. In addition to the Chief Justice there are four Judges of the High Court. The High Court sits at Khartum, but Judges from time to time go on circuit.

Subordinate to the High Court in every province is the Province Court. This comprises a Province Judge, except in Khartum Province, and District Judges of three grades. Appeals from decisions of a District Judge lie to the Province Judge, except in Khartum Province, where such appeals lie to the High Court. Appeals from decisions of a Province Judge lie to the High Court.

In Provinces where there is neither a High Court Judge nor a specially appointed Province Judge the Governor acts as Province Judge, and in any District where there is no specially appointed District Judge, the district commissioners and assistant district commissioners act as District Judges. There are eight specially appointed British District Judges, and five specially appointed District Judges of the second grade possessing Egyptian or other legal qualifications and experience.

The Mohammedan Law Courts administer the Moslem religious law in cases between Mohammedans relating to succession on death, marriage, divorce, and family relations generally, and also Mohammedan charitable endowments.

In some districts there are native courts presided over by sheikhs, chiefs, or village elders. This system is being developed and extended.

Criminal justice is administered either by single magistrates, or courts of three magistrates. Judges of the High Court, and District Judges of the first and second grades, governors of provinces, district and assistant district commissioners, and some subordinate administrative officials are magistrates; there are also native notables appointed as magistrates to sit as members of courts. Decisions of courts require confirmation either by the Governor of the province or by the Governor General, both of whom have extensive powers of revision.

The Sudan penal code is an adaptation of the Indian penal code.

Defence.

Egyptian troops were evacuated in 1924, and a new Sudan Defence Force, owing allegiance to the Governor-General, has been created.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure of the Sudan are as follows (£E1=£10s. 6d.):—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£E	£E		£E	£E
1922 . .	3,495,595	3,406,990	1925 . .	4,806,853	4,375,670
1923 . .	3,766,133	3,392,469	1926 . .	5,357,989	5,482,388

The main sources of revenue in 1926 were: Land Tax (£E130,879); Animal Tax (£E171,338); Royalties (£E180,078); Customs (£E555,017); Railways and Steamers (£E2,115,999); Posts and Telegraphs (£E142,206).

From 1914 onwards, the figures do not include the revenue and expenditure of Local Provincial Services, which amounted in 1922, to £E232,615 and £E200,843; 1923, £E234,338 and £E197,626; 1924, £E239,735 and £E197,637; 1925, £E239,937 and £E203,168; 1926, £E208,168 and £E192,422.

Production and Commerce.

The Sudan is the chief source of the world's supply of gum arabic and ivory. Exports of gum in 1926 amounted to 22,744 tons, value £844,198. Egyptian cotton has been well established, and increasing quantities, which compare favourably with corresponding varieties grown in Egypt, are being produced annually. In 1926 the area of the Gezira irrigation scheme (put into operation in 1925) was increased to 100,057 acres and produced a crop of 474,728 cantars of 315 lbs. seed cotton, an average of 4.74 cantars per acre. In addition, increasing quantities of high-grade, long-staple American cotton are produced in the Northern Provinces of Berber and Dongola under irrigation, and as a rain crop in the Kassala, Fung, Blue Nile and White Nile, Kordofan, Upper Nile, Nuba Mountains, Mongalla and Bahr el Ghazal Provinces. The total area under cotton in 1926 is recorded as 208,539 acres, and the crop of 1926-27 is estimated at 29,200 tons of lint and 53,400 tons of cotton seed.

Other products of the Sudan include sesamé, senna leaves and pods, ground-nuts, dates, hides and skins, salt and gold. The principal grain crops are dura (great millet), the staple food of the people in the Sudan and used as cattle and poultry food outside the Sudan, and dukhn (bulrush millet). Average annual yield of dura in the principal dura growing areas (Blue Nile, The Fung, White Nile and Kassala Provinces) for the years 1919-25, 197,000 tons. Large quantities of ivory are exported, and the cattle and sheep trade of the Sudan is capable of great development. For some years Egypt has depended to a great extent on the Sudan for her meat supply.

In 1925 there were in the Sudan approximately 20,500 horses; 345,000 asses; 2,000 mules; 1½ millions cattle; 5,250,000 goats and sheep; and 418,150 camels. Pigs are kept by the Nubas only—about 5,000.

The forests which line the Blue Nile River banks, rich in fibres and tanning material, extend to the frontier of Abyssinia. On the White Nile they contain valuable trees—the ebony tree, the gum acacia, the bamboo, the rubber creeper, whilst the sudd area in the upper reaches is composed of an inexhaustible quantity of papyrus. The finest gum forests are in Kordofan, and the best rubber in the Bahr el Ghazal.

Gold is being successfully exploited in the Sudan, a mine being worked at Gabait in the Red Sea Province. Natural salt fields on the Red Sea coast near Port Sudan supply the whole needs of the country, and considerable quantities are exported annually to Abyssinia. The output of these salt fields is capable of great expansion.

The value of imports from abroad other than tobacco, etc., in parcels post from all countries in 1926 was £E87,828. These imports are now classified in the same way as other imports.

The following table shows the value of the principal imports for 2 years :—

Internal Communications.

There is a railway from Wadi Halfa to Khartum with connections to the Red Sea at Port Sudan, to Kareima in Dongola Province, and Sennar and El Obeid; there is also a line, 215 miles long, from Kassala (near Eritrea) to Haiya, on the Atbara-Port Sudan line. The total length of line open for traffic is approximately 1,728 miles. There is also a section of line 135 miles long being constructed from Kassala to Gharef. There is a motor transport service throughout the year between Rejaf and Aba (Belgian Congo) a distance of 125 miles, and another during the summer months only between Tonga and Taloda, a distance of 99 miles. The gauge is 3ft. 6in.

All navigable arms of the Nile and its tributaries between Assuan (Egypt) and Rejaf are served by a fleet of Government steamers.

There is telegraphic communication with Egypt, Erythraea, and Abyssinia, and also wireless communication with Gambela in Western Abyssinia and submarine cable communications with the Hedjaz. There are 16 wireless stations, 4,566 miles of telegraph line open, and 8,366 miles of wire. There are 81 stationary Post and Telegraph Offices and 15 travelling Post Offices. In 1926, 18,194,207 postal packets were dealt with, 255,000 parcels and 762,325 telegrams. There were 795 telephone subscribers.

BRITISH MANDATED TERRITORIES IN AFRICA (TANGANYIKA, SOUTH-WEST AFRICA, CAMEROONS, AND TOGOLAND).

TANGANYIKA TERRITORY (LATE GERMAN EAST AFRICA).

Government.—German East Africa was conquered in 1918, and was subsequently divided between the British and Belgians. In March 1921 the district of Ujiji and part of Bukoba, formerly administered by the Belgians, were handed over to British jurisdiction. It is administered under mandates approved by the League of Nations. The mandates lay down conditions directed against slavery, forced labour (except for essential public works and services), abuses in connection with the arms traffic, the trade in spirits, usury, and security of labour. The interests of natives are safeguarded.

Under an Order in Council, dated July 22, 1920, the Territory is administered by a Governor, who is assisted by an Executive Council, all of whose members are nominated. A Legislative Council has been constituted as from Oct. 1, 1926, consisting of 13 official members and not more than 10 non-official members. Rights in or in relation to any public lands vest in the Governor, but the Secretary of State for the Colonies may appoint, if he sees fit, another trustee or trustees to exercise such right. A Native Affairs Department was established in 1926.

Area and Population.—The Territory extends from the Uмба River on the north to the Rovuma River on the south, the coast-line being about 500 miles in length, and includes the adjacent islands. The northern boundary runs approximately north-west to Lake Victoria at the intersection of the first parallel of southern latitude with the eastern shore (Mohuru Point). The boundary on the west follows the Kagera River (the eastern frontier of Ruanda), thence the eastern boundary of Urundi to Lake Tanganyika. The western boundary then follows the middle of Lake Tanganyika to its southern end at Kasanga (formerly Bismarckburg), whence it goes south-east to the northern end of Lake Nyasa. Rather less than half-way down the lake the boundary turns east and joins the Rovuma River, whose course it follows to the sea. The total area is about 373,500 square miles. Dar-es-Salaam is the capital, population, 25,000.

The native population consists mostly of tribes of mixed Bantu race, and was enumerated (April 1921) at 4,107,000. Asiatics numbered 14,991 (Indians 9,411, Goans 798, Arabs 4,782), and Europeans 2,447. In 1926 the European population was estimated at 4,330 and the native population at 4,319,000. According to German law every native born after 1905 is free, but a mild serfdom was continued under German rule. Legislation for the abolition of slavery was enacted in 1922.

Education.—Considerable progress has been made with the reorganisation of a system of education suitable to the needs of the natives. There were in 1926, 84 Government schools, 2,345 Roman Catholic schools and 1,254 Protestant schools, with a total roll of 167,883 pupils. The expenditure on education in 1926-27 was 58,897*l.*

There are 2 schools for the children of Dutch settlers in the Arusha District but no other schools for European children have yet been established. There is one monthly paper published by the Government in Swahili.

Defence.—Two battalions of the King's African Rifles are stationed in the Territory. The police force consisted (1926) of 2,465 all ranks.

Production and Industry.—The total area under forest other than savannah forest is approximately 4,183 square miles of which 89 per cent. is Government forest reserves, 9·5 per cent. awaits reservation, and 1·5 per cent. is valuable forest in private ownership. These forests contain some good merchantable timbers in large quantity, among which Pencil Cedar, Yellow-Wood, Camphor and Mvule are the most noteworthy. Ebony is plentiful near the coast, and the creeks and river mouths support extensive mangrove woods valuable as a source of tanning bark and poles. The possibility of the Territory's forests far exceeds the local consumption.

There are extensive plantations of sisal fibre and coffee as well as cotton (output in the 1926-27 season, 10,000,000 lbs.), ground-nuts, coconuts and maize. Cultivation of tobacco and tea by Europeans is now beginning.

In 1926 there were 4,479,210 cattle and 4,462,093 sheep and goats in the territory.

Minerals known to exist are: Coal, iron, gold, lead, copper, mica, asbestos and salt. Agates, topaz, moonstones, tourmalin, and quartz crystals are found, and garnets in large quantities. Prospecting and mining for gold is being carried on in the Mwanza and Mbeya districts and diamonds are being won at Mabuki near Mwanza. Tin is being mined, as yet on a small scale, in the Bukoba district; considerable prospecting activity is being shown.

In 1926, 380 steamers (exclusive of coastal boats) of 1,573,914 tons, and 4,582 dhows of 100,333 tons, entered and cleared the various coast ports from places beyond the Territory.

The chief seaports are Dar-es-Salaam, Tanga, Bagamoyo, Pangani, Kilwa, Lindi, and Mikindani.

Communications.—Light motor traffic is now possible over 7,238 miles of road during the dry season.

There are two railways of metre gauge in the territory. The Tanga Railway from Tanga to Moshi (219 miles), with a branch line to Sanya River (21 miles) towards Arusha and a connecting line between Moshi and Voi on the Uganda Railway (92 miles). The Central Railway from Dar-es-Salaam to Kigoma (772 miles), with a branch line from Tabora to Shinyanga (123 miles) towards Mwanza. A 60 c.m. tram line from Mingoyo near Lindi to Ndanda (57 miles). There are steamers on Lakes Victoria, Nyasa and Tanganyika.

Dar-es-Salaam is in telegraphic communication with many inland centres and with the adjoining territories Nyasaland, Kenya and Uganda. Cable communication exists between Dar-es-Salaam and Zanzibar and communication with the Belgian Congo is effected by Wireless between Kigoma and Albertville. A Wireless Station with a range of 450 miles spark transmission and 1,000 miles continuous wave transmission was erected at Dar-es-Salaam in 1927. There are 101 Post Offices and Postal Agencies, 81 of which are Telegraph Offices. Telegraph Money Order and Savings Bank business are conducted at 19 Head Offices, and Postal Order and ordinary Money Order business at 32 Sub Offices. Telephone Exchanges are established in 15 centres, and Trunk Telephone communication is in operation between 14 centres.

The German rupee (10 = 1*l.*) was current until the East African shilling was adopted as the standard coin as from January 1, 1922. The new currency is: silver shilling, the equivalent of 100 cents; a 50 cent silver piece; copper and bronze 10 cent, 5 cent, and 1 cent pieces. There are currency notes in denominations ranging from 5 to 1000 shillings. Four banks, the chief of which is the Standard Bank of South Africa, have branches in the country.

SOUTH-WEST AFRICA.

Situation and Physical Features.—This country is bounded on the north by Portuguese West Africa, on the west by the Atlantic Ocean, on the south and southern portion of the eastern boundary by the Cape Province of the Union, and on the remainder of the eastern boundary by the Bechuanaland Protectorate. On the western coast, a strip varying from 60 to 100 miles in width and extending from the Orange River in the south to the Ugab River, which borders on what is known as the Kaokoveld, consists of barren desert, and this is also the case in that portion of the Great Kalahari depression which is included in the country on its eastern boundary. The eastern portion is, however, not barren, being good grazing land.

The Kunene River and the Okavango, which form portions of the northern border of the country, and the Orange River in the south, are the only permanently running streams. But there is a system of great sandy dry river beds throughout the country, in which water can generally be obtained by sinking shallow wells; these are the Kuiseb, Swakop, Omaruru and Ugab on the west, the Fish River in the south, the Nosob and the Elephant Rivers in the south-east, and a series of what are known as Omuramba in the north-east, with numerous smaller stream beds. In the Grooifontein area, which geologists describe as a "karst" region, there are large supplies of underground water, but except for a few springs, mostly hot, there is no surface water throughout the country.

Government and Administration:—The country was annexed by Germany in 1884, but was surrendered to the Forces of the Union of South Africa on July 9, 1915, at Khorab. It is now administered by the Union under a Mandate from the League of Nations, dated December 17, 1920. The laws of the Union, subject to local modifications, if required, may be applied to the country and are gradually being introduced.

The Administration is conducted from Windhoek, and the country is divided into 17 Districts controlled by Magistrates. In addition there is a Native Commissioner at Windhoek who has charge of all Native Affairs in the Territory. Under him are officers at the larger labour centres and Superintendents of Reserves in the Districts where there are large Native Reserves. The officer in charge of Native Affairs in Ovamboland keeps in touch with the Ovambos living there. There is also an officer stationed at Kuring Kuru on the Okavango River, who keeps close touch with the natives living along the North-Eastern border of the territory, Windhoek, the capital, is situated in the centre of the territory, and with its surrounding district contains a population of 4,602 Europeans and 10,489 (estimated) Natives.

The administration has been vested by the Union Parliament in the Governor-General of the Union, who has delegated his powers to an Administrator with full authority to legislate. On June 8, 1925, a bill was introduced into the Union Parliament to confer a Constitution on South-West Africa, providing for an Executive Committee, an Advisory Council, and a Legislative Assembly.

Administrator.—A. J. Werth (April 1926).

The chief executive officer for the country is the Secretary for South-West Africa, H. P. Smit.

Area and Population.—The total area of the country excluding Caprivi Zipfel (now administered by Bechuanaland Protectorate) is 311,820 square miles; that of Walvis Bay, administered by S.W.A., 374·05 square miles, and that of Caprivi Zipfel 10,573·5 square miles.

The European population according to the figures of the 1926 Census amounts to 24,115. The remainder are almost all South Africans, and farmers by profession. The Native population is estimated at 234,790. As large areas of the country, particularly along the coast and in the north, are uncivilised, it has been impossible to procure precise figures. In particular it has been difficult to estimate the numbers of the Bushmen, who still exist in considerable numbers in the north-eastern portion of the country.

The principal native races are the Ovambos, Hereros, Bergdamaras or Klipkaffirs, Hottentots and Bushmen.

The Ovambos are a Bantu race and follow agriculture. They still possess to its full extent tribal organisation.

The Hereros are a pastoral people who formerly owned enormous herds of cattle. The Germans oppressed them, their tribal organisation completely disappeared and they were scattered throughout the country on farms and in the different towns, where they formed the ordinary source of labour. The Herero makes an excellent herd. Since the British occupation of the country Reserves have been set apart for them and they have considerably increased in numbers and in animal wealth.

The Bergdamaras are, it is believed, also of Bantu origin, though some authorities hold that they belong rather to the Hottentot race whose language they now speak. They are an inferior tribe and were alternately the slaves of the Hereros and the Hottentots in pre-European days, as the former or the latter were in the ascendant.

The Hottentots, so called, consist of two distinct sections: one, whose remnants are found in the central portions of the country, being of pure native extraction, the source of which is but little understood; the other is composed of tribes resulting from an admixture of European blood in the Cape with the Hottentot races residing there a couple of centuries ago, which, after conflict with their European neighbours, sought refuge across the Orange River.

The Bushmen are the oldest inhabitants of South-West Africa and are found in considerable numbers in its eastern portion from Lat. 26° to the Northern boundary.

In the centre of the country just south of the Windhoek district is the Bastard Gebiet occupied by a semi-independent race known as the Bastards, whose origin is much the same as the second class of Hottentots mentioned above, except that the admixture of European blood is much greater, and their ordinary language is Cape Dutch. These people control their own affairs to a very large extent and are governed by a Raad (Council) which is partly hereditary and partly elected. The Administration is represented by a Magistrate who assists them with advice and takes cognisance of serious crimes. They number about 5,000.

Education.—European.—There are (1926) 50 Government schools with 3,083 pupils, and 31 registered private schools with 905 pupils. Of the children in Government schools 1,142 are accommodated in hostels which are conducted by the Administration in conjunction with 21 of the Government schools. The general policy has hitherto been to bring the country children into these hostels and so obviate the necessity of single-teacher country schools. In consequence of the expenditure involved, however, this policy is now being modified, and wherever possible Government farm schools and aided private farm schools are being established. There are 17 Government-aided farm schools.

Native.—The education of the Natives is under the direct supervision of the various Missions. There are (1927) 48 Government-aided mission schools with 3,945 pupils, and 12 registered mission schools not yet aided. In 1922 a Training School for Native Teachers, subsidised by the Government, was opened with 18 students. A second Training School for Native Teachers, subsidised by the Government, was opened with 23 students in 1924.

Finance.—In 1926-27 the revenue amounted to 889,331*l.* and the expenditure to 899,154*l.* (including 261,092*l.* loan expenditure). The Estimates for 1927-28 are: revenue 631,500*l.*, expenditure 1,117,002*l.* (including 336,990*l.* loan expenditure).

The principal source of revenue is the tax on diamonds, which is 66 per cent. of the gross proceeds less 70 per cent. of the working costs.

For the purposes of Customs and Excise revenue the territory is included in the South African Customs Union, and a lump sum based on the customs and excise duties on goods consumed in the territory is paid over to the Administration. The total annual revenue from this source is now approximately 160,000*l.*

Production and Industry.—South-West Africa is essentially a stock-raising country, the absence of water rendering agriculture, except in the Northern and North-eastern portions, almost impossible. Generally speaking the southern half of the Territory is suited for the raising of small stock, while the central and northern portions are better fitted for cattle. It is estimated that in 1925 there were about 572,239 head of cattle, 2,094,878 head of small stock, 15,030 horses, 39,406 donkeys and 2,124 mules.

The staple product is diamonds, which are found along the coast from the Orange River to Conception Bay. The fields are alluvial and the deposits shallow. The stones are small but of a very good quality. Other minerals worked are copper, rich deposits of which exist at Tsumeb and in the neighbourhood, vanadium, marble and tin. Gold and silver are known to exist but in too small quantities to work remuneratively.

The principal exports are diamonds, the exports in 1925, 515,090 carats, valued at 1,387,209*l.*, and in 1926, 683,024 carats, valued at 1,863,860*l.* In the latter year 54,535 tons of copper were exported.

Imports from overseas, 1926, 1,066,668*l.*; Union of South Africa, 1,343,924*l.* Exports overseas, 2,649,875*l.*; Union of S. A., 639,933*l.*

The bulk of the direct imports into the country are landed at Walvis Bay, which is now administered as a portion of South-West Africa, and the Government proposes to develop this port as the main harbour.

Communications.—The railway line between De Aar Junction and Prieska has been extended through Upington across the Orange River and joined up with the line from Kalkfontein south to Windhoek.

The whole of the railway system, from De Aar in the Union to the border and within the border, is controlled by the S.A. Railways and Harbours Department through the Divisional Superintendent of Railways in Windhoek.

The total length of the line inside South-West Africa is 1,018 miles of 3ft. 6in. gauge, and 315 miles of 2ft. gauge. There are also 98 miles of private line, most of which have been constructed for the service of the diamond fields south of Luderitz.

At the 31st March, 1927, there were 97 Post Offices and 269 Private Bag Services distributed by rail or road transport. The number of articles posted was 3,470,636 and 4,505,280 were received.

On 31st March, 1927, there were 2,411 miles of trunk lines, 1,399 miles of telegraphs, 1,161 miles of super-imposed telegraphs and telephones, 629 miles of rural telephones and 828 miles of farm telephone lines; 81 telegraph offices, 37 telephone exchanges, and 1,047 telephone subscribers.

A Post Office Savings Bank was established in 1916. The number of accounts open at 31st March, 1927, was 3,987, with a credit of 138,117*l.*

At Walvis Bay there is a Coastal Wireless Station.

BRITISH CAMEROONS.

The Cameroons, lying between British Nigeria and the French Congo, extends from the coast north-eastwards to the southern shore of Lake Chad. It was captured from the Germans in February, 1916, and is now divided between the British and French under a Declaration signed at London July 10, 1919. The British portion is a strip, area about 31,000 square miles and population estimated at 660,000, stretching from the sea along the Nigerian frontier to Lake Chad. Bantu negroes live near the coast, Sudan negroes inland. The country is administered under a mandate which contains provisions directed against slavery, forced labour (except for essential public services) and abuses of the traffic in arms and spirituous liquors. The northern part is attached to the Provinces of Bornu and Yola in Nigeria, and the southern part, known as the Cameroons Province, to the Southern Provinces of Nigeria. There are Government schools at Victoria.

The soil in the coast region is fertile. In Victoria, experiments are being made towards the cultivation of cloves, vanilla, ginger, pepper, and other products; there is an active trade in ivory and palm-oil; hardwood and ebony are abundant, and gold and iron have been found.

There is a poll tax. The revenue and expenditure are incorporated in the accounts for Nigeria.

Imports into the British Cameroons in 1926, 275,439*l.*; exports, 220,740*l.* Chief exports: palm kernels, palm oil, cocoa, coffee. Chief imports: textiles, spirits, timber, salt, iron wares, flour, kerosene, fish, rice, tobacco, cigarettes, motor spirit, coopers' stores, hardware, and colonial produce. In 1926 there entered Victoria 136 vessels having a total tonnage of 265,536.

The mark was in use until July 1, 1922, on which date British currency, similar to that in use in Nigeria, was substituted for it.

Administrator of British Zone.—The Governor of Nigeria.

TOGOLAND.

Togoland, between the Gold Coast Colony on the west and French Dahomey on the east, was surrendered unconditionally by the Germans to British and French forces in August, 1914. On September 30th, 1920, the country was divided between France and Britain in accordance with the Franco-British declaration of July 10th, 1919. The boundary between the two spheres extends from the north-west corner in a general direction south-east and south, terminating not far from the port of Lome, but so that no part of the British sphere reaches the coast. (See map in the YEAR BOOK for 1920.) The area allotted to Great Britain is approximately 12,600 square miles, and for administrative purposes it is attached to adjacent provinces of the Gold Coast Colony and Northern Territories. The population, according to the 1921 census, is 188,265 (including 20 non-Africans, of whom 15 are Europeans).

In the British mandated area there is one Government Junior Trade School (at Yendi) with 114 pupils. The Ewe Mission has 57 schools with 1,678 pupils, average daily attendance 1,524, and the Roman Catholic Mission has 50 schools with 1,222 pupils, average daily attendance 1,107.

The revenue and expenditure of the area are now included in the figures for the Gold Coast. Expenditure still greatly exceeds revenue.

Separate figures for imports and exports are no longer available, being included in the general total for the Gold Coast.

The principal imports are cotton goods, salt, and tobacco. Principal exports are palm oil, palm kernels, cocoa, kola nuts, and raw cotton.

BERMUDA.

A Colony, with representative government, consisting of a group of 360 small islands (about 20 inhabited), 580 miles east of North Carolina, and 677 miles from New York, noted for its climate and scenery; favourite winter resort for Americans, who number some 28,000 annually.

The Spaniards visited the islands in 1515, but they had previously been discovered (the exact date is unknown) by Juan de Bermudez, after whom they were named. No settlement was made, and they were uninhabited until a party of colonists under Sir George Somers was wrecked there in 1609. A company was formed for the 'Plantation of the Somers Islands,' as they were called at first, and in 1684 the Crown took over the Government.

Governor.—Lieut. General Sir Louis Jean Bols, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., D.S.O. (3,400*l.* + 600*l.* for entertainment allowance), assisted by an Executive Council of 7 members (four official) appointed by the Crown, a Legislative Council of 9 members (three official), also appointed by the Crown, and an elected House of Assembly of 36 members; 1,486 electors.

Area, 19·3 square miles (12,360 acres, 2,759 under cultivation). Civil population at census 1921, 20,127 (7,006 white); 13,021 belong to Church of England (census 1921). Estimated civil population, 1926, 30,113 (15,613 white). In 1926 the birth-rate was 23·7 and the death-rate 12·1 per 1,000; there were 164 marriages. In 1926 there was an excess of immigration over emigration of 241. Chief town, Hamilton; population, 3,000. Bermuda is an important naval base on the North America and West Indies Station, with dockyard, victualling establishment, &c. Police force, 1926, 56.

Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 13, and Government assistance is given by the payment of grants, and, where necessary, school fees, but there are no Government schools. The aided schools must reach a certain standard of efficiency, and submit to Government inspection and control. In 1926, 32 aided primary schools, with 3,110 pupils, and 4 secondary schools, received in Government grants 10,941*l.* There are 2 garrison schools and 1 naval school; about 15 other primary schools receiving no Government grant.

Food supplies are mostly imported from the United States and Canada, and nearly all the export produce of Bermuda goes to the United States. The principal imports in 1926 were: beef, 59,901*l.*; bran, 27,681*l.*; flour, 34,445*l.*; clothing, 46,797*l.*; cotton goods, 62,537*l.*; electrical goods, 21,248*l.*; hardware, 48,806*l.*; oats, 36,202*l.*; woollen goods, 37,833*l.*; kerosene oil, 23,217*l.*; machinery, 39,391*l.*; malt liquor, 25,807*l.*; spirits, 27,988*l.*; coal (steam), 8,336*l.*; anthracite, 21,026*l.*; fresh fruit, 24,943*l.*; smoked and pickled meats, 55,734; groceries, 45,907; fancy goods, 66,248*l.*; canned goods, 26,744; butter, 39,750. The principal exports in 1926 were: potatoes, 80,665*l.*; onions, 7,668*l.*; other vegetables, 89,046*l.*

The registered shipping consisted (1925) of 13 steam vessels of 26,421 tons net, and 16 sailing vessels of 3,362 tons net, and two motor boats of 93 tons net; total net tonnage, 29,876. In 1925 the total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared was 2,749,780 tons, of which 2,367,432 were British.

There are 220 miles of telephone wire under the control of the military, and 15 of telegraph cable. There is also a private telephone company, with over 1,600 miles of wire. Cables connect the islands with Halifax, Nova Scotia, Turks Island, and Jamaica. There were (1925) 19 post offices in the colony; the number of letters and post cards dealt with in the year 1926 was 2,704,576; newspapers, book packets and circulars, 667,788; parcels, 78,481. The post office revenue was 35,319*l.*, and expenditure, 14,999*l.* Savings bank deposits on December 31, 1925, were 74,604*l.* to the credit of 3,739 depositors.

There are two banks in the Island, the Bank of Bermuda, Ltd., and the Bank of N. T. Butterfield and Son, Ltd., both local. Bills of exchange issued by the Treasury Chest Office in the Colony form the basis of exchange with the outside world.

The currency, weights, and measures are British. The British 1*l.* and 10*s.* notes are legal tender. The Bermuda Government is also authorised to issue 1*l.* notes up to an amount not exceeding 40,000*l.* A considerable quantity of American paper is also in circulation, being largely used for remittances to the United States.

CANADA.

(DOMINION OF CANADA.)

Constitution and Government.

The territories which now constitute the Dominion of Canada came under British power at various times, by settlement, conquest, or cession. Nova Scotia was temporarily occupied in 1628 by settlement at Port Royal, was ceded back to France in 1632, and was finally ceded by France in 1713, by the Treaty of Utrecht; the Hudson's Bay Company's charter, conferring rights over all the territory draining into Hudson Bay, was granted in 1670; Canada, with all its dependencies, including New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, was formally ceded to Great Britain by France in 1763; Vancouver Island was acknowledged to be British by the Oregon Boundary Treaty of 1846, and British Columbia was established as a separate colony in 1858. As originally constituted, the Dominion was composed of the provinces of Canada—Upper and Lower Canada, now Ontario and Quebec—Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. They were united under the provisions of an Act of the Imperial Parliament known as 'The British North America Act, 1867,' which came into operation on July 1, 1867, by royal proclamation. The Act provides that the Constitution of the Dominion shall be 'similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom'; that the executive authority shall be vested in the Sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland, and carried on in his name by a Governor-General and Privy Council; and that the legislative power shall be exercised by a Parliament of two Houses, called the 'Senate' and the 'House of Commons.' The powers of the Dominion Parliament include all subjects not assigned exclusively to the provincial legislatures. Provision was made in the Act for the admission of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, the North-West Territories, and Newfoundland into the Dominion; Newfoundland alone has not availed itself of such provision. In 1869 Rupert's Land, or the North-West Territories, were purchased from the Hudson's Bay Company; the province of Manitoba was erected from this territory, and admitted into the confederation on July 15, 1870. On July 20, 1871, the province of British Columbia was admitted, and Prince Edward Island on July 1, 1873. The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed from the provisional districts of Alberta, Athabaska, Assiniboia, and Saskatchewan, and admitted on September 1, 1905.

The members of the Senate are nominated for life, by summons of the Governor-General under the Great Seal of Canada. By the Amendment of the British North America Act, 1867 (May, 1915), which came into effect in 1917, the Senate consists of 96 senators—namely, 24 from Ontario, 24 from Quebec, 10 from Nova Scotia, 10 from New Brunswick, 4 from Prince Edward Island, 6 from Manitoba, 6 from British Columbia, 6 from Alberta, and 6 from Saskatchewan. The total number may not exceed 104. Each senator must be 30 years of age, a born or naturalised British subject, and must reside in, and be possessed of property, real or personal, to the value of 4,000 dollars, within the province for which he is appointed. The House of Commons is elected by the people, for five years, unless sooner dissolved, the province of Quebec always having 65 members (one for each 36,283 persons at the 1921 census), and the other provinces proportionally, according to their populations at each decennial census. The sixteenth Parliament, elected on Sept. 14, 1926, comprised 245 members, in accordance with the Representation Act of 1924 which, as the result of the census of 1921, fixed the representation as follows: 82 for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 14 for Nova Scotia, 11 for New Brunswick, 17 for Manitoba, 14 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 21 for Saskatchewan, 16 for Alberta, and 1 for the Yukon Territory. Voting is by ballot. Women have the vote and are eligible for election to the Dominion Parliament.

State of the Parties in Parliament, elected on Sept. 14, 1926: Liberals, 118; Conservatives, 91; Liberal-Progressives, 11; United Farmers of Alberta, 11; Progressives, 9; Labour, 8; and Independent, 2.

The Speaker in the House of Commons has a salary of 6,000 dollars per annum, the Deputy Speaker an allowance of 1,500 dollars, and each member an allowance of 4,000 dollars for the session, subject to deductions for non-attendance.

The Speaker and members of the Senate have the same sessional indemnity as the Speaker and members of the House of Commons, with no extra allowances.

Governor-General.—The Right Hon. Viscount Willingdon, G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., G.B.E. Appointed August 19, 1926. Salary, 50,000 dollars per annum.

He is assisted in his functions, under the provisions of the Act of 1867, by a Privy Council composed of Cabinet Ministers and other persons.

The Ministry consists of the following (sworn in on Sept. 25, 1926):

Prime Minister, Secretary of State for External Affairs, President of the Privy Council.—Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, C.M.G.

Minister of Finance and Receiver General.—Hon. James A. Robb.

Minister of National Defence—Hon. Col. J. L. Ralston, K.C., C.M.G., D.S.O.

Postmaster-General.—Hon. Peter J. Veniot, LL.D.

Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment and Minister of Public Health.

—Hon. James H. King, M.D.

Minister of Justice and Attorney-General.—Hon. Ernest Lapointe, K.C.

Minister of National Revenue.—Hon. W. D. Euler.

Minister of Marine and Fisheries.—Hon. Pierre J. A. Cardin.

Secretary of State.—Hon. Fernand Rinfret.

Minister of Railways and Canals.—Hon. Charles A. Dunning.

Minister of Interior, Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs, Minister of Mines.—Hon. Charles Stewart.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. William R. Motherwell.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. John C. Elliott, K.C., D.C.L.

Minister of Trade and Commerce.—Hon. James Malcolm.

Solicitor General.—Hon. Lucien Cannon, K.C.

Minister of Immigration and Colonization.—Hon. Robert Forke.

Minister of Labour.—Hon. Peter Heenan.

Minister without Portfolio.—Hon. Raoul Dandurand (Senator).

Each minister with portfolio has a salary of 10,000 dollars a year, and the Prime Minister 15,000 dollars, in addition to the 4,000 dollars sessional allowance. The Leader of the Opposition receives a salary of 10,000 dollars, in addition to the sessional allowance.

There is a Department of External Affairs, which has charge of all Imperial and inter-Dominion correspondence passing between Ottawa and Downing Street, and between Ottawa and the sister Dominions and Colonies. It is also the medium of communication between the Dominion Government and the foreign Consuls in Canada. An arrangement has been concluded between the British and Canadian Governments to provide more complete representation at Washington of Canadian interests than has hitherto existed. Accordingly, it has been agreed that his Majesty, on the advice of his Canadian Ministers, shall appoint a Minister Plenipotentiary, who will have charge of Canadian affairs, and will be at all times the ordinary channel of communication with the United States Government in matters of purely Canadian concern, acting upon instructions from and reporting direct to the Canadian Government. In the absence of the Ambassador, the Canadian Minister will take charge of the whole Embassy, and of the representation of Imperial as well as Canadian interests. The United States, reciprocally, have appointed a Minister Plenipotentiary at Ottawa.

High Commissioner for the Dominion of Canada in Great Britain.—Hon. P. C. Larkin. (Appointed Feb. 10, 1922.) } Canadian Building, Trafalgar

Permanent Secretary.—Lucien T. Pacaud. } Square, London, S.W. 1.

Canadian Minister in the United States.—The Hon. Charles Vincent Massey. (Appointed November 26, 1926.)

United States Minister to Canada.—The Hon. William Phillips.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT.

The nine provinces have each a separate parliament and administration, with a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Governor-General at the head of the executive. They have full powers to regulate their own local affairs and dispose of their revenues, provided only they do not interfere with the action and policy of the central administration. Among the subjects assigned exclusively to the provincial legislature are: the amendment of the provincial constitution, except as regards the office of the Lieutenant-Governor; direct taxation for revenue purposes; borrowing; management and sale of crown lands; provincial hospitals, reformatories, &c.; shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer, and other licences for local or provincial purposes; local works and undertakings, except lines of ships, railways, canals, telegraphs, &c., extending beyond the province or connecting with other provinces, and excepting also such works as the Dominion Parliament declares are for the general good; marriages; administration of justice within the province; education. Quebec and Nova Scotia have each two Chambers and the other Provinces one Chamber. The North-West Territories and the Yukon Territory are governed by Commissioners assisted by Councils.

Area and Population.

The following is the population of the area now included in the Dominion:—

Year	Population	Year	Population

The total 'urban' population of Canada in 1921 is given as 4,352,122, against 3,272,947 in 1911.

While the registration of births, marriages and deaths is under provincial control, the statistics for the nine provinces are now by arrangement compiled on a uniform system by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The following table gives the provisional results for 1926:—

Instruction.

By the British North America Act the Provincial Governments have control in educational matters. In all provinces except Quebec the number of private schools is small, so that elementary and secondary education in Canada is almost entirely State-controlled. In Quebec primary education is only partly State-controlled. Roman Catholic secondary education is given by independent institutions, mainly consisting of State-subsidised classical colleges for boys and convents for girls. Except for a few independent schools, Protestant education, primary and secondary, is State-controlled. Primary schools—i. e. elementary schools, and in all provinces, except Ontario, continuation schools other than regular secondary schools—are free, and the same is true of secondary education in most provinces. In Quebec (except in certain municipalities) a fee is collected for primary education for every child of school age without reference to school attendance. In the same province Catholic and Protestant schools are under one Department of Public Instruction and are supported by a common system of taxation, but are administered independently. In Alberta, Ontario, and Saskatchewan minority elementary schools, whether Protestant or Catholic, are called Separate Schools, and are under the same provincial administration as majority schools. Secondary education in these three provinces is non-sectarian.

There are 6 State-controlled universities in Canada, and 17 independent of provincial control, making 23 in all, with 4,126 professors, lecturers, etc., and 44,483 students in 1925-26. The 83 colleges in Canada had 20,791 students registered in 1925-26.

In 1926 there were in Canada 1,343 periodical publications, classified as follows: Dailies, 117; tri-weeklies, 7; weeklies, 910; semi-weeklies, 26; monthlies, 234; semi-monthlies, 26; miscellaneous, 30.

Justice and Crime.

There is a Supreme Court in Ottawa, having appellate, civil and criminal jurisdiction in and throughout Canada. There is an exchequer court, which is also a colonial court of admiralty, with powers as provided in the Imperial 'Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890.' There is a Superior Court in each province; county courts, with limited jurisdiction, in most of the provinces; all the judges in these courts being appointed by the Governor-General. Police magistrates and justices of the peace are appointed by the Provincial Governments.

In 1926 total convictions for indictable offences were 17,448; total convictions for all offences amounted to 196,207.

Defence.

'The National Defence Act, 1922,' which came into force January 1, 1923, provides for a Department of National Defence presided over by a Minister who is charged with all matters formerly administered by the Departments of Militia and Defence, Marine and Naval Service, and the Air Board. To advise the Minister a Defence Council has been constituted.

Militia.—Canada is organised in 11 military districts, each under a Commander and his District Staff.

The militia of Canada is classified as reserve and active, and the active is sub-divided into permanent and non-permanent forces. The permanent force consists of 15 units of all arms of the service, with an authorised establishment limited to 10,000, but at present the establishment is less than 3,600. The non-permanent active militia is made up of cavalry, artillery, machine gun, signalling, infantry and other corps. The total establishment of the Canadian non-permanent militia totals 10,240 officers and 112,621 other ranks, organised as follows :—

	Regi- ments	Batteries		Bat- talions	Com- panies	Troops	Detach- ments
		Field	Medium and Heavy
Cavalry . . . . .	34	—	—	—	—	—	—

Total . . . . .	34	62	24	123	106	14	106

In addition to the active militia, there is also the reserve militia, a framework designed to serve as a basis for contingent military organisation. Drill and training is voluntary and entails no expense to the public.

The above organisations are supplemented by numerous cadet corps and rifle associations. The Royal Military College at Kingston, Ontario, provides both a military and a general education for about 150 cadets. The course extends over four years. Each year there are available for graduates a number of commissions in the Canadian permanent force and in the British army. R.M.C. graduates are given one year's seniority in the British or Indian armies because their course is longer than that given at Woolwich or Sandhurst.

The estimated expenditure for the militia for the year ending March 31, 1928, was 10,195,394 dollars.

Navy.—The Royal Canadian Navy was established in 1910, when the cruisers Nisobe and Rainbow were taken over from the British Government as training ships. They were sold after the war. The Canadian Naval Forces comprise the Royal Canadian Navy, Naval Reserve and Naval Volunteer Reserve, the total strength in 1926 being 210 officers and 1,806 men. The only vessels at present maintained in commission are the destroyers Patrician and Patriot, and 4 mine-sweeping trawlers. The obsolescent cruiser Aurora and two submarines, after having been laid up since July 1922, have been placed on the sale list. There are also several small craft, some armed, used for fisheries protection and patrol duty on the eastern and western coasts and on the Great Lakes. H.M.C. dockyards are at Halifax (specialised as a repair base) and Esquimalt (base of supplies). A training school to accommodate 100 boys and youths is established at Halifax.

The estimates for naval services for 1927-28 were about 1,725,000 dollars.

Aeronautics.—In 1919 the Government created a Board for the control of aeronautics. Since then an organisation has been built up for the control of Civil Aviation, the administration of the Canadian Air Force and the conduct of flying operations for other Government Departments.

Under the National Defence Act, 1922, the powers of the Air Board are vested in the Minister of National Defence and the Air Board ceases to exist. The old organisation becomes part of the new Department formed by this Act.

Air Stations have been established at Vancouver, B.C., with a sub-base at Prince Rupert, B.C., High River, Alberta, Winnipeg, Man., Lac du Bonnet, Man., Norway House, Man., Pas, Man., Camp Borden, Ont., the main training base, Dartmouth, N.S., and Ottawa, Ont., the main technical and stores dépôt. Units of the force are stationed at Ottawa (headquarters), Vancouver, High River and Winnipeg.

The repair shops of the Canadian Air Force are at Camp Borden, which is also the principal training base of the Canadian Air Force. The work at the other stations is chiefly in connection with forest fire protection and survey work, reconnaissance and exploration work, transportation of survey parties and Government officials in the remoter parts of the country, photographic work in connection with surveys, fisheries protection patrols, and other similar duties.

The Air Force is organised in one wing and one squadron (Flying Training School) and a Ground School. The establishment is limited to 1,340 officers and 3,215 other ranks. The strength of the permanent service of the Royal Canadian Air Force was, on March 31, 1927, 95 officers and 375 other ranks. The estimated expenditure on the Air Services for 1927-28 was 3,892,233 dollars.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police.—The Royal Canadian Mounted Police is an armed force organised in 10 divisions under a Commissioner; on September 30, 1926, its strength was 53 officers and 910 men.

The duties of the Police are to enforce Dominion Statutes, to assist the other Departments of the Dominion Government, and to enforce the observance of law in the Yukon, in the Northwest Territories and in Indian Reserves and National Parks; when special arrangements are made between the Dominion and Provincial Governments, they assist in the enforcement of Provincial statutes and the criminal law.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Canada is largely agricultural, and among her natural resources arable lands stand unrivalled. Present information permits only a rough estimate of their actual extent, but it is believed that about 381 million acres are physically suitable for agriculture. Grain growing, dairy farming, fruit farming, ranching and fur farming, are all carried on successfully. The following table shows the estimated agricultural wealth and production for 1926 :—

Field Crops.—In 1927, 53,782,965 acres were under field crops, those most widely cultivated being wheat, oats, hay and clover, barley and rye. The following are the preliminary estimates of November 11, 1927, for acreage and yield of grain crops for 1927 :—

Live-stock.—In parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta stock-raising is still carried on as a primary industry, but the live-stock production of the Dominion at large is mainly a subsidiary of mixed farming. The following table shows the numbers of live stock by provinces in 1925 and 1926 (June):—

Fruit Farming.—Many portions of Canada are admirably adapted for fruit farming, the most renowned being the Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia, the St. John Valley district of New Brunswick, the Niagara Peninsula of Ontario and the Okanagan and other interior valleys of British Columbia. Of orchard fruits apples are most important, and in number of trees and quantity of production greatly exceed all others combined, although peaches, pears, plums, cherries and small fruits are grown in abundance. Extensive vineyards are a prominent feature of the Niagara Peninsula, and the grape production is mainly from this area. The production of apples in 1926 was (in barrels): Nova Scotia 927,370, Ontario 573,600, British Columbia 1,208,500, Quebec 111,600, New Brunswick 30,000; total, 2,851,070 (total 1925, 2,913,768 barrels).

Miscellaneous.—The wool-clip of Canada for 1926 was estimated at 17,180,270 lb., valued at 3,780,000 dollars. The production in 1926 of tobacco, which is practically confined to Ontario and Quebec, was estimated at 28,844,000 lb. from 33,356 acres. The total production of eggs (for 1926), 237,080,399 dozens, valued at 66,198,285 dollars, and the 1927 value of maple products 4,934,811 dollars.

Forestry.—The total area of land covered by forests is officially estimated at 1,227,000 square miles. Of this less than 40 per cent. is covered with commercial timber. The most important timber areas are in Northern Ontario, Quebec, and British Columbia.

The forest products (wood and wood products, unmanufactured) exported to the United Kingdom in 1926-27 amounted in value to 8,065,759 dollars, out of a total export value of 107,855,430 dollars. In 1926-27 the value of manufactured wood and paper exports was 175,237,502 dollars. The greater part of the export goes to the United States, which took more than 86 per cent. of the exportable surplus in 1926-27. The Crown forests belong to the Provincial Governments, except in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the Railway Belt (forty miles wide) in British Columbia, where they belong to the Dominion.

Fisheries.—In addition to an immense salt-water fishing area Canada has 220,000 square miles of fresh water abundantly stocked with many species of excellent food fishes.

The fisheries of the Atlantic coast take cod, haddock, hake, pollack, and halibut. The most extensive lobster fishery known is carried on along the eastern shore of Canada, while excellent oyster beds exist in many parts of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The salmon fishery is the predominant one on the Pacific coast, but an important halibut fishery is also carried on. The inland lake fisheries yield whitefish, trout, pickerel, pike, sturgeon, and fresh-water herring. In the calendar year 1926 the capital invested in vessels, gear, canneries, etc. (including working capital and stocks on hand) was 56,537,766 dollars. The total value of the produce of the fisheries of Canada in 1925 was 47,942,131 dollars, and 56,360,633 dollars in 1926. The principal kinds of fish marketed in 1926 were: salmon, 19,614,239 dollars; halibut, 4,935,472 dollars; lobsters, 5,883,672 dollars; codfish, 6,995,283 dollars; herrings, 3,238,919 dollars; haddock, 1,754,846 dollars; sardines, 1,175,268 dollars; whitefish, 2,167,865 dollars; trout, 1,051,196 dollars; pickerel, 1,385,856 dollars; pilchards, 1,256,721 dollars; smelts, 1,174,185 dollars. The exports in 1926-27 were valued at 31,253,450 dollars (dry-salted codfish, 4,769,436 dollars; canned lobsters, 3,668,954 dollars; fresh lobsters, 1,392,310 dollars; canned salmon, 9,717,353 dollars). The number of persons employed in 1926 was 75,238, including those in shore work and canneries. The number of factories and canneries in operation in 1926 was 838.

Mining.—Nova Scotia, British Columbia, Quebec, N. and W. Ontario, Alberta, and Yukon Territory are the chief mining districts. The total value of the mineral produce in 1927 was 241,773,000 dollars, and in 1926 241,140,234 dollars. The principal metals and minerals produced in 1925 and 1926 were as follows:—

Water-power.—Water-power resources of Canada have been placed at 18,255,316 h.p. on the basis of 80 per cent. installed efficiency and for conditions of ordinary minimum river flow.

The Fur Trade.—In 1925–26 (year ended June 30), 3,686,148 pelts valued at 15,072,244 dollars, were taken. Exports in 1926–27 were valued at 20,608,687 dollars, imports at 13,865,124 dollars. Fur auctions are now held on a large scale at Montreal and Winnipeg. The more important animals raised on fur farms are fox, muskrat, beaver, mink, marten, coyote, karakul sheep, and skunk. The value of animals and pelts sold from the farms during the year 1925 was 3,652,633 dollars. There were in 1925, 2,130 fox farms and 153 other fur farms in Canada.

Commerce.

The customs tariff of Canada is protective, but there is a preferential tariff in favour of the United Kingdom and most of the colonies; the duties on direct imports from the United Kingdom and the colonies, &c., being reduced, but alcoholic liquors, liquid medicines, tobacco, and refined sugar from raw sugar produced elsewhere than in British colonies, are excluded from the reduction.

Exports and imports entered for home consumption in the Dominion (merchandise only):—

Year ended March 31	Total Exports	Imports for Home Consumption
	Dollars	Dollars
1922-23	945,295,837	802,579,244

1926-27	1,267,573,142	1,080,892,505

For year ending Dec. 31, 1927, exports amounted to 1,238,783,104 dollars, and imports, 1,087,116,891 dollars.

During the fiscal year 1926, the vessels entered and cleared at Canadian ports on inland waters between Canada and the United States were: Canadian, 16,104 of 13,445,974 tons; United States, 36,992 of 16,145,857 tons.

During the fiscal year 1925, 232 vessels, with a tonnage of 36,147 tons, were built in Canadian shipyards.

Internal Communications.

Canada has a system of canal, river, and lake navigation over 2,700 miles in length, and vessels from the lake ports reach the Atlantic without breaking bulk. Up to March 31, 1927, 175,812,316 dollars had been spent on canals for construction and enlargement alone (capital expenditure). In 1926, 31,508 vessels, of 17,687,351 tons, passed through the Canadian canals, carrying 197,561 passengers and 13,477,663 tons of freight, chiefly grain, lumber, iron ore and coal.

On January 11, 1909, a treaty was signed at Washington between the United Kingdom and the United States relating to the use of the boundary waters between Canada and the United States. The treaty provides for the establishment and maintenance of an international joint commission, consisting of three representatives appointed by the King on the recommendation of the Dominion, and three appointed by the President of the United States. This commission, subject to the conditions of the treaty, has jurisdiction in all cases involving the use or obstruction or diversion of the boundary waters. Precedence is given by the treaty to uses of the waters in the following order, viz., (1) for domestic and sanitary purposes, (2) for navigation, (3) for power and irrigation.

The total single track mileage of steam railways in Canada on December 31, 1926, was 40,353. The total mileage, including second track, yard track and sidings was 54,280.

The lines built or acquired by the Canadian Government are now consolidated in one system, known as the Canadian National Railways, covering about one-half of the single track mileage, including two transcontinental lines with termini in Canada at Halifax, Vancouver and Prince Rupert, and the Grand Trunk with termini at Portland, Maine, U.S.A., and Chicago.

New lines, mileage 4,512 at an estimated cost of 18,550,000 dollars are scheduled to be completed by Aug. 31, 1930.

The mileage in private ownership is mainly that of the Canadian Pacific Railway, 14,004 in 1926. The main line of this road from Vancouver, B.C., to St John, New Brunswick, is 3,867 miles.

Statistics of the Canadian steam railways for 1926: passengers, 41·7 millions; freight, 122·5 million short tons; gross receipts, 493,599,754 dollars; working expenses, 389,503,452 dollars; net receipts, 104,096,301 dollars; capital liability, 3,560,948,932 dollars.

Electric railways in 1926, 65, mileage 1,668; passengers during the year, 748,710,836; tons of freight carried, 3,493,457. The gross earnings in 1926 reached an aggregate of 51,723,199 dollars. Operating expenses amounted to 36,453,709 dollars. Paid-up capital, 215,808,520 dollars.

On March 31, 1926, there were 12,439 post offices. Net revenue, 31,624,464 dollars; expenditure, 30,499,686 dollars. At the end of the fiscal year 1926 there were 3,800 rural mail delivery routes, on which were erected 200,731 boxes.

Money order offices on March 31, 1926, 5,706; orders issued (1925-26), 14,784,230, value 177,840,231 dollars. The Ocean Mail subsidies and steamship subventions paid by the Government amounted to 1,008,999 dollars in the fiscal year 1927.

There were 52,961 miles (10,722 being Government) of telegraph lines in Canada in 1926, and 305,933 miles of wire (including 14,020 miles of Government lines), with 4,801 offices; 3,048,647 miles of telephone wire on December 31, 1925, and 1,144,095 telephones (12·22 per 100 population).

Wireless Telegraphy.—On March 31, 1927, there were 216,669 stations in operation, including 215,650 private receiving stations. The Glace Bay-Louisburg station provides transatlantic service, while a new transatlantic beam-service station was opened in Oct. 1926 at Drummondville-Yamachiche.

Money and Credit.

The Bank Acts of Canada impose stringent conditions as to capital, notes in circulation, limit of dividend, returns to the Dominion Government, and other points, on all chartered banks. On December 31, 1926, there were 11 incorporated banks making returns to the Government, with 3,770 branches. The following are some particulars (in dollars) of the banks for 1926, the figures being an average of the twelve monthly returns: capital paid up, 116,638,254; notes in circulation, 168,885,995; total on deposit, 2,277,192,043; liabilities to the public, 2,604,601,786; assets, 2,864,019,213; percentage of liabilities to assets, 90·93.

In addition to the capital there was in 1926 the sum of 125,441,700 dollars of rest or reserve funds belonging to the banks.

Bank debits in the clearing house centre of Canada for 1926 amounted to 30,858,034,016 dollars, against 28,126,060,756 dollars in 1925. Of the transactions of 1926, Montreal had nearly 30 per cent., Toronto 27 per cent., Winnipeg 13 per cent., Ottawa 6·1 per cent., and Vancouver 5·1 per cent.

Government post-office savings-banks have been in operation in Canada since 1868; there are also Government savings-banks, under the Finance Department, in the Maritime Provinces. The post-office savings-banks had on Aug. 31, 1927, 22,445,456 dollars, and the Government savings-banks, 8,342,584 dollars on deposit.

The deposits in special savings-banks amounted on Aug. 31, 1927, to 69,943,254 dollars.

Currency, Weights, and Measures.

The denominations of money in the currency of Canada are dollars, cents and mills. The cent is one-hundredth part of a dollar, and the mill one-tenth part of a cent. A five-cent nickel coin has been issued. The standard of fineness for gold coins is nine-tenths fine, and British and United States gold coins are legal tender. The privilege of issuing notes is restricted to the Dominion Government and the chartered banks. The legal equivalent of the British sovereign is 4'86 $\frac{2}{3}$  dollars.

The Dominion Government issues Dominion notes, which are legal tender, in denominations of $1, $2, $5 and certain other larger denominations used chiefly in clearing-house transactions between banks. They may be issued in any amount. Prior to the war, the security behind Dominion notes consisted of 25 per cent. gold for the first fifty million dollars of such notes and dollar for dollar in gold for amounts in excess of fifty million. They were redeemable in gold. The war necessitated the suspension of redemption in gold, and by special legislation the Government was given power to issue Dominion notes to the banks upon the pledge of satisfactory securities and interest at not less than 5 per cent. per annum was charged the banks. At the same time banknotes were made legal tender, and an issue of twenty-six million dollars of Dominion notes without security as formerly prescribed by law, largely to implement railway guarantees, was legalised. Redemption in gold was resumed on July 1, 1925.

Dominion notes in circulation on Aug. 31, 1927, amounted to 186,253,766 dollars.

The Ottawa Branch of the Royal Mint was established in pursuance of The Ottawa Mint Act, 1901, and an annual sum not exceeding 75,000 dollars is payable to the Imperial Treasury for the purpose of defraying the salaries of officials and other expenses of the Mint, the fees and all sums received being retained by Canada. The Mint issues gold, silver and copper coins for circulation in Canada, and sovereigns and half-sovereigns coined will be legal tender in every country under the British flag. Coinage for Newfoundland was struck at the Mint in 1917 and 1918.

In 1926 coin was struck at the Ottawa Mint to the value of 21,459 dollars nickel, and 46,679 dollars bronze. No gold or silver was struck. Coin issued: bronze, 28,200 dollars; nickel, 168,500 dollars.

The legal weights and measures are the Imperial yard, pound avoirdupois, gallon, and bushel; but the hundredweight is declared to be 100 pounds and the ton 2,000 pounds avoirdupois, as in the United States.

CANADIAN PROVINCES.

ALBERTA.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of Alberta is contained in the British North America Act of 1867, and amending Acts; also in the Alberta Act of 1905, passed by the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, creating the province. In the British North America Act, provision was made for the admission of the new provinces from time to time, including the then North-West Territories, of which the present province of Alberta formed a large portion. Upon the granting of autonomy to the North-West Territories, Alberta and Saskatchewan were erected into provinces, and all the provisions of the British North America Act, except those with respect to schools, lands, and the public domain, were made to apply to Alberta as they apply to the older provinces of Canada. The province is represented by 6 members in the Senate and 16 in the House of Commons of Canada.

The executive is vested nominally in the Lieutenant-Governor, who is appointed by the federal government, but actually in the Executive Council or the Cabinet of the Legislature. Legislative power is vested in the Assembly in the name of the king.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are elected by the direct vote of the people. Woman suffrage has been established in the province.

There are 59 members in the Legislature (1927)—43 United Farmers of Alberta, 7 Liberals, 6 Labour, 4 Conservatives.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour Dr. W. Egbert.

The members of the Ministry are as follows:—

Premier and Provincial Secretary.—Hon. John E. Brownlee.

Attorney-General.—Hon. J. F. Lymburn.

Minister of Agriculture and Public Health.—Hon. Geo. Hoadley.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. O. L. McPherson.

Minister of Railways and Telephones.—Hon. Vernon W. Smith.

Minister of Education.—Hon. Perrin E. Baker.

Minister of Municipal Affairs and Provincial Treasurer.—Hon. Richard Gavin Reid.

Minister Without Portfolio.—Hon. Mrs. Irene Parlbly.

Agent General in London.—Herbert Greenfield, 1, Charing Cross, S.W.1.

Local Government.—Municipal Districts, formerly known as Local Improvement Districts, comprise the area within the limits of nine townships, i.e. 18 miles square (324 square miles), or as near to this as natural features will allow. Each Municipal District is a body corporate and governed in most cases by an elected council of six members, the chairman of whom is called the Reeve. The councillors are elected by a vote of all persons who are assessed for property within the Municipal District, together with the vote of the wife, husband, son, daughter, father or mother of such assessed persons, provided these relatives reside on the land of the assessed person.

Towns operate under the Town Act, 1927, except one which carries on under special charter. Villages are erected by Order of the Minister of Municipal Affairs, and are governed by the Village Act. The town council consists of a Mayor and six councillors elected by those whose names appear on the last revised assessment roll. These must be twenty-one years of age, and assessed for property of the value of one hundred dollars and upwards. The village council consists of three members elected annually, the Chairman being Mayor of the village.

There are six cities in Alberta, namely: Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge, Wetaskiwin, Red Deer and Medicine Hat. These cities operate under special charters granted by the North-West Territorial Assembly, and later confirmed by the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Alberta. The governing body consists of a Mayor and a council of from six to ten members, according to the size of the city.

Area and Population.—The area of the province is 255,285 square miles, 252,925 sq. miles being land area and 2,360 sq. miles water area. The population (1926), 607,584; in 1921, 588,454, in 1916, 496,525; in 1906, 184,412, and in 1901, 73,022. In 1921 the rural population numbered 365,550 (54,489 in 1901), and the urban 222,904 (18,533 in 1901). There were 8,745 Indians in 1921, or 1.49 per cent. of the total population. Population of the principal cities (1921):—Calgary, 63,305 (1926, 65,513); Edmonton, 58,821 (1926, 65,163); Lethbridge, 11,097 (1926, 10,893); Medicine Hat, 9,634 (1926, 9,536); Red Deer, 2,328 (1926, 2,006); Wetaskiwin, 2,061 (1926, 1884).

The vital statistics for 5 years are given as follows:—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of Births
1922 . . .	16,240	4,273	5,268	10,972
1923 . . .	15,153	4,417	4,843	10,310
1924 . . .	14,244	4,077	4,661	9,583
1925 . . .	14,564	4,271	4,449	10,115
1926 . . .	14,455	4,498	5,156	9,299

Instruction.—Schools of all grades are included under the term of public school. The same boards of trustees control the schools from the kindergarten to entrance to the university. All schools are supported by taxes levied by the local board, supplemented by Government grants, which are distributed to encourage elementary, secondary, and technical education and agricultural training. In 1925-26 there were 3,393 school districts, 65 being consolidated schools and 5 being rural high schools, with 150,526 pupils. There were also at private schools 2,281, and at business colleges 2,739 pupils. There are Normal schools at Calgary and Camrose for the training of teachers. The attendance during 1925-26 was 727. The University of Alberta, organised in 1907, had, in 1925-26, 1,350 students.

Justice and Crime.—Judicial power of the province is vested in the Supreme Court, consisting of two divisions, the appellate and trial divisions. The judges are appointed by the Dominion Government, and hold office for life unless impeached by Parliament. There are also minor Courts of Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction. The district courts have full jurisdiction over all matters up to 600 dollars. By the Small Debts Act of 1918 Justices have jurisdiction over matters up to 50 dollars. There are also Juvenile Courts having power to try boys and girls under 16 years of age.

The system of procedure in civil and criminal cases conforms as nearly as possible to the English system.

Finance.—The revenue of the province is derived from the following sources :—(1) Dominion subsidies ; (2) School lands ; and (3) Provincial sources.

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenue . . .	9,824,890	10,419,146	10,500,627	11,531,026	11,912,128
Expenditure . .	11,235,192	10,990,830	11,127,468	11,343,006	11,894,327

The gross bonded debt of the province, 1926, amounted to 86,894,665 dollars. Of this amount 28,723,314 dollars represent assets which are self-supporting. There are other revenue producing but not self-sustaining assets amounting to over 7,000,000 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Alberta is at present pre-eminently an agricultural province. Within the present surveyed area of the province, which comprises about 85,000,000 acres, there are about 60,000,000 acres which may be classed as lands capable of agricultural development. Up to the present, however, little more than one-sixth of this area has been brought under cultivation.

For particulars of agricultural production and live-stock, see under Canada above.

Grain elevators (1926-27), 1,078, with a capacity of 40,983,000 bushels.

A coal survey of Alberta by the Geological Survey of Canada places the coal area at 16,588 square miles containing 90,000 million tons, 80,000 million being lignite. The output in 1926 was 6,508,908 tons. Natural gas is found abundantly in numerous localities. In 1926, 10,418,697 cubic feet, valued at 3,041,100 dollars, was produced. High grade gasoline is profitably extracted from the gas in some places. In 1926, 217,088 barrels of crude petroleum were produced, valued at 906,968 dollars. Large deposits of bituminous sand containing on an average 15 to 18 per cent. bitumen are situated in the McMurray district in northern Alberta. Value of total mineral production in 1926, 26,681,641 dollars.

Alberta has 12,072,960 acres of forest reserves. Lumber cut in 1925 was 41,766,000 ft. B.M.

The lakes of the province abound in whitefish, pickerel, pike and trout, but the industry is not developed to any great extent. In 1925 the number of men engaged was 914; value of fish marketed, 1925, 458,504 dollars.

Manufacturing in the province: Flour, oatmeal, cement, and linseed oil mills, pork and beef packing houses, clay, brass and iron, glass, wood, biscuit and macaroni factories, large railway repair shops and oil refineries.

Statistics of manufactures for 1924: number of industrial establishments, 739; capital, 67,565,979 dollars; number of employees, 8,150; salaries and wages, 10,709,140 dollars; cost of materials, 39,102,975 dollars; value of products, 65,245,361 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The principal exports of the province consist of grain, live-stock, meat and meat products, wool, fish, butter, eggs, mining and timber products.

Length of railway lines 5,061 miles in 1926. Alberta's modern telephone system is owned and operated by the Provincial Government except in the cities of Banff and Edmonton. Automatic exchanges are operated at Calgary, Lethbridge, and Medicine Hat. 187,584 miles of wire serve 285 exchanges and 283 toll stations. There are 57,250 rural and urban subscribers, and first-class long distance service is available to all points in the Province as well as every other Province in the Dominion and every State in the Union.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Constitution and Government.—British Columbia (then known as New Caledonia) and Vancouver Island originally formed part of the Hudson's Bay Company's concession. In 1849 Vancouver, and in 1858 British Columbia, were constituted Crown Colonies, and in 1866 the two Colonies were united. On July 20th, 1871, British Columbia entered the Canadian Confederation, and is represented by 6 members in the Senate, and 14 in the House of Commons of Canada.

The Provincial Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly of 48 members on the system of executive administration known as a "responsible government." The Assembly is elected for five years, every adult, male or female (British subjects), having resided six months in the Province, duly registered, being entitled to vote.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour Robert R. Bruce (1926).

The members of the Ministry are as follows:—

Premier, President of the Council, Minister of Education, Minister of Finance and Minister of Industries.—Hon. J. D. Maclean, M.D., C.M.

Provincial funded debt, April 30, 1926: 72,882,803 dollars. Estimated assets, 117,122,422 dollars.

Production and Industry.—The southern part of Manitoba is rich agricultural land, while the northern two-thirds of the province form part of the Canadian shield, an area underlain by pre-Cambrian rocks which have been proved to be rich in mineral deposits in other parts of Canada. Estimated arable land, 25,000,000 acres, of which about 30 per cent. is under cultivation. For particulars of agricultural production and number of live-stock, see under Canada above.

Total value of minerals, 1925, 2,276,759 dollars, largely building material and gypsum. The Province has proved gold and copper deposits of great extent, which are being developed. The numerous lakes in Manitoba furnish large quantities of excellent fish. In 1925 the number of men engaged was 3,390; value of equipment, 847,681 dollars; catch of fish, 191,158 cwt.; value marketed in 1924, 1,232,563 dollars; in 1925, 1,466,939 dollars. Value of lumber production in 1925, 2,178,051 dollars. Value of pelts, season 1925–26, 1,869,904 dollars. Forest reserves in Manitoba 2,386,560 acres.

Statistics of manufactures for 1925: 769 industrial establishments, with a capital of 120,342,238 dollars; employees, 19,973; wages and salaries, 25,286,173 dollars; cost of materials used, 71,683,113 dollars; and value of products, 124,145,763 dollars.

Communications.—In the year 1927, the Province had 4,610 miles of railway as compared with 3,074 miles in 1907. There are (1927) more than 257,000 miles of telephone wire in Manitoba, and 71,000 telephones.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Constitution and Government.—New Brunswick was discovered by Jacques Cartier in 1534. It was acquired by the English under the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, and was settled by the English as early as 1761. In 1784 it was separated from Nova Scotia. The Government is at present vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 48 members elected for five years. Franchise—any male or female British subject of full age, after six months' residence. Last election, August, 1925 :—Liberals 12, Conservatives 35, Independents 1. The province is represented by 10 members of the Senate and 11 in the Canadian House of Commons.

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. W. F. Todd.

The members of the Ministry are as follows (1925) :—

Premier and Attorney-General.—Hon. J. B. M. Baxter.

Provincial Secretary.—Hon. A. J. Leger.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. Lewis Smith.

Minister of Public Health and Labour.—Hon. Dr H. I. Taylor.

President of Executive Council.—Hon. L. P. D. Tilley.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. D. A. Stewart.

Minister of Lands and Mines.—Hon. C. D. Richards.

Minister without Portfolio.—Hon. E. A. Reilly.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 27,985 square miles, of which 27,911 square miles are land area. There are 7½ million acres of Crown lands, principally lumber lands. The population in 1921 was 387,876; in 1911, 351,889. The rural population in 1921 was 265,648. Population of the principal cities (1921):—St. John, 47,166; Moncton, 17,488; Fredericton (capital), 8,114.

Instruction.—Education is free and undenominational. There are three Universities. The University of New Brunswick, at Fredericton, founded in 1800, had 168 students in 1922; the Mount Allison University at Sackville had 265 students; and the University of St. Joseph's College at Memramcook had 53 undergraduates in 1923. There were (1922) 77,774 pupils and 2,243 teachers in the 2,063 public schools. Total expenditure on education in 1921-22, 2,657,046 dollars.

Finance.—The finance for recent years is shown as follows (years ended October 31):—

Year	Ordinary Revenue	Ordinary Expenditure	Year	Ordinary Revenue	Ordinary Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1921	3,105,279	3,371,072	1924	3,838,084	3,827,960
1922	3,117,445	3,046,869	1925	2,607,611	4,144,780
1923	3,445,878	3,708,971	1926	4,382,655	4,145,820

Funded debt, October 31, 1926, 35,325,909 dollars.

Production and Industry.—New Brunswick is productive in agriculture, manufacture, mining, fishing, and forest products. The total area under field crops in 1926 was 891,631 acres. For particulars of agricultural production and live-stock see under Canada, pp 284, 285.

The capital invested in the fishing industry was estimated in 1925 at 5,247,448 dollars; men employed on the fleets and inland waters, 8,939; employees in canneries, freezers, and fish houses, 2,401. The total value of fisheries in 1924 was 5,383,809 dollars, and in 1925, 4,798,589 dollars.

The Government owns over 10,000 square miles of forests. The production of lumber in 1925 from Crown lands and granted lands was 405,203,000 feet board measure. The total value was 10,513,568 dollars. Spruce is the principal wood. The total capital invested in the lumber industry in 1925 was estimated at 24,168,332 dollars.

The Province possesses various minerals. Iron, copper, antimony, lead, zinc, tungsten, manganese, coal, oil shale, gypsum, salt, infusorial earth, limestone, granites and pulpstones are found, but the only active mining in the year 1925 was in coal and gypsum. Natural gas, with oil, is produced near Moncton. Coal output, 1927, 171,177 short tons.

In 1924 there were 846 industrial establishments, with a capital of 88,357,818 dollars, employing 15,805 wage-earners; salaries and wages, 12,812,718 dollars; cost of materials, 40,503,685 dollars; value of products, 67,456,026 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The exports of the Province in 1925-26 amounted to 97,876,375 dollars; the imports for consumption to 26,904,574 dollars.

The Province had 1,941 miles of railway operating in 1924, as compared with 1,503 miles in 1907. In 1925 there were 44,124 miles of telephone wire and 28,945 telephones.

NOVA SCOTIA.

The first settlement was made by the French at the end of the sixteenth century, and the province was called Acadia until finally ceded to the British by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713.

Constitution and Government.—Under the “British North America Act” of 1867 the Legislature of Nova Scotia may exclusively make laws in relation to local matters, including direct taxation within the Province, and the administration of justice. The Legislature of Nova Scotia consists of a Lieutenant-Governor, appointed and paid by the Federal Government, and holding office for five years; and a House of Assembly, chosen by popular vote every five years. The province is represented in the Dominion Senate by 10 members, and in the House of Commons by 14.

The franchise and eligibility to the Legislature are granted to every person, whether male or female, if of full age (21 years), a British subject, and a resident for one year in the place where the person votes, and if no by law otherwise disqualified, or in receipt of aid as a pauper.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour James C. Tory (1925).

The Members of the Ministry are as follows (appointed 1925):—

Premier, Provincial Secretary and Treasurer.—Hon. E. N. Rhodes, K.C.

Minister of Public Works and Mines.—Col. G. S. Harrington, K.C.

Attorney-General.—Hon. W. L. Hall, K.C.

Minister of Highways.—Hon. P. C. Black.

Natural Resources.—Hon. J. A. Walker.

Ministers Without Portfolio.—Hon. Dr. Le Blanc; Hon. J. Fred. Fraser; Hon. Dr. W. N. Reh fuss.

Agent-General in London.—John Howard, 31 Spring Gardens, Trafalgar Square, London, S. W. 1.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 21,428 square miles, of which 21,068 square miles are land area, and 360 square miles water area. The population in 1921 was 523,837; in 1911, 492,338; in 1901, 459,574; and in 1891, 450,896.

Population of the principal cities and towns (1921):—Halifax, 58,372; Sydney, 22,545; Glace Bay, 17,007; Dartmouth, 7,899; Amherst, 9,998; New Glasgow, 8,974; Sydney Mines, 8,327; Truro, 7,562; Yarmouth, 7,093.

The vital statistics for three years are as follows:—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of births
1923	11,680	3,246	6,868	4,812
1924	11,801	2,999	6,563	5,218
1925	11,400	2,922	6,045	5,355

Religion.—The denominations according to the Census of 1921 were:—Roman Catholics, 160,802; Presbyterians, 109,860; Baptists, 86,833; Anglicans, 85,604; Methodists, 59,065; and Congregationalists, 2,372.

There are also various other sects with small numbers of adherents.

Instruction.—Education in Nova Scotia is free, compulsory, and undenominational. Besides the elementary schools, high schools and academies, there are in Halifax a Maritime Provinces school for the blind and one for the deaf. A large Provincial Agricultural College is established at Truro; also a Normal School for the training of teachers. The Provincial Technical College grants degrees in civil, mining, chemical and electrical engineering.

It also conducts correspondence courses in numerous subjects. Besides this central institution there are, working under it, coal mining schools near all the collieries, and engineering and technical schools of various kinds in the industrial centres.

The total expenditure on education in 1926 was 3,570,626 dollars. The Province has 4 universities; 3,089 schools, with 3,320 teachers and 112,391 pupils.

Justice and Crime.—Justice in Nova Scotia is administered by the following courts: Courts for the collection of small debts; county courts; inferior courts in criminal cases; courts of superior jurisdiction; divorce court, probate courts. The supreme court of appeal is composed of a chief justice and six judges. There are also courts for the revision of assessment rolls and voters lists, and a court for juvenile delinquents.

In 1926, 1,862 persons were imprisoned for various crimes and misdemeanours, and 217 children were brought before the court for juvenile delinquents.

Finance.—In Nova Scotia there is no general direct Government taxation. The revenue is raised from the Dominion subsidy; royalty on coal and other minerals; succession duty; special taxes on banks, incorporated companies, partnerships, automobiles and theatres, marriage licences, and statutory fees.

Revenue, expenditure, and debt for five years :—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Debt
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1922	4,791,207	4,787,872	25,462,798
1923	5,817,885	5,208,210	27,134,506
1924	5,461,888	5,577,872	31,159,640
1925	4,467,484	5,969,544	36,000,928
1926	5,744,574	6,327,042	35,253,323

Production and Industry.—Nova Scotia is largely an agricultural Province. Fruit-growing is specially profitable, and apples are the most important fruit grown; in 1926 the output was about 850,000 barrels. Nova Scotia is admirably adapted for dairying. Owing to the cool, moist climate, fodder may be raised easily, and the pastures are excellent. For particulars of agricultural production and live-stock, see under Canada above.

Principal Minerals are (Sept. 30, 1926): coal, 5,652,314 tons; coke, 453,228 tons; pig iron, 294,054 tons; steel ingots, 308,012 tons; tar, 6,634,031 gallons; gold, 1,351 ozs.

The known coal fields embrace 1,000 square miles. The gold districts cover about 10,250 square miles. The estimated value of the principal mineral productions in 1926 was:—Coal, 31,500,000 dollars; steel, iron, coke and by-products, 11,500,000 dollars; gypsum, limestone, etc., 2,003,000 dollars; clay production, 689,000 dollars.

The estimated forest area of Nova Scotia is over 12,000 square miles. The principal trees are spruce, fir, hemlock, pine, birch, oak and maple. The estimated value of the forest products in 1926 reached the sum of 14,500,000 dollars.

The fisheries of the Province are, next to British Columbia, the most extensive in Canada. In 1926 12,785,188 dollars were invested in this industry, and about 20,000 men were employed. Cod, lobsters, mackerel, herring, and haddock are the principal fish. Total market value of fish caught in 1926, 11,750,000 dollars.

The number of industrial establishments was (in 1924) 1,166, with a capital invested of 108,535,273 dollars, employing 16,093 wage-earners; wages and salaries, 11,553,900 dollars; cost of materials, 38,930,734 dollars; value of products, 64,573,092 dollars.

The annual wealth of the Province in 1926 was estimated at 177,129,300 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The imports entered for consumption during 1926 were 21,367,022 dollars; the exports, 50,496,594 dollars.

The country is covered with a network of railways, 1,451 miles in extent. There are 18,000 miles of highways. Besides this, subsidised boats ply round the shores making regular calls at all the important ports.

In 1921 there were 62,383 miles of telephone wire and 35,418 telephones.

The state of the parties in the Provincial Legislature in 1927:—Conservatives, 75; Progressives, 13; Liberals, 21; United Farmers of Ontario, 8; total 112.

Area and Population.—The greatest extent of the Province from east to west is 1,000 miles and from north to south 1,075 miles. The area is 407,262 square miles (365,880 sq. miles land area and 41,382 water). The Province is roughly divided into two sections by a line running westward from Mattawa on the Ottawa River to Georgian Bay—southern (or old) Ontario, the older settled portion, with an area of about 77,000 square miles, and northern (or new) Ontario, with an area of about 330,000 square miles, of which 146,400 square miles, the district of Patricia, was added in 1912. Assessed population of the principal cities (1924):—Toronto (capital), 538,771; Ottawa, 117,239; Hamilton, 120,945; London, 61,867.

The estimated population for 1927 was 3,187,000. The population of Toronto in 1926 (with suburbs) was estimated at 670,945. The Indian population of the Province in 1921 was 26,436.

Instruction.—There is a complete State system of elementary and secondary schools, supported by provincial grants, and by local taxation. There is one provincial University—the University of Toronto, founded in 1827. The other Universities are Queen's at Kingston, Western at London, McMaster at Toronto, and Ottawa in Ottawa, which are private foundations. The first two are now undenominational and are aided by the State. The Royal Military College at Kingston is maintained by the Dominion Government. There were, in 1925–26, 7,105 elementary schools and 422 secondary schools, attended by 739,674 pupils. There are 18,410 certificated teachers engaged in these elementary and secondary schools. The total expenditure on elementary schools in 1925 was 33,298,817 dollars, and on secondary schools 12,356,796 dollars.

Finance.—The revenues of the Province are derived from the sale of Crown lands, timber, mining, liquor sales, amusement and betting taxes, succession duties and other fees, supplemented by a subsidy from the Dominion. The revenue and expenditure in recent years were as follow:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1923-23	34,110,212	49,305,439	1925-26	50,841,042	51,251,781
1923-24	40,540,923	48,866,568	1926-27	56,206,537	56,008,547
1924-25	46,602,803	51,462,178	1927-28	55,790,000	55,613,000

Production and Industry.—The Province is rich in agricultural and mineral resources; it abounds in lakes and rivers, forests, water powers, and fisheries. The land under cultivation is about 14,000,000 acres, more than 1,000,000 additional acres are cleared, and 25,400,000 acres are assessed. Of the total land surface of the Province, which is 234,000,000 acres, the amount of arable land is much larger than the portion now under cultivation. Beyond the cultivated portion it is estimated that northern Ontario alone contains some 20,000,000 acres of alluvial soil, not including the vast stretches of agricultural land south and west of James Bay. The farm values for 1925 were:—Land, 879,212,000 dollars; buildings, 490,027,000 dollars; implements, 164,188,000 dollars; and live-stock, 233,160,000 dollars. For particulars of agricultural production and live-stock see under Canada above.

310 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

The mineral production in 1926 included gold, 1,497,215 ozs., value 30,950,753 dollars; silver, 9,382,816 ozs., 5,781,706 dollars; nickel in matte exported, 16,988 short tons; nickel, metallic, 25,627,602 lbs.; nickel oxide, 7,862,624 lbs.; copper in matte exported, 11,596 short tons; copper, metallic, 17,713,530 lbs.; pig iron (from Ontario ore only), nil; total pig iron produced, 545,737 short tons, 9,805,300 dollars; Portland cement, 3,398,860 barrels; crude petroleum, 4,693,999 imperial gallons; natural gas, 7,764,996 thousand cub. ft. Total value of metallic minerals in 1925, 62,495,472 dollars, and in 1926, 59,166,249 dollars. Non-metallic minerals and structural materials in 1925 were worth 25,087,834 dollars, and in 1926, 25,195,515 dollars. The total value of the mineral production of Ontario in 1926 was 84,361,764 dollars as against 87,583,306 dollars in 1925.

The value of Ontario's gold production in 1927 was 33,409,247 dollars.

Total area of forests 240,000 square miles; chief timber is spruce, pine and poplar.

In 1924 Ontario had 9,453 manufacturing establishments, with a capital of 1,836,269,551 dollars, employing 252,596 wage-earners; wages and salaries, 296,508,913 dollars; cost of materials, 754,469,838 dollars; value of products, 1,397,873 dollars.

Communications.—In 1925 there were 10,908 miles of steam railway in Ontario, as compared with 7,368 in 1907. There were (1925) 1,241,647 miles of telephone wires and 511,286 telephones in 1926.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

This island was discovered by Sebastian Cabot in 1497; it was first settled by the French, but was taken from them in 1758. It was annexed to Nova Scotia in 1763, and constituted a separate colony in 1769.

Constitution and Government.—Prince Edward Island entered the Confederation on July 1, 1873. The Provincial Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members, who are elected for 4 years, half by real property holders and the remainder by universal male and female suffrage. Women can also be elected to the Assembly. State of Parties in 1923 (elected July, 1923): Conservatives, 25; Liberals, 5.

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. Frank R. Hartz.

The members of the Ministry are as follows:—

Premier and Attorney-General.—Hon. A. C. Saunders, K.C.

Provincial Secretary-Treasurer.—Hon. W. M. Lea.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. J. P. McIntyre.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Hon. J. Blanchard; Hon. D. McDonald; Hon. B. W. Le Page; Hon. W. B. Butler; Hon. J. F. McNeill, M.D.; Hon. O. S. Inman, K.C.

Area and Population.—The province, which is the smallest in the Dominion, lies at the mouth of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is separated from the mainland of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia by Northumberland Strait. The area of the island is 2,184 sq. miles. The total population (1921 census) was 88,615. The rural population in 1921 was 69,522 (88,304 in 1901). Population of the principal cities (1921):—Charlottetown (capital), 12,347; Summerside, 3,228.

Religion and Instruction.—The population of the Province at the census of 1921 was divided among the different creeds as follows:—Roman Catholic, 39,312; Presbyterian, 25,945; Methodist, 11,408; Baptist, 5,316; Anglican, 5,057. There were (1924) 472 schools, 614 teachers, 17,281 pupils. This is exclusive of 3 Roman Catholic convent schools at Tignish, Summerside and Charlottetown, with 551 pupils. There are two colleges, Prince of Wales College, head of the Provincial school system, and St. Dunstan's, a Roman Catholic institution, both in Charlottetown. Total expenditure on public education in 1924 was 279,898 dollars.

The expenditure does not include sinking fund or highway improvement, the outlay on the latter in 1924 being about 235,000 dollars.

The total liabilities of the Province amounted on 31st December, 1924, to 1,951,663 dollars, less 775,791 dollars standing to the credit of the Province at Ottawa.

Production and Industry.—The farm land occupied in 1921 was 1,216,483 acres. Field crops in 1924 covered about 566,000 acres. The land in natural forest covers 856,996 acres, and in pasture 298,454. For particulars of agricultural production and live-stock see under Canada above.

Silver fox breeding is extensively carried on, and pelts are shipped to United States and European markets; breeding foxes are exported to all northern countries. The value of pelts marketed and live foxes sold for breeding purposes in 1923 was estimated at 3,000,000 dollars.

The total value of the fisheries in 1923 was 1,754,980 dollars. Of the total, lobsters make up 1,388,044 dollars, smelts, cod, herring and oysters being, in the order named, the largest other items.

The fishing season of 1925 showed a considerable falling off in production as compared with the previous year, notably in lobsters. Oysters abound in Richmond Bay, where the beds extend to 15,000 acres. In 1912 the Provincial Government acquired from the Dominion Government the possession and control of the oyster areas surrounding the Province. Some 20,000 acres have been surveyed and 5,000 acres leased for replanting and development. So far (1925) the experiment has proved unsuccessful, owing to the importation of destructive pests with oysters used in replanting.

dollars ; cost of materials, 2,658,448 dollars ; value of products, 4,234,132 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The trade of Prince Edward Island is chiefly with the other provinces of Canada and this inter-provincial trade does not appear in the trade statistics. In 1922-23 the exports to other countries amounted to 416,248 dollars ; the imports entered for consumption to 954,546 dollars. In 1924 the province had 279 miles of railway. A car ferry steamer of great power is in operation, connecting the Government Railway in Prince Edward Island with the Canadian National Railway on the mainland. Daily steamship communication with the mainland was successfully maintained for the first time during the winter of 1917-18, and has since continued without interruption. In 1925 there were 5,432 miles of telephone wires and 5,517 telephones.

QUEBEC.

Quebec was formerly known as New France or Canada from 1535 to 1763 ; as the Province of Quebec from 1763 to 1790 ; as Lower Canada from 1791 to 1846 ; as Canada East from 1846 to 1867 ; and when, by the union of the four original provinces, the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada was formed, it again became known as the Province of Quebec.

Constitution and Government.—The Provincial Government is modelled on that of the Dominion organization and is in the hands of a Lieutenant-Governor and a responsible Ministry, assisted by a Legislative Council of 24 members, appointed for life by the Lieutenant-Governor, and a Legislative Assembly of 85 members elected for 5 years. Members of both Houses receive 2,000 dollars per session. Quebec is the only Canadian Province in which women are not enfranchised or eligible for election to the Legislature. Last election, May 16, 1927 : Liberals 75, Conservatives 10.

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. N. Pérodeau (appointed January, 1924).

The members of the Ministry (September, 1924) are as follows :—

Agent-General in Brussels.—Mr. G. Langlois, 38A Bld. Bischoffsheim.

Area and Population.—The area of Quebec (as amended by the Labrador Boundary Award) is 594,434 sq. miles (583,895 sq. miles land area and 10,539 sq. miles water). Of this extent, 351,780 sq. miles represents the Territory of Ungava, annexed in 1912 under the Quebec Boundaries Extension Act. The population in 1921 was 2,861,199 (1,180,028 males and 1,181,171 females) as against 2,005,776 in 1911, or an increase of 17 per cent. Of the 1921 population 357,108 were of British and 1,889,277 of French origin. The rural population in 1921 was 1,038,128, and the urban population 1,323,071. According to religious beliefs, in 1921, 2,023,993 were Roman Catholics, 121,967 Anglicans, 73,748 Presbyterians, 41,884 Methodists, 47,766 Jews and 14,148 Protestants. Population of the principal cities (Municipal Statistics, 1923):—Montreal, 684,500; Quebec (capital) 126,000; Hull, 35,233; Verdun, 42,247; Three Rivers, 35,000; Sherbrooke, 25,021.

Instruction.—The province has four Universities: McGill (Montreal, Protestant) founded in 1841, with 3,594 students in 1924–25; Lennoxville, also Protestant, founded in 1845, with 120 students in 1924–25; Laval (Quebec), founded in 1852, and University of Montreal (Montreal), the centre of higher education for the Catholic population of the province, with 3,090 students in Quebec in 1924–25, and 6,256 in Montreal. Quebec had, in 1925, 8,086 schools of all kinds, with 593,414 pupils and 22,682 teachers. All the schools are sectarian, i.e., are either Catholic or Protestant. The total expenditure on education was 28,980,568 dollars in 1925.

Finance.—The ordinary revenue and expenditure for 6 years:—

Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure	Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1922	21,009,396	16,575,976	1925	25,021,320	24,273,192
1923	21,634,642	20,190,276	1926	27,206,335	26,686,180
1924	23,170,738	21,867,203	1927	30,924,997	29,078,703

The total public debt at June 30, 1927, was 58,812,951 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the basic industry of the Province. The principal agricultural regions are as follows: the Gaspesian Peninsula, the St. Lawrence valley, the Eastern Townships, and the north of the Province, comprising the newly colonized districts of Abitibi, Temiscamingue and Lake St. John. According to the latest Federal estimates, the total area under cultivation in the Province, during 1926, was 6,867,200 acres and the value of the crops 139,263,000 dollars. The principal varieties cultivated are wheat, oats, barley, rye, peas, buckwheat, mixed grains, flaxseed, corn, potatoes, turnips, hay and clover and alfalfa.

There are about 203,590 sq. miles of forests, made up as follows: private forests, 9,745 sq. miles; wood lots under location tickets, 2,023 sq. miles; forests leased, 79,303 sq. miles; township forest reserves, 482 sq. miles; and timber lands not leased, 111,987 sq. miles. Quebec leads the Canadian Provinces in pulpwood production, having more than half of the Canadian total. In 1925, 1,370,303 tons of pulp and 940,000 tons of paper were produced, valued at 121,290,231 dollars.

The total value of the fisheries in 1926 was 3,110,964 dollars. The principal fish are cod, mackerel, lobsters, salmon, and herring.

The value of the mineral production of the province was 25,750,463 dollars in 1926. Asbestos constitutes the principal element of production, with 279,389 tons valued at 10,095,487 dollars in 1926. The important asbestos deposits of the Province are found in the region called Eastern Townships, situated 65 miles south of the city of Quebec. The asbestos of the chrysolite variety is extracted from rock in the serpentine belt. Quebec produces more than 85 per cent. of the world's asbestos. Among other minerals produced are copper, feldspar, gold, graphite, magnesite, mica, molybdenite, phosphate, silver, zinc, lead, brick, cement, granite, lime, marble and tiles. In Northern Quebec, in the Rouyn district, valuable gold deposits have been discovered within the last three years and important exploitations are now under way.

The number of fur farms in the Province in 1925 was 456, with property and buildings valued at 460,000 dollars and animals in captivity estimated at over 1,250,000 dollars. Of all the wild animals, the fox has proved the most adaptable to breeding. The total value of pelts of animals captured was over two million dollars, of these beavers rank first with a total value of 960,000 dollars. The royalties collected on pelts taken during the same year netted to the Government the sum of 100,000 dollars.

In 1925 there were 6,995 industrial establishments in the province, with a capital of 1,136,033,133 dollars; employees, 168,237; salaries and wages, 169,686,055 dollars; cost of materials, 412,460,003 dollars; value of products, 820,563,757 dollars. Among the leading industries are pulp and paper, cotton and its products, cigars and cigarettes, railway rolling stock, butter and cheese, flour and its products, boots and shoes, saw mills, electric light and power, slaughtering and meat packing, breweries and rubber goods.

Commerce and Communications.—Total imports for consumption in 1925-26 amounted to 253,428,000 dollars; total exports to 423,235,000 dollars.

Quebec had 5,267 miles of railway and 440 miles of tramway in 1925. There were 225,000 telephones and 2,429 post offices, as well as 815 telegraph companies in 1926. It is estimated that there are 36,000 miles of road in the Province, of which 8,500 are improved.

This territory, including the counties of Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice, named from the three rivers, was first partially settled by the Dutch West India Company about 1620. The Dutch retained their hold until 1796, when it was captured by the English, and was finally ceded to Great Britain in 1814.

Constitution and Government.—The Governor is assisted by a Court of Policy, a legislative body, consisting of seven official members and eight elected members, and a Combined Court, containing, in addition to the above, six financial representatives elected by the registered voters. The Combined Court considers the Estimate of Expenditure, raises the Ways and Means to meet it, and this Court alone can levy taxes. Executive and administrative functions are exercised by the Governor and an Executive Council. There are 11,208 registered electors. The law of the Colony, both civil and criminal, is based on the common and statute law of England, except that the English law of personal property applies to both movable and immovable property, with certain exceptions, and the Roman-Dutch legitimatisation per subsequens matrimonium is preserved. There is absolute equality of males and females before the law as regards divorce, property, succession and all other matters. Appeals lie to the Full Court of the Supreme Court and to the West Indian Court of Appeal, and from each of these Courts to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Area, Population, etc.—Area, 89,480 square miles. Population at census 1921, 297,691 (excluding about 9,700 aborigines). Population, 1926, 306,844. Births (1926) 10,653 (34·7 per 1,000); deaths, 7,837 (25·5 per 1,000). Capital, Georgetown, 57,063. Living on sugar estates (census 1921), 58,822; Immigration Department estimate East Indians (1926), 57,125; in villages and Settlements (1926), 69,301. Total East Indians (1926), 126,426. ### HONDURAS, BRITISH.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Sir J. A. Burdon, K.B.E., C.M.G. (2,000l.), assisted by an Executive Council of six members, and a Legislative Council consisting of six official and seven unofficial members.

British Honduras is a Crown Colony on the Caribbean Sea, south of Yucatan, and 700 miles west from Jamaica. Its early settlement was probably effected by woodcutters from Jamaica about 1638, and from that date to 1798, in spite of opposition from the Spaniards, settlers held their own and prospered. In 1786 the Home Government appointed a Superintendent, and in 1862 the settlement was declared a Colony, subordinate to Jamaica. It became an independent colony in 1884.

Area and Population.—Area, 8,598 sq. miles. Population, census 1921, 45,317 (22,564 males, and 22,753 females). Estimated population at December 31, 1926: 48,584 persons (24,022 males, 24,562 females). The birth-rate per 1,000 (1926) was 38.36, and the death-rate 24.14. In 1926 there were 518 marriages. Primary schools (1926), 71; children enrolled, 6,900; average attendance, 5,028; Government grant (expended), 1,440l. There are 5 schools with secondary departments, and altogether about 596 pupils. They are under denominational management and none receive aid from Government. The total school roll, including private schools, was

NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR.

Newfoundland was discovered by John Cabot in 1497. It was soon frequented by the Portuguese, Spanish and French for its fisheries. Guy, Calvert and others made unsuccessful attempts to colonise the island, but in the 17th century English colonists established themselves there. A French station also existed on the island, and there were constant disputes as to fishing rights. Although exclusive British sovereignty was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, these disputes were not finally settled till 1904.

The coast is rugged, especially on the south-west, where the coast range reaches an elevation of nearly 2,000 feet. The hills attain their summit within a few miles of the salt water, and then spread out into an undulating country, consisting largely of barrens and marshes, and intersected by numerous rivers and lakes. On the borders of the lakes and water-courses good land is generally found, and in some cases, as about the Exploits, the Gander and the Humber, it is heavily timbered.

Constitution and Government.—The Governor is assisted by an Executive Council (not exceeding 10 members), a Legislative Council (not exceeding 24 members), and an elected House of Assembly consisting of 40 representatives. Members of the Legislative Council receive 250 dollars per session; members of the Legislative Assembly receive 1,000 dollars per session. For electoral purposes the whole colony is divided into 37 districts or constituencies. Women were enfranchised by an Act of the Legislature passed in 1925.

After the general election of June 1924, the Government supporters in the House of Assembly numbered 25, the opposition 10, independent, 1.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Sir William L. Allardyce, K.C.M.G., appointed September, 1922; salary 15,000 dollars, with travelling allowance of 2,500 dollars.

The Ministry (February, 1927) is as follows:—

Prime Minister and Minister of Education.—Hon. W. S. Monroe.

Minister of Justice.—Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C.

Colonial Secretary.—Hon. Sir J. R. Bennett, K.B.E.

Minister of Finance and Customs.—Hon. Sir J. C. Crosby, K.B.E.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Hon. W. J. Woodford.

Ministers without Portfolios.—Hon. A. B. Morine, K.C., Hon. M. S. Sullivan, Hon. Richard Cramm, Hon. Robert Duff, Hon. Jos. J. Long.

Not in the Cabinet :

Minister of Marine and Fisheries.—Wm. C. Winsor, Esq.

Minister of Public Works.—W. McK. Chambers, Esq.

Minister of Agriculture and Mines.—W. J. Walsh, Esq.

The ministers with departments receive salaries of 4,000 dollars each.

High Commissioner in London.—Capt. Victor Gordon, C.M.G., 58 Victoria Street, S.W. 1.

Area and Population.—Area, 42,734 square miles. Population in 1926, 262,177 (132,580 males and 129,597 females). Dependent on Newfoundland is Labrador, the most easterly part of the American continent. The boundary between the said Dependency and the Province of Quebec, which had, for many years, been in dispute, was defined by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in March 1927, as being, in effect, the watershed of the rivers flowing into the Atlantic Ocean, the coastal boundaries being from Blanc Sablon, on the South, to Cape Chidley, on the North. As a result of this decision an estimated area of some 110,000 sq. miles, formerly in dispute, was confirmed as under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland. The population of Labrador in 1926 was 3,977. Of the total Newfoundland population in 1921, 65,448 were engaged in the fisheries, 3,227 were farmers, 4,862 mechanics, and 1,117 miners. Capital, St. John's, 40,059 inhabitants (1926); other towns (1921), Harbour Grace, 3,825; Bonavista, 4,052; Carbonear, 3,320; Twillingate, 3,217, and Grand Falls, 3,769. The birth rate in 1926 was 27.44, and the death rate (1926), 13.60 per 1,000. Immigrants (1926), 12,505; emigrants (1926), 15,323.

Religion and Instruction.—Of the total population in 1921, 84,665 belonged to the Church of England, 86,576 were Roman Catholics, 74,205 Methodists, 1,876 Presbyterians, 13,023 Salvation Army, 2,688 other denominations. The number of schools of all kinds (1926) was 1,139: Church of England, 386; Roman Catholic, 326; Methodist, 337; and other denominations, 79. The attendance in 1926 was: Church of England, 18,550; Roman Catholic, 19,709; Methodist, 17,135, and others, 3,694; total, 59,088: total expenditure, including Government grants, fees, &c., 977,590 dollars.

Revenue and Expenditure in three years ended June 30 (1 dollar = 4s. 1½d.).—

	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26
	Dollars.	Dollars.	Dollars.
Revenue . . . . .	8,401,669	9,783,188	9,752,521
Expenditure. . . . .	10,022,147	9,436,185	9,865,167

Of the Revenue for 1925-26, 7,790,533 dollars were from Customs. Public debt (June 30, 1926), 67,018,405 dollars

Production, &c.—The chief agricultural products in 1921 were: hay (2,198,051 dollars), potatoes (1,912,681 dollars), cabbage (448,021 dollars), turnips (208,700 dollars), and oats (9,804 dollars); the total value of all crops harvested being 4,824,090 dollars. In 1921 (census figures) there were in Newfoundland 16,840 horses, 27,721 cattle, 86,732 sheep, and 14,573 swine. Some fine pine forests exist to the north, and large saw mills have been established. The mineral resources of Newfoundland are considerable. Large beds of iron ore have been found on Bell Island in Conception Bay, on the east coast, and other rich deposits have been discovered on the west coast. The total deposits are estimated at about 3,600 million tons. Copper ore and pyrites are worked. Coal is found near St. George's Bay on the west coast, and in the Grand Lake district. In the eastern part of the island gold-bearing quartz rock and extensive deposits of silver and lead ore have been found. Extensive paper and pulp mills have been erected at Grand Falls, Bishop's Falls, Corner Brook, Lomond in Bonne Bay, and Alexander Bay.

Molasses . . .	236,372	Lobsters (tinned) . .	289,383

Of the imports (1925-26) the value of 5,785,093 dollars came from the United Kingdom; 11,826,406 from Canada; 8,861,819 from the United States. Of the exports the value of 6,460,197 dollars went to the United Kingdom; 1,987,541 to Canada; 4,865,640 to United States; 2,532,773 to Portugal; 3,408,254 to Spain; 1,221,113 to Italy; 2,319,111 to Brazil.

Shipping.—Total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in 1925-26, 2,092,312 tons, of which 1,324,527 tons were British. Vessels registered December 31, 1926, 2,973 sailing vessels of 126,681 tons, 85 steam vessels of 30,507 tons, and 82 motor vessels of 3,529 tons; total, 3,104 vessels of 160,717 tons.

Fishing is the principal occupation of the population. The principal fish are cod, salmon, halibut, lobster, caplin, and seal: the value of the fishing products is about four millions sterling annually.

By the Anglo-French Convention of 1904, France renounced her exclusive fishing rights under the treaty of Utrecht, but retained the right to fish in territorial waters from St. John's Cape northwards to Cape Ray for all sorts of fish, including bait and crustacea. An award of The Hague court in 1910 secured the right of Great Britain to make fishing regulations without the consent of the United States, subject to any limitations imposed by treaty. It also confirmed Great Britain's contention that the whole extent of a bay from headland to headland is comprised within territorial waters.

There were engaged in the Bank cod fishery during 1926, 874 men, and 47 Newfoundland sailing vessels, aggregating 3,779 net tons. The catch in 1926 totalled 109,847 quintals of dry fish, valued at 933,699 dollars. The output of the cod-fishery is estimated at 1,546,664 quintals of dry fish, valued at 10,826,648 dollars. There were about 12,892 small sailing vessels, boats (including motor boats), &c., utilised, and 23,000 men employed in this fishery. In 1926, the exports of codfish, including the Labrador fishery, amounted to 1,366,461 quintals. Colonial Secretary.—Edward Baynes, O.B.E. (900*l.*).

The group, which lies to the north of the Windward group, and south-east of Porto Rico, is divided into 5 Presidencies, viz., Antigua (with Barbuda and Redonda); St. Christopher or St. Kitts (with Nevis and Anguilla), Dominica, Montserrat, and the Virgin Islands (with Sombbrero). There are for the whole Federation an Executive Council nominated by the Crown, and a Legislative Council, 10 official and 10 unofficial members. Of the latter, 3 are elected by the unofficial members of the local Legislative Council of Antigua, 2 by those of Dominica, 3 by those of St. Kitts, 1 by those of Montserrat, and 1, appointed by the Governor, for the Virgin Islands. The Federal Legislative Council meets, as a rule, once a year. The duration of the Council is three years. There are also separate Executive and Legislative Councils for the four larger Presidencies, and an Executive Council for the Virgin Islands.

The following table shows the area and population of the Leeward Islands:—

—	Area: Square miles	Population 1921	Population according to Census taken on 2nd April, 1911

TRINIDAD.

Trinidad, which lies immediately north of the mouth of the Orinoco, and includes Tobago administratively, was discovered by Columbus in 1498 and colonised by the Spaniards in the 16th century. About the period of the Revolution a large number of French families settled in the island, where the French element is still preponderant. In 1797, Great Britain being at war with Spain, Trinidad was occupied by the British, and annexed in 1802.

Governor.—Sir Horace Archer Byatt, K.C.M.G. (5,500*l.*, and allowances 375*l.*). There is an Executive Council consisting of the Governor, as President, the Colonial Secretary, Attorney-General, and Treasurer and such other persons, not being ex-officio members, as may from time to time be appointed; there is also a Legislative Council with the Governor as President, twelve official and thirteen unofficial members. Of the unofficial members six are nominated and seven are elected. Women over thirty years of age have the franchise.

Colonial Secretary.—Hon. W. E. Jackson C.M.G.

Area: Trinidad, 1,862 square miles; Tobago 114. Population: census 1921, 365,913 (186,802 males and 179,111 females). Estimated population, end of 1926, 387,470. Capital, Trinidad, Port of Spain, 65,016. The white population is chiefly composed of English, French, Spanish and Portuguese. The large majority of the inhabitants are natives of the West Indies, of African descent, the balance being made up of East Indians, estimated at 126,175, and a small number of Chinese. English is spoken generally throughout the Colony. Births, 1926, 12,349; deaths, 8,496; marriages, 1,651.

Education.—At the close of 1926 there were 289 Elementary and Intermediate schools in the Colony, 47 being Government and 242 Assisted Schools. There were 253 schools in Trinidad and 36 in Tobago. Of the 242 Assisted Schools 95 were Roman Catholic, 55 Church of England, 68 Canadian Presbyterian Mission, 12 Wesleyan, 11 Moravian and 1 Baptist. There were 2 Government and 3 Assisted Intermediate Schools. The following Colleges afford facilities for the higher education of boys: the Queen's Royal College and its affiliated institutions, the St. Mary's College in Port-of-Spain, and the Naparima College in San Fernando. The St. Joseph's Convent and the Bishop's High School in Port-of-Spain and the Naparima Girls' High School in San Fernando, which are also affiliated to the Queen's Royal College, provide similar education for girls. The number of pupils on the roll at December 31, 1926, was: Queen's Royal College 232, St. Mary's College 416, Naparima College 125, St. Joseph's Convent School 1,412, Bishop's High School 116, and the Naparima Girls' High School 180. The affiliated institutions work under the same curriculum as the Queen's Royal College, and receive a Government grant-in-aid.

Police force, 896 all ranks (December 31, 1926). In 1926 the number of summary convictions was 23,114.

AUSTRALASIA AND OCEANIA.

---

THE British Territories in Australasia comprise the Commonwealth of Australia ; the Australian Dependencies of Papua and Norfolk Island, the Dominion of New Zealand and adjacent islands, and the Crown Colony of Fiji. The British possessions in Oceania include the Solomon and Tonga Islands, and many other groups of islands and islets scattered over the Pacific. There are also the mandatory territories of New Guinea, Western Samoa, and Nauru.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

The Commonwealth of Australia, consisting of the six colonies (now denominated Original States) of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, was proclaimed at Sydney on January 1, 1901.

On September 1, 1906, the administration of Papua was transferred to the Commonwealth (see Papua).

Legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the King, represented by a Governor-General, a Senate, and a House of Representatives. There must be a session of Parliament at least once every year. The Senate consists of 36 Senators (at least six for each of the Original States voting as one electorate) chosen for six years. In general, the Senate is renewed to the extent of one-half every three years, but in case of prolonged disagreement with the House of Representatives, it may be dissolved, and an entirely new Senate elected. The House of Representatives consists, as nearly as may be, of twice as many members as there are Senators, the numbers chosen in the several States being in proportion to population (excluding aborigines) as shown by the latest statistics, but not less than five for any original State. Number in 1926, 76. The Northern Territory by virtue of an Act passed in 1922 elects a member who is not entitled to vote, but may take part in any debate in the House. The House of Representatives continues for three years from the date of its first meeting, unless sooner dissolved. Every Senator or Member of the House of Representatives must be a natural-born subject of the King, or have been for five years a naturalised subject under a law of the United Kingdom or of a State of the Commonwealth. He or she must be of full age, must possess electoral qualification, and have resided for three years within the Commonwealth. The franchise for both Chambers is the same and is based on universal adult (male and female) suffrage.

The legislative powers of the Federal Parliament embrace commerce, shipping, &c.; finance, banking, currency, &c.; defence; external affairs; postal, telegraph, and like services; census and statistics; weights and measures; copyright; railways; conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes extending beyond the limits of any one State; and other matters. The Senate may not originate or amend money bills; and disagreement with the House of Representatives may result in dissolution, or, in the last resort, a joint sitting of the two Houses. No religion may be established. The Federal Parliament is a government of limited and enumerated powers, the several State Parliaments retaining the residuary power of government over their respective territories. If a State law is inconsistent with a Commonwealth law, the latter prevails.

The Executive power, vested in the King, is exercised by the Governor-General, assisted by an Executive Council of twelve responsible Ministers of State. These Ministers are, or must become within three months, members of the Federal Parliament; they are paid salaries and allowances not exceeding, in all, 25,300*l.* a year. The Executive Government of the Commonwealth (formed February 9, 1923) is constituted as follows:—

Governor-General.—His Excellency the Rt. Hon John Lawrence Baron Stonehaven, P.C., G.C.M.G., D.S.O., Commander-in-Chief of the Commonwealth of Australia and its Dependencies (salary, £10,000). Oct., 1925.

Prime Minister, Minister for External Affairs, and Minister for Health—Right Hon. S. M. Bruce, P.C., C.H., M.C.

Treasurer.—Hon. Dr. E. C. G. Page.

Minister for Home and Territories.—Hon. C. W. C. Marr, D.S.O., M.C., V.D.

Attorney-General.—Hon. J. G. Latham, C.M.G., K.C.

Postmaster-General—Hon. W. G. Gibson.

Minister for Trade and Customs.—Hon. H. E. Pratt.

Minister for Works and Railways.—Hon. W. C. Hill.

Minister for Defence.—Senator the Hon. Sir T. W. Glasgow, K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D.

Minister for Repatriation.—Hon. Sir N. R. Howse, V.C., K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

Vice-President of the Executive Council.—Senator the Rt. Hon. Sir G. F. Pearce, P.C., K.C.V.O.

Minister for Markets and Migration.—Hon. T. Paterson.

Honorary Ministers.—Senator the Hon. T. W. Crawford; Senator the Hon. A. J. McLachlan.

High Commissioner for Commonwealth in London.—Major-General Hon. Sir G. de L. Ryrie, K.C.M.G., C.B., V.D. (Appointed March 22, 1927.)

Official Secretary for the Commonwealth in London.—T. Trumble, C.M.G., C.B.E., Australia House, Strand.

Commonwealth Trade Representative in France.—C. H. Voss, 6 Rue Halévy, Paris.

Official Secretary for the Commonwealth in America.—D. McK. Dow, "Cunard Building," 25 Broadway, New York City.

The Constitution provides for a Federal Judicature and an Inter-State Commission on Trade and Commerce, and for the admission or creation of new States. The Inter-State Commission was brought into existence in 1913 and the Commissioners were appointed for a term of seven years. At the expiration of this period no fresh appointments were made. In 1911 the Commonwealth acquired from the State of New South Wales the Yass-Canberra site for the Federal Capital, with an area of 912 square miles. Building operations were begun in 1923 and Parliament was opened at Canberra on 9th May, 1927, by H.R.H. the Duke of York. A further area of 28 square miles at Jervis Bay was acquired in 1917 for purposes of a Naval College, with the right to construct a railway from the Capital thereto.

Proposed laws for the alteration of the Constitution must be submitted to the electors, and they can be enacted only if approved by a majority of the States and also a majority of all the electors voting.

Finance.

Actual revenue and expenditure for 1923-24 to 1926-27 are given in the following table. Under the 'Surplus Revenue Act, 1910,' the amount payable by the Commonwealth to each State is a sum equivalent to 25 shillings per head of the population as estimated by the Commonwealth Statistician at 31st December in each year. Tasmania received, in addition, a total sum of 900,000*l.* in ten annual instalments, starting from 1912-13. This was exhausted in 1921-22, and a special grant of 85,000*l.* was made, a similar sum being appropriated for each year to date. Commencing with 1925-26 this grant will be diminished by 17,000*l.* per annum until it is extinguished. A special payment of 212,793*l.* was made to Western Australia in 1926-27, and 378,000*l.* to Tasmania.

In 1927 the States Grants Act abolished the per capita payments as from 30th June, 1927. Subject to ratification by Commonwealth and State Parliaments, the Commonwealth will take over all State Debts existing on 30th June, 1927, and will pay 7,584,912*l.* a year for 58 years towards the interest charges thereon, and will make substantial contributions towards a sinking fund to extinguish existing debts in 58 years and future debts in 53 years. The Commonwealth Government will arrange all future borrowing for both Commonwealth and States through a Loan council consisting of representatives of Commonwealth and State Governments.

The aggregate public debt of the several Australian States on June 30, 1926, was 642,844,761*l.*

The Commonwealth public debt on Dec. 31st, 1927, was 479,658,000*l.*, including 300,985,917*l.* owing in respect of war loans.

Pensions and Maternity Allowances.

The Invalid and Old Age Pension Acts provide for the payment of invalid and old age pensions at such rates as the Commissioner deciding the question deems sufficient, but so that the amount shall not exceed 52*l.* a year, nor the pensioner's whole income (including the pension) exceed 84*l.* a year. Old age pensions are granted upon application to persons who are at least 65 years of age and have lived in Australia or Australian territory at least 20 years. Invalid pensions are granted to persons who have lived at least 5 years in Australia, have there become incapacitated, and have no other sufficient means of support. On October 9, 1912, a Maternity Act was passed providing for the payment of an allowance of 5*l.* in respect of every viable child born (alive or dead) in Australia. The mother must be a native of the Commonwealth or intend to settle permanently therein. No payment is made in the case of an aboriginal or an Asiatic. The disbursements for old age and invalid pensions and maternity allowances are shown under Finance above. The numbers of pensioners in the Commonwealth on June 30, 1926, were:—Old age, 126,918; invalid, 48,803; total, 175,721. War pensioners at June 30, 1926, numbered 252,609. To June 30, 1926, the total number of claims for the maternity allowance was 1,820,584.

Justice.

The judicial power of the Commonwealth is vested in a Federal Supreme Court (the High Court of Australia), consisting of a Chief Justice and six Justices, appointed by the Governor-General in Council. The High Court has original jurisdiction in all matters arising under treaties, between States of the Commonwealth, or affecting representatives of other countries, as well as in other matters as empowered by the Parliament. It may also hear and determine appeals from judgments of its own Justices exercising original jurisdiction, and from judgments of any other Federal Court, or of the Supreme Court of any State, subject to certain rights of final appeal to the King in Council. The Commonwealth Court of Conciliation and Arbitration consists of a Chief Judge and three other Judges.

Defence.

ARMY.

The principle of the defence policy of Australia is the universal compulsory training of a Citizen Army. Permanent troops are maintained only in such numbers as are necessary to administer and instruct the Citizen Forces. The organisation is territorial and the divisions are based upon infantry units. There are 60 battalions, forming 15 brigades. The areas have approximately equal numbers of males of citizen-soldier age, and each furnishes a battalion of infantry and a proportion of other troops. The Divisional Commander has complete responsibility for the preparation for war of the forces under his command. A district is allotted to him and a personnel provided as the fixed machinery of the unit. The administrative organisation consists of a central administration and 6 districts, corresponding to the 6 States. The Military Board, under the presidency of the Minister of Defence, has responsibility for control and administration. The Council of Defence, under the presidency of the Prime Minister, deals with policy and insures its continuity, and co-ordinates the requirements of the sea, air, and land. The trainee who served in the Australian Imperial Force during the Great War is exempted from further training, but members of that Force may join the new forces, in their old units, becoming a reserve upon which the scheme is built. Facilities are given to these men to fill positions in the commissioned and non-commissioned ranks. Under this scheme 48,000 men were enrolled.

As a result of the International Conference held at Washington in 1921 Citizen Force training is restricted to youths of 18, 19, and 20, and Senior Cadet training to boys of 17 only.

An arsenal has been established, which will be more in the form of a munition supply branch aiming at insuring the supply of war needs through Australian trade rather than that Government-owned factories shall be designed on a scale necessary for the purpose. Properly situated mobilisation stores are being provided.

Military education is provided at the Royal Military College, Duntroon, from which cadets may obtain permanent commissions.

Rifle clubs receive a subsidy and a free grant of ammunition.

The military forces of Australia on August 1, 1926, were :—

District and State	Perma- nent	Citizen Soldiers	Reserve of Officers and Unattached List.	Others	Total
Central Administration . . . .	148	10	—	6	164
1st Queensland . . . . .	144	4,764	1,041	58	6,007

6th Tasmania . . . . .	68	1,270	293	20	1,651
Total . . . . .	1,750	42,884	8,785	362	53,781

In 1927 the strength of the permanent force was 250 officers and 1,332 other ranks ; and of the citizen forces, 3,728 officers and 49,272 other ranks.

NAVY.

Sydney is a first-class naval station, and the headquarters of the British fleet in Australasia. Since 1913 the Commonwealth has accepted the obligation of fleet-building, with maintenance of its own vessels.

The 1926-27 naval estimates provided for a total expenditure of 2,097,780*l.* (exclusive of 352,345*l.* to be disbursed under the Special Defence Act) Under these estimates the naval forces of Australia were shown as follows :—Permanent naval forces (sea-going) 5,279, including cadets and boys under training; Royal Australian Naval Reserve, 5,848; Royal Australian Naval Volunteer Reserve, 55; Royal Australian Fleet Reserve, 88; total, 11,270.

The policy of the Commonwealth is to make Australia self-defending. Having accepted the position that a fuller Imperial partnership is necessary for the future security of the Empire, and that a definite place in the Pacific has been allotted to Australia the Government agreed in 1911 to furnish an Australian Fleet Unit, called the 'Royal Australian Navy.' The ships and vessels of the Royal Australian Navy named in the British lists are the cruisers Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, and Brisbane. In addition are the following :—The flotilla leader Anzac (1917), 1,660 tons, 34 knots, 4 4-in. guns; 'river class' destroyers, Huon, Parramatta, Swan, Torrens, Warrego, and Yarra (1910-15), 700 tons, 27 knots; 'S' class, Stalwart, Success, Swordsmen, Tasmania, Tattoo, (1918-19), 1,075 tons, 36 knots. The Australian Navy also includes three sloops (1,250 tons), the depot ship Platypus, the surveying vessel Moresby, and some auxiliaries. Under the Defence Equipment Act, 1924, 2 cruisers of 10,000 tons (Australia and Canberra), and 2 ocean-going submarines (Otway and Oxley), were ordered in the United Kingdom, and an air-craft carrier (Albatross), of 6,000 tons, to carry 9 seaplanes, is under construction at Sydney.

AIR FORCES.

There is a Royal Australian Air Force, administered by the Air Board, consisting of two Air Force Members and a finance member. To this force is entrusted the air defence of Australia, the training of personnel for co-operation with the naval and military forces, and the refresher training of pilots engaging in Civil Aviation. The present establishment of the force includes the following units :—(a) Headquarters, Royal Australian Air Force, with representation at the Air Ministry in London; (b) a Flying Training School, (c) a stores depôt, (d) one station containing two composite squadrons and one flight, and (e) an experimental Section. The Minister is represented by a representative Air Council, which includes officers of the Navy, Army, and Air Force, and the Controller of Civil Aviation. The permanent establishment of the Air Force as at the 1st January, 1927, was 95 officers and 765 airmen. The sum of 595,027*l.* was provided on the 1926-27 Estimates for the Air Force and Civil Aviation.

Production.

Up to the year 1924, 800,604,955 acres, representing 42·06 per cent. of the total area of Australia, were either unoccupied or occupied by the Crown; only 5·95 per cent. had been actually alienated (113,229,446 acres); 3·15 per cent. (60,050,373 acres) was in process of alienation; and 48·84 per cent. (929,847,466 acres) was held under the various forms of leases and licences.

The area under crops (distinguishing the principal crops) in Australia and the yield in 1925-26 were as follows:—

The value of goods imported represents the amount on which duty is payable or would be payable if the duty were ad valorem. The value of goods exported is the value in the principal markets of the Commonwealth in the usual and ordinary commercial acceptance of the term.

The Customs Tariff Act of 1921-26 provides for preference to goods produced in and shipped from the United Kingdom to Australia, and for reciprocal tariff agreements with other countries. A reciprocal customs tariff which had been in operation between Australia and the Union of South Africa since 1906, was repealed by Customs Tariff 1926. The repeal came into force on 1st July, 1926. On September 1, 1922, a reciprocal tariff agreement came into operation between Australia and New Zealand, and in 1924 an agreement was made with Canada, and is now in operation.

The Customs Tariff (Papua and New Guinea Preference) 1926 came into force on April 1st, 1926, and provides that imports of certain goods specified in the schedule to the Act, and being the produce of the Territory from which they were imported, shall be free of duty.

Private railways in Australia, open for general traffic, 1926, 972 miles; not open for general traffic, 2,088 miles.

A trans-continental railway from north to south, over 1,000 miles in length, is under consideration.

In Victoria a scheme for the electrification of the railways in the Metropolitan area has been carried out. Electric railways are also under construction in Sydney.

The State railway gauge is: In New South Wales, 4ft. 8½ in. (40 miles, 3ft. 6 in.); in Victoria, 5ft. 3 in. (122 miles, 2ft. 6 in.); in Queensland, 3ft. 6 in. (30 miles, 2ft. 0 in.); in South Australia, 5ft. 3 in. for 1,238 miles, the rest, 3ft. 6in.; in W. Australia, 3ft. 6in.; and in Tasmania, 3ft. 6in. (25 miles, 2ft. 0in.). Of the Federal lines, the gauge of the Trans-Australian and Federal Territory is 4ft. 8½in.; and that of the Oodnadatta and Northern Territory is 3ft. 6in. A commission has recommended a uniform 4ft. 8½in. gauge, and this has been accepted in principle.

The following are the particulars of the operations of the electric tramways of the several States of the Commonwealth for the year 1925-6 or 1926<sup>1</sup>:—

Expenses: Post Office, 4,637,126%; telegraphs and radio, 1,704,705%; telephones, 3,487,234%; total, 9,829,065%.

At June 30, 1926, 4,643 telephone exchanges with 309,206 lines and 403,616 instruments connected were in operation.

During the year 1925-26 5,838 flights, of a total duration of 6,427 hours, were carried out by civil aircraft, 487,603 miles were covered and 7,004 passengers were carried.

Aerial mail services are in operation in Queensland; Western Australia; between Adelaide (South Australia) and Cootamundra (N.S. Wales) connecting with Sydney by rail, via Hay in New South Wales; between Melbourne (Vic.) and Hay (N.S.W.); and between Mildura (Vic.) and Broken Hill (N.S.W.). The contractors are being subsidised by the Commonwealth Government. 21,689 letters were carried by the Queensland, 240,609 by the Western Australian and 10,409 by the other services during the year.

At June 30, 1926, 390,300 motor vehicles, 70,209 of which were motor-cycles, were registered in Australia. The Revenue derived from Registration fees and Motor Tax was 2,235,751% for the year. At June 30, 1927, 496,000 (approx.) motor vehicles were registered. This figure represents 80 vehicles to each 1,000 of population.

Wireless telegraphy stations are in operation in all the State Capitals, and in certain other places. 125,387 wireless Broadcast Listeners' licences had been issued at June 30, 1926, and 214,136 at June 30, 1927. At this latter date 20 broadcasting stations were licensed. Two beam stations are being erected, one for direct communication with London, and the other for direct communication with Montreal.

Money and Credit.

On January 20, 1913, the Commonwealth Bank was opened at Sydney. Deposits and interest (general and savings bank) at December 31, 1926, were 74,138,459*l*. The bank started without capital, and began to make profits in 1913-14. At June, 1927, the capital was 4,000,000*l*., which was transferred from the reserve and redemption funds. The reserve fund amounted to 1,217,750*l*.

There are, besides, 17 private banks trading in Australia. Their paid-up capital on June 30, 1926, was 60,347,674*l*., and the amount of reserved profits, 42,344,006*l*.

The total liabilities of cheque-paying Banks trading in the Commonwealth, in the quarter ended March 31, 1927, were 355,640,400*l*., and the deposits, including Savings Bank deposits in the Commonwealth Bank amounting to 45,011,912*l*., were 340,685,432*l*.

The total number of accounts open in the Savings Banks in the Commonwealth on March 31, 1927, was 4,409,627, and the amount on deposit, 196,071,554*l*.

There are 2 mints in the Commonwealth, at Melbourne (opened 1872), and Perth (1899). Besides issuing gold coin (sovereigns and half-sovereigns) they also issue gold bullion, partly for the use of local manufacturers (jewellers and dentists), and partly for export. Since 1916 silver and bronze coins have been minted at the Sydney and Melbourne Mints on behalf of the Commonwealth Treasury. The Sydney Mint was closed at the end of 1926.

The gold issues during 1926 are shown in the following table :—

Mint	Coin			Bullion	Total
	Sovereigns	Half-Sovereigns	Total
	£	£	£	£	£
Sydney . . .	1,081,050	—	1,081,050	358,287	1,380,287
Melbourne . . .	211,107	—	211,107	149,100	360,207
Perth . . .	1,313,578	—	1,313,578	551,644	1,865,222
Total . . .	2,555,735	—	2,555,735	1,058,981	3,614,716

Silver coinage to the value of 716,750*l*., and bronze to the value of 7,885*l*., were issued during the year ended June 30, 1926.

On June 27, 1927, notes issued by the Commonwealth and unredeemed amounted to 48,393,226*l*. The amount of gold held in reserve on that date was 22,065,071*l*., representing 45·6 per cent. of the liability. Bank notes ceased to circulate after 1911.

NORFOLK ISLAND. 29° S. latitude, 168° E. longitude, area 18 square miles, population (Dec. 31, 1925) 747 (367 males and 380 females). The island was formerly part of the Colony of New South Wales and then of Van Diemen's Land. It has been a distinct settlement since 1856, and under an Order-in-Council of 1900 was governed by the Governor of New South Wales; but from July 1, 1914, the affairs of the island have been administered by the Commonwealth Government. In 1925-26 the imports (mostly from the Commonwealth) were valued at 16,882*l*., and the exports, 6,156*l*.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Constitution and Government.

New South Wales became a British Possession in 1788; a partially elective Legislative Council was established in 1843, and responsible government in 1856. New South Wales federated with the other Australian States to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901. The legislative power of the State is vested in a Parliament of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council consists of not less than twenty-one members (96 in September, 1927), appointed by the Crown for life. Members travel free on the State railways and tramways. The President receives an annual salary of 1,200*l.*, and the Chairman of Committees, 700*l.* The Legislative Assembly has 90 members, each elected under a system of preferential voting to represent one electoral district, this method of election having replaced a system of proportional representation introduced in 1918. Postal voting is permissible. Every man or woman, being a natural born or naturalised British subject above 21 years of age, having resided six months in the Commonwealth, three months in the State, and one month in the electorate, is qualified as an elector. Members of the Legislative Assembly are paid (since 1925) 875*l.* per annum, and they are allowed to travel free on Government railways and tramways in the State. The leader of the Opposition receives an additional allowance of 250*l.* per annum. The duration of a Parliament is not more than three years. The Women's Legal Status Act, 1918, gives women the same political rights as men. The executive is in the hands of a Governor, appointed by the Imperial Government.

Governor.—His Excellency Admiral Sir Dudley Rawson Stratford De Chair, K.C.B., M.V.O. (from February 28, 1924).

Lieut.-Governor.—The Honourable Sir William Portus Cullen, K.C.M.G., LL.D.

In the exercise of the executive the Governor is advised by a Cabinet consisting of the following members (October, 1927):—

Premier and Colonial Treasurer.—The Hon. T. R. Bavin, K.C., M.L.A.

Colonial Secretary.—The Hon. A. Bruntnell, M.L.A.

Secretary for Mines and Minister for Forests.—The Hon. F. A. Chaffey, M.L.A.

Attorney-General.—The Hon. F. S. Boyce, K.C., M.L.C.

Minister of Public Instruction.—The Hon. D. H. Drummond, M.L.A.

Secretary for Public Works and Minister for Railways.—The Hon. E. A. Buttenshaw, M.L.A.

Secretary for Lands.—The Hon. R. T. Ball, M.L.A.

Minister for Agriculture.—The Hon. H. V. C. Thorby, M.L.A.

Minister for Local Government.—The Hon. Colonel M. F. Bruzner, M.L.A.

Minister for Public Health.—The Hon. Dr. R. Arthur, M.L.A.

Minister for Justice.—The Hon. J. R. Lee, M.L.A.

Minister for Labour and Industry.—The Hon. E. H. Farrar, M.L.C.

Assistant Treasurer.—The Hon. B. S. Stevens, M.L.A.

Honorary Minister.—The Hon. J. Ryan, M.L.A.

Agent-General in London.—Right Hon. Sir George Warburton Fuller, K.C.M.G. (appointed 1928); Australia House, Strand, London, W.C. 2.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

A system of Local Government extends over the whole of the State, except the Western Land Division, where, however, seven municipalities are incorporated. There are 180 boroughs and municipal districts under the title of municipalities, and in addition 136 corporate bodies called shires. The central Government of the State affords financial assistance to the municipalities and shires in the form of endowment or of grants for special purposes, e.g. road-making. A sum of at least 150,000*l.* per annum is distributed amongst the shires as endowment.

General rates are charged on the unimproved value of the land, and not on the annual rental. Special local and loan rates may be imposed on the improved or unimproved value at the option of the Council. Hospitals, benevolent institutions, public libraries, parks, churches, and (outside the city of Sydney) unoccupied Crown lands are exempt from taxation.

Area and Population.

The area of New South Wales, inclusive of Lord Howe Island and the Federal Capital Territory (912 sq. miles at Canberra and 28 at Jervis Bay), is 310,372 square miles.

The population (including aborigines) at six consecutive censuses was:—

Year	Males	Females	Total	Pop. per square mile	Average increase per cent. per annum.
1871	275,551	228,430	503,981	1·62	3·7
1881	411,149	340,319	751,468	2·42	4·1
1891	612,562	519,672	1,132,234	3·65	4·2
1901	712,456	646,677	1,359,133	4·38	1·8

The population at March 31, 1927, was: males, 1,203,742; females, 1,158,208; total, 2,361,950.

The population according to race (exclusive of full-blood aborigines) at the census of 1921, shows European as 1,058,196 males, 1,024,105 females. Non-European (full-blood), 9,728 males, 1,353 females; half-caste 3,577 males, 3,412 females. Grand total: 1,071,501 males, 1,028,870 females.

There were, in 1921, 2,082,272 persons (98 per cent. of the population) of British nationality; 6,058 Chinese; 1,629 United States of America; 1,271 Greek; 1,159 French; 1,117 Italian; 989 German; 776 Russian; 536 Swedish, and 4,614 other nationalities.

For occupational census returns in 1921, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1925, p. 359.

At the end of 1926 the population of Sydney, including suburbs and shipping, was 1,070,510. The chief country municipalities, with their populations, were as follow:—Newcastle and suburbs, 99,850; Broken Hill, 24,010; Auburn, 17,710; Bankstown, 17,270; Granville, 16,800; Parramatta, 16,400; Lithgow, 16,380; Cessnock, 13,840; Lidcombe, 13,540; Maitland, E. & W., 12,960; Holroyd, 12,340; Goulburn, 11,940; Katoomba, 10,020; Bathurst, 9,880; Lismore, 9,280; Wagga Wagga, 8,410; Albury, 8,210; Orange, 7,960; Wollongong, 7,580; Kurri Kurri, 7,350; Fairfield, 6,970; Tamworth, 6,960; Grafton and South Grafton, 6,350; Liverpool, 5,910; Armidale, 5,780; Dubbo, 5,130; Dundas, 4,890; Forbes, 4,680; Glen Innes, 4,520; Inverell, 4,510; Cowra, 4,310; Parkes, 4,260; Windsor, 4,180.

The following table shows the births, deaths, and marriages for five years:

Year	Marriages	Total Births	Illegitimate Births	Total Deaths	Excess of Births
1922	17,583	55,214	2,700	19,178	36,036

Instruction.

The State maintains a system of national education, and instruction is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14 years. In all State schools education is free. There are a number of private schools subject to State inspection.

There were at the end of 1926, 3,179 Government schools, classified as follows :—High schools 30 ; public primary schools 1,952 ; provisional schools 570 ; half-time schools 70 ; travelling schools 1 ; evening continuation schools 54 ; correspondence schools 1 ; subsidised schools 498 ; industrial and reformatory schools 3 ; total 3,179 schools. During 1926 there were 343,187 children enrolled, and an average attendance in December quarter of the year of 271,690, with 11,313 teachers. The pupils receiving Kindergarten instruction at Government schools numbered 11,639. In 1926 the expenditure on Public Instruction (exclusive of technical education) was 4,198,452*l*.

At the end of 1926 there were 702 private schools (with 83,743 pupils and 4,813 teachers), of which 482 were Roman Catholic Denominational Schools, having 2,795 teachers and 67,537 scholars. The Church of England Denominational Schools numbered 59 with 574 teachers and 5,776 scholars ; other denominational schools 21, teachers 223, pupils 2,546.

The University of Sydney, founded in 1850, has 2,392 individual students (including 665 women) with 203 professors, lecturers and demonstrators. There are 4 denominational colleges, Church of England, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, and Methodist, and a college for women (unsectarian), affiliated to the University. The Technical College, with branch schools, had a total enrolment of 26,796 in 1925.

Pension, Widows and Family Allowances.

For particulars of other pensions see under Australia. The numbers current in New South Wales on June 30, 1926, were : old age, 49,388 (Males, 20,969 ; Females, 28,419) ; invalidity and accident, 20,193 (Males, 8,896 ; Females, 11,297).

The Widows Pensions Act of New South Wales, 1925, provides for pensions to widows with dependent children. The maximum pension is 1*l*. per week with 10*s*. for each child under 14 years. The amount of each pension is ascertained by deducting from the maximum annual amount 1*l*. for each 1*l*. by which the widow's net income exceeds 78*l*. Pensions became payable on March 10, 1926. On July 1, 1927, pensions were being paid to 5,449 widows with 11,654 children, the amount paid during the year was 553,634*l*.

The Family Endowment Act, 1927, provides for the payment of endowment in respect of children under 14 years of age in cases where the 'family income' for the twelve months preceding the date of claim is less than the living wage (fixed by the Industrial Commission to cover the maintenance of a man and his wife) plus 13*l*. for each dependent child. The Endowment, at the rate of 5*s*. per week, is payable to the mothers. A residence qualification of two years in New South Wales is prescribed in respect of the mothers and of the children except those under 2 years who were born in the State. Endowment is not restricted to the families of wage and salary earners. The allowances are paid from the Family Endowment Fund, to which employers paying wages exceeding in the aggregate to 150*l*. per annum pay tax at the rate of 3 per cent. of the total wages paid.

Justice and Crime.

In New South Wales legal processes may be grouped within the Lower or Magistrates Courts, or of the Higher Courts presided over by Judges. There is also an appellate jurisdiction. Prisoners charged with capital crimes must be tried before the Supreme Court.

Children's Courts have been established with the object of removing children as far as possible from the atmosphere of a public court. Fair Rents Courts were established in 1916, their function being the determination of the fair rental of small dwellings and retail shops. There are also a number of tribunals exercising special jurisdiction, e.g. the Industrial Commission, the Workers' Compensation Commission.

In 1925 there were 85,970 convictions before magistrates at Courts of Petty Sessions and Children's Courts, and during the eighteen months ended June 30, 1926, there were 1,060 distinct persons convicted at the Higher Courts. On June 30, 1926, there were 1,404 convicted prisoners in gaol.

Finance.

The following are statistics of net revenue<sup>1</sup> for years ended June 30.

Under the heading 'Business Undertakings' is included revenue from railways, tramways, water supply and sewerage, and Sydney Harbour Trust.

Taxation is obtained from stamp and probate duties, land tax, income tax, motor tax, betting taxes, totalizator tax, racecourse admission tax, and licences. A payment of 25*s*. per head per annum has been made to the State by the Commonwealth Government since 1910, but this arrangement for returning to the States portion of the revenue collected by the Commonwealth is under consideration with a view to revision.

The following table shows the net expenditure exclusive of expenditure from loans (cf. note at the head of the last table):—

For Defence, see Commonwealth of Australia. There is a complete naval establishment, the main works being at Garden Island, Sydney. Sydney is the headquarters of the squadron in Australian waters, and has a dockyard, naval coaling station, and victualling and other stores. The cost of defence is borne by the Commonwealth Government.

Production and Industry.

I. LAND SETTLEMENT.

The total area of land alienated or in process of alienation from the Crown on June 30, 1926, was 64,716,232 acres, exclusive of Federal Capital Territory. The total area of land neither alienated nor in process of alienation was 138,320,268 acres.

II. AGRICULTURE.

In 1925-26 there were 4,543,541 acres under crops (including 2,118 acres double cropped).

The area under cultivation in New South Wales during four years and the principal crops produced were as follows :—

The principal fruit-culture of the State is that of the orange. There were in June, 1926, 31,285 acres under citrus fruit, with a production of 2,486,020 bushels; the area under other fruit exclusive of bananas was 41,163 acres. During 1925-26 the production of bananas was 68,167 cases from an area of 1,729 acres.

At June 30, 1926, the State had 53,860,000 sheep, 2,937,130 cattle, 651,035 horses, and 382,674 swine. The production of wool as in the grease was in the year ended June 30, 1926, 402,490,000 lbs. In the same year the production of butter was 106,967,661 lbs.; cheese, 6,462,535 lbs.; bacon and ham, 22,958,371 lbs.

There were 137,300 persons employed permanently in rural holdings during the year ended June 30, 1926.

There is a Forestry Commission. The estimated forest area is 11,000,000 acres. The total area of State forests amounts to 5,230,601 acres, and 1,653,817 acres have been set apart tentatively as timber reserves. The revenue from royalties, licences, &c., amounted in the year ended June 30, 1922, to 217,841*l.*; in 1923 to 168,698*l.*; in 1924 to 186,393*l.*; in 1925 to 209,733*l.*; and in 1926 to 224,207*l.* There were 532 saw-mills, the employees numbering 5,645, and the value of plant and machinery was 1,101,405*l.*, and land and buildings 978,684*l.* The output of native timber amounted to 169,991,161 superficial feet valued at 2,142,549*l.* The estimated value of production from Forestry in 1925-26 was 1,871,000*l.*

III. MINES AND MINERALS.

The aggregate value of all minerals won in N.S.W. to the end of 1926 was 400,550,710*l.* The following table gives details for the year 1926 :—

Mineral	Quantity 1926	Value 1926	Total value to end of 1926

All other minerals . . . . .	—	1,298,864	7,746,706

This table does not include iron made from scrap, valued at 1,416,030*l.*, lime, valued at 1,244,905*l.*, Portland cement, 12,087,730*l.*, and coke, 11,014,479*l.*

The bulk of the ores produced in the silver-lead mines of New South Wales is exported for treatment to other parts of Australia or despatched overseas in the form of concentrates. Therefore the figures in the foregoing statement do not indicate the full value of the products of the mines and the following estimates for the year 1926 have been prepared by the Department of Mines :—

	Metal obtained within Australia from ores mined in N.S.W.	Concentrates exported overseas (contents by average assay).
Silver . . . . . oz. fine	7,333,477	2,371,264

The estimated value of production from the primary and manufacturing industries in 1925-26 was as follows: Pastoral, 42,369,000*l*.; agriculture, 20,741,000*l*.; dairying and farmyard, 14,712,000*l*.; forests, fisheries, and trapping, 5,609,000*l*.; mining, 12,846,000*l*.; total primary, 95,777,000*l*.; manufacturing, 64,828,000*l*.; total, 160,615,000*l*.

Commerce and Communications.

The external commerce of New South Wales, exclusive of Inter-State trade, is included in the Statement of the Commerce of the Commonwealth. The total external commerce of the State is given in the following table :—

Year ended June 30	Imports Oversea	Exports Oversea
		Australian Produce	Other Produce	Total
	£	£	£	£
1923	55,010,083	40,175,208	2,406,714	42,581,922

1927	68,946,777	60,407,279	2,407,797	62,815,076

The chief exports are wool, wool tops, butter, wheat, flour, fruit, sugar, timber, meats (frozen and preserved), hides and skins, tallow, leather, pig-lead, tin, copper, coal, and gold.

On June 30, 1927, 5,750 miles of Government railway were open; the revenue for 1926-27 was 18,906,543*l.*; the expenditure, 13,795,853*l.*; the number of passengers carried, 141,615,806. There are 7 private railways having a total mileage of 112 miles (mainly colliery lines). The Sydney suburban railways are being converted from steam to electricity. With the exception of a steam tramway of 2½ miles in extent under private control, all tramways are the property of the Government. There were, on June 30, 1927, 209½ miles of tramways open for traffic, the capital cost being 11,586,050*l.* The gross earnings for 1926-27 were 3,806,098*l.*; the working expenses, 3,487,834*l.*

The number of registered motor vehicles on June 30, 1927, was 177,210, including 27,202 motor cycles and 28,839 vans and lorries.

There are 104,764 miles of roads in New South Wales, including 23,354 miles metalled. There are 4,916 bridges over 20ft. span with total length of 397,893 feet. The Sydney Harbour Bridge is in course of erection. It will be an arch bridge, the largest in the world, and is expected to be completed in 1930. The total length of the bridge will be 3,770 feet and at high water there will be a headway of 170 feet for vessels passing underneath. The bridge will carry a roadway 57 feet wide, two footways each 10 feet and four lines of railways to connect the city electric railways, now under construction, with the northern suburban line.

Money and Credit.

The value of gold coin and gold bullion issued at the Royal Branch Mint, Sydney, during recent years, was: 1921, 853,094*l.*; 1922, 621,568*l.*; 1923, 472,602*l.*; 1924, 413,901*l.*; 1925, 5,641,347*l.*; 1926 (to November 12, when the Branch was closed), 1,389,287*l.*

The total issues of gold coins since the opening of the mint in 1856 to November 12, 1926, when the Branch was closed was 149,216,550*l.*; and of gold bullion, 7,574,406*l.*, making a total value of 156,790,956*l.* From the year 1910 to November 12, 1926, Australian silver and bronze coins issued were valued at 2,128,250*l.* and 154,414*l.* respectively.

VICTORIA.

Constitution and Government.

Victoria, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was, in 1851, proclaimed a separate colony, with a partially elective Legislative Council, and in 1855 responsible self-government was conferred. The legislative authority is vested in a Parliament of two Chambers. The Upper House consists of 34 members, elected for six years, and the Lower of 65, elected for three years (unless sooner dissolved). Members of the Council must be in possession of an estate of the net annual value of 50*l.* for one year prior to their election; and electors must be in the possession or occupancy of property of the rateable value of 10*l.* per annum if derived from freehold, or of 15*l.* if derived from leasehold or the occupation of rented property. No electoral property qualification is required for graduates of British or Colonial universities, matriculated students of the Melbourne University, ministers of religion of any denomination, certificated teachers, lawyers, medical practitioners, and officers of the army and navy active and retired. One-half of the members of the Legislative Council retire every three years. The members of the Legislative Assembly require no property qualification, and are elected by universal male and (since 1908) female suffrage, and no person may vote in more than one district, nor twice in the same district. Clergymen of any religious denomination are not allowed to hold seats in either the Legislative Council or the Legislative Assembly.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are entitled to reimbursement for expenses at the rate of 500*l.* per annum, and members of the Legislative Council at the rate of 200*l.* per annum. Members of both Houses have free passes over all the railways.

Governor.—Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Arthur H. T. Somers, D.S.O., M.C., K.C.M.G.

Lieutenant Governor.—Hon. Sir William H. Irvine, K.C.M.G.

In the exercise of the executive the Governor is assisted by a Cabinet of responsible ministers.

The Ministry (September, 1927) is as follows:—

Premier, Treasurer, and Minister of Markets.—Hon. E. J. Hogan, M.L.A.

Minister of Railways, Minister-in-Charge of Electrical Undertakings.—Hon. T. Tunnecliffe, M.L.A.

Minister of Public Instruction and Minister of Labour.—Hon. J. Lemmon, M.L.A.

Commissioner of Crown Lands and Survey, and Minister of Water Supply.—Hon. H. S. Barley, M.L.A.

Chief Secretary.—Hon. G. M. Prendergast, M.L.A.

Attorney-General, Solicitor-General, and Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. W. Stater, M.L.A.

Commissioner of Public Works, Minister of Mines and Minister-in-Charge of Immigration.—Hon. P. Jones, M.L.C.

Minister of Forests and Minister of Public Health.—Hon. W. J. Beckett, M.L.C.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Hon. J. H. Disney, M.L.C., Hon. R. Williams, M.L.C., Hon. J. Cain, M.L.A., and G. C. Webber, M.L.A.

The number of salaried ministers is limited to eight, and their total salaries to 10,000*l*. At least four of the Ministers must be members of either the Legislative Council or the Assembly, but not more than two shall be members of the Council, nor more than six be members of the Assembly.

State of the parties in the Legislative Assembly (September, 1927): Nationalists, 19; Liberals, 2; Independent Liberals, 2; Country Party, 10; Country Progressive Party, 4; Labour, 28. Total, 65.

Agent-General for Victoria in Great Britain.—A. H. Wright (acting).
Offices: Melbourne Place, The Strand, W.C. 2.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local administration the State is divided into urban and rural municipalities. The former, called cities, towns, and boroughs, ought not to be of a greater area than nine square miles, and in being constituted must contain at least 500 householders, and rateable property capable of yielding 300*l*. upon a rate of one shilling in the £. The latter, called shires, are portions of country, of undefined extent, containing rateable property capable of yielding a revenue of 1,500*l*. on a rate of one shilling in the £. In 1926 there were 55 urban and 139 rural municipalities, only 650 square miles in the State not being included within their limits.

Area and Population.

The State has an area of 87,884 square miles, or 56,245,760 acres, about  $\frac{1}{4}$  part of the whole area of Australia. The State is divided into 37 counties, varying in area from 920 to 5,933 square miles.

The growth of the population, as shown by census returns, is exhibited in the following table:—

Date of Enumeration	Males	Females	Total	Annual rate of increase per cent.
March 29, 1857 . . .	264,834	146,432	410,766	—
April 7, 1861 . . .	328,651	211,671	540,322	7·88
April 2, 1871 . . .	401,050	330,478	731,528	3·07
April 3, 1881 . . .	452,083	410,263	862,346	1·65
April 5, 1891 . . .	598,414	541,991	1,140,405	2·83
March 31, 1901 . . .	603,883	597,458	1,201,341	0·48
April 2, 1911 . . .	655,694	660,053	1,315,747	0·91
April 4, 1921 . . .	754,724	776,556	1,531,280	1·54

The estimated population at December 31, 1926, was 1,711,827 (852,899 males, 859,428 females); and on June 30, 1927, was 1,726,445.

The average density of the population is 19 persons to the square mile, or one person to every 33 acres.

The population in 1901 included 7,349 Chinese and 652 aborigines; in 1911, 5,601 Chinese and 643 aborigines; and in 1921, 4,179 Chinese and 586 aborigines.

At the date of the census of 1921, the Australian-born numbered 1,330,136, or 87 per cent. of the population; natives of New Zealand, 11,210; of British Isles, 161,117; of Germany, 3,693; of other countries, 20,171; 1,111 were born at sea and the birthplaces of 3,842 were unspecified.

For occupational census, 1921, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1925, p. 369.

Inclusive of the suburbs the estimated population on December 31, 1926, of Melbourne was 944,400, or more than half of that of the State; Ballarat, 41,550; Geelong, 40,880; Bendigo, 33,830; Warrnambool, 8,050; Mor-dialloc, 7,760; Castlemaine, 7,170; Carrum, 6,750; Wonthaggi, 6,800; Mildura, 6,000; Hamilton, 5,260; and Ararat, 5,010.

The following are the births, deaths, and marriages in the State for five years :—

Year	Total Births	Illegitimate	Deaths	Marriages	Surplus of Births
1922	36,288	1,600	15,156	12,996	21,132
1923	35,876	1,714	17,219	13,126	18,657
1924	36,139	1,660	16,503	13,296	19,636
1925	35,922	1,543	15,836	13,370	20,086
1926	35,362	1,595	16,355	13,405	19,007

The recorded immigration into and emigration from the State of Victoria by sea were as follow in recent years :—

Year	Immigration (by sea)	Emigration (by sea)	Year	Immigration (by sea)	Emigration (by sea)
1921	66,537	68,944	1924	88,467	72,458
1922	81,908	66,355	1925	77,487	64,276
1923	87,248	69,986	1926	88,026	73,799

Of the immigrants in 1926, 39,967 were females, and of the emigrants 34,436 were females.

Religion.

There is no State Church in Victoria, and no State assistance has been given to religion since 1875. At the date of the census of 1921 77 per cent. of the population were Protestants, 21 per cent. were Roman Catholics, and a half per cent. were Jews. The following were the enumerated numbers of each of the principal religions in 1921:—Episcopalians 620,445 (including 'Protestant,' so stated, 18,636); Presbyterians, 257,072; Methodists, 183,829; other Protestants, 100,097; Roman Catholics, 322,565; Jews, 7,677; Buddhists, Confucians, &c., 1,367; others (including unspecified), 88,228.

Instruction.

Educational establishments in Victoria are of four kinds, viz., the University, established under a special Act and opened in 1855, with its four affiliated colleges, State schools (primary and secondary), technical schools or colleges, and registered schools.

Affiliated to the University are four colleges—Trinity, Ormond, Queen's and Newman—in connection with the Church of England, Presbyterian, Methodist and Roman Catholic Churches respectively; also the School of Mines at Ballarat. In 1926 the students who matriculated numbered 605, the direct graduates numbered 551, and there were 2,720 students attending lectures.

Public instruction is strictly secular; it is compulsory for children between the ages of 6 and 14, and is free. In 1925 there were 2,525 State schools with 7,020 teachers, a total enrolment of 255,101 scholars, and an average attendance of 175,131, or 69 per cent. of the numbers on the roll. Amongst persons aged 15 years and upwards at the census of 1921, about 98 per cent. were able to read and write. In 1925-26 the total cost of public instruction, including grants to the University, was 3,025,732*l.*—all paid by the State. Secondary education is for the most part under the control either of private persons or proprietary bodies, usually connected with some religious denomination. There were, in 1926, 494 registered schools in Victoria, with 2,212 teachers, and a net enrolment of 64,835 scholars. A large proportion of these were in connection with the Roman Catholic denomination, the members of which do not as a rule avail themselves of the free education afforded by the State.

Under the auspices of the Education Department are 30 technical schools, 24 junior technical schools, 33 high schools (including agricultural high schools), 46 higher elementary schools, and 9 schools of domestic arts. In 1925-26 there were 851 teachers attached to the technical schools, irrespective of agricultural and horticultural colleges, the gross enrolment of pupils at senior technical schools being 13,451. The attendance at junior technical schools numbered 6,352 in 1925-26.

Pensions, &c.

On July 1, 1909, the Federal Old Age Pensions Act came into operation, and the State pensioners were taken over by the Federal authorities. The number in Victoria on June 30, 1927, was 38,702. Pensions are also granted to invalids, 15,327 being on the register on June 30, 1927. The amount paid in old age and invalid pensions during 1926-27 was 2,666,470*l.*

An Act was passed by the Federal Parliament in October, 1912, providing for the payment, on application, of 5*l.* to the mother of every child born in the Commonwealth, no additional sum to be paid for twins. During the year ended June 30, 1927, the allowance was granted to 35,202 mothers in the State of Victoria.

Justice and Crime.

There is a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and six puisne judges. There are courts of general and petty sessions, county courts, courts of insolvency, courts of mines, and courts of licensing.

The following are the criminal statistics for five years:—

	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
Arrested . . . . .	16,163	17,223	17,786	17,922	18,853

Committed for trial . . .	688	570	514	648	719
Sentenced after commitment	434	361	347	415	436

There are 7 gaols and 5 reformatory prisons in Victoria, besides 2 police gaols. At the end of 1926 there were confined in these prisons and police gaols 922 males and 43 females.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure of the State in the years shown were :—

Year ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure	Year ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1914	10,958,037	10,944,718	1925	24,304,887	24,170,488

Total . . . . .	25,269,756	Total . . . . .	25,559,583

The amount raised by taxation (exclusive of taxes collected by Commonwealth) as shown in the above table, viz. 5,821,034*l.*, was equivalent to a proportion of 3*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.* per head of population.

Victoria has a debt, incurred in the construction of public works, which amounted, on June 30, 1926, to 140,264,989*l.* (inclusive of temporary Treasury bills). Of this debt 69,832,415*l.* was borrowed for the construction of railways; 17,475,150*l.* for waterworks; 3,368,372*l.* for State school buildings, &c.; 22,853,046*l.* for discharged soldiers' settlement; 5,967,421*l.* for closer settlement; 7,483,347*l.* for country roads; 9,655,532*l.* for electricity supply; and 4,129,706*l.* for other public works and purposes. The nominal rate of interest on the public debt varies from 3 to 7½ per cent., and averages 4·91 per cent.

The estimated total value of the rateable property of the State in 1926 amounted to about 606,322,402*l.*, and the annual value was 32,446,736*l.*

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of Victoria about 34,703,710 acres at the end of 1925 were either alienated or in process of alienation. Of the remainder about 4,901,201 acres are at present suitable for agriculture; 6,601,669 acres for pastoral purposes; 111,253 acres are held under perpetual lease; State forests, timber, water, and other reserves, 5,765,140 acres; auriferous land, 519,555 acres; roads, 1,794,218 acres; and unsold land in towns, &c., 1,849,014 acres.

The total number of holdings in 1925-26 was 78,167.

The following table shows the areas under the principal crops and the produce of each for five years —

Years ended March 31	Total Area Cultivated	Wheat		Oats		Barley		Potatoes		Hay
		1,000 Acres	1,000 Acres	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Tons	1,000 Acres	1,000 Tons

1927	16·08	16·10	19·80	25·34	2·46	1·40

In 1925-26 there were 40,712 acres of vines, yielding 1,637,274 gallons of wine.

In addition, green forage covered 87,241 acres, and gardens (both market and private) and orchards occupied an extent of 99,630 acres in 1926-27.

There is a small beet-sugar undertaking in the hands of the Government.

In the season 1926-27, 2,024 acres were harvested and 1,177 tons of sugar extracted.

At the end of March, 1927, there were in the State 447,998 horses, 1,435,761 head of cattle, 14,919,653 sheep, and 284,271 pigs. The wool produced in the season 1924-25 amounted to 106,787,897 lbs., valued at 11,444,240 $\frac{1}{2}$ ., and in 1925-26 to 111,260,814 lbs. valued at 7,082,820 $\frac{1}{2}$ .. The quantity of butter produced in 1925-26 was 81,747,291 lbs.

At the end of 1925 the area of State Forests in Victoria was 4,635,000 acres. The amount of timber sawn in 1925-26 in Victoria Saw Mills from Victorian logs was 109,534,000 super. feet, valued at the mill at 711,970 $\frac{1}{2}$ ..

The estimated value of Victorian production in 1925-26 was as follows:—

Agricultural Production	£ 13,702,818	Miscellaneous	£ 5,442,610
Pastoral and Dairying	24,420,210
Mining	1,667,528	Total Primary Products	47,145,626

The total quantity of gold raised from 1851 to 1926 is estimated at 71,226,075 oz. (fine), of an aggregate value of 302,548,425 $\frac{1}{2}$ .. The estimated number of miners at work on the gold-fields in 1926 was 1,967. About 2,593 persons were employed in coal-mining. Total mineral production, 1926, 1,670,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ ., compared with 1,667,528 $\frac{1}{2}$ .. in 1925.

III. MANUFACTURES.

The total number of manufactories, works, &c., in 1925-26, was 7,461, of which 1,149 used steam or gas engines and 4,709 electric power; the aggregate horse-power used was 367,318; the number of hands employed was 152,959; and the lands, buildings, machinery and plant were valued at 60,396,500 $\frac{1}{2}$ ..

The value of materials used was 67,164,445*l.*, and of articles produced or work done, 119,986,439*l.* The wages paid amounted to 29,329,400*l.* The manufactures are almost entirely for home consumption.

Commerce and Communications.

The commerce of Victoria, exclusive of inter-State trade, is included in the statement of the commerce of the Commonwealth of Australia.

The total value of the imports and exports of Victoria, excluding inter-State trade, in six years, was :—

Years	Total Imports (Oversea)	Total Exports (Oversea)	Years	Total Imports (Oversea)	Total Exports (Oversea)
	£	£		£	£

QUEENSLAND.

Constitution and Government.

Queensland, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was formed into a separate colony in 1859, and responsible government was conferred. The power of making laws and imposing taxes is vested in a Parliament of one House—the Legislative Assembly, which comprises 72 members, returned from 72 electoral districts for three years, elected by ballot. Members of the Assembly are entitled to payment of 750*l.* per annum, with travelling expenses, and an allowance for stationery and postage. At the General Election of May, 1926, there were 478,097 persons registered as qualified to vote under the 'Electors Act Amendment Act of 1914.' This provides for male and female adult franchise, a twelve months' continuous residence in the State being the only proviso.

Prior to 1922 there was also a Legislative Council, but this has been abolished.

Governor of Queensland.—Lt.-Gen. Sir T. H. J. O. Goodwin, K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., F.R.C.S. (appointed February, 1927.) (Salary, 3,000*l.*)

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. W. Lennon. (Salary, 1,000*l.*)

The Executive Council of Ministers consists (1928) of the following members:—

Premier, Chief Secretary, Treasurer, and Vice-President of the Executive Council.—Hon. W. McCormack.

Home Secretary.—Hon. J. Stopford.

Secretary for Public Lands.—Hon. T. Dunstan.

Secretary for Mines.—Hon. A. J. Jones.

Secretary for Railways.—Hon. J. Larcombe.

Secretary for Public Instruction.—Hon. T. Wilson.

Attorney-General.—Hon. John Mullan.

Secretary for Agriculture and Stock.—Hon. W. F. Smith.

Secretary for Public Works.—Hon. M. J. Kirwan.

Minister for Labour and Industry.—Hon. D. A. Gledson.

Each Minister has a salary of 1,250*l.*; the Vice-President of the Executive Council receives 300*l.* in addition.

Agent-General for Queensland in Great Britain.—John Huxham. (Salary, 1,500*l.*) Office.—409 Strand, London. Secretary, L. H. Pike.

Provision is made for Local Government by the subdivision of the State into areas denominated respectively cities, towns and shires. These are under the management of aldermen and councillors, who are elected by the Parliamentary electors and are charged with the control of all matters of a parochial nature, more especially the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges within their allotted areas. Shires for the most part consist of purely rural districts.

The number and area of these subdivisions, together with the receipts and expenditure for the year 1926, were:—

	No.	Area in square miles	Receipts	Expenditure	Rateable Values.
City of Brisbane	1	385	1,959,817	2,238,452	21,748,426

In addition, the various Local Authorities control public utilities—water supply, electric light, small railways and tramways (including Rockhampton and Brisbane Street Tramways).

Area and Population.

Queensland comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent, including the adjacent islands in the Pacific Ocean and in the Gulf of Carpentaria. Estimated area 670,500 English square miles, with a seaboard of 2,250 miles. In 1825 a branch penal settlement was made at Moreton Bay; in 1842 free settlers were admitted to the country, and during the next twenty years great progress was apparent.

The increase in the population at different periods since 1846 has been as follows:—

Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum	Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum	Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum
1846	2,257	—	1871	120,104	6·74	1901	498,129	2·78
1856	18,544	72·16	1876	173,283	8·35	1911	605,813	2·16
1861	80,059	17·06	1881	213,525	4·64	1921	755,972	2·48
1864	61,467	34·83	1886	322,353	10·24
1868	99,901	15·63	1891	393,718	4·39

At the census of April, 1921, the population consisted of 398,969 males, and 357,003 females. The estimated population on September 30, 1927, was 897,419 (474,216 males, 423,203 females). In 1921 there were 3,502 male and 80 female Chinese; 873 male and 142 female 'Polynesians'; 1,036 male and 43 female Japanese; 2,080 persons of other Asiatic, &c., races. The total number of aboriginals according to the census June 30, 1926, was 13,640 full-bloods, and 4,046 half-castes.

As to occupation the population in 1921 was classified as follows:—Professional class, 26,040; domestics, 28,784; commercial, 43,092; industrial 85,373; transport and communication, 29,790; agricultural, pastoral, mining, &c., 109,549; indefinite, 2,880; independent, 2,003; dependent class (wives, children, scholars, students, dependent relatives, &c.), 428,061.

Of the total population, 1921, 592,295 persons (exclusive of aborigines) were born in Australia; 128,082 in the British Isles; 148,163 in Europe; 6,741 in Asia; 740 in Africa; 1,764 in America; 1,015 in Polynesia.

The following table shows the births, deaths, and marriages for five years—

Years	Total Births	Illegitimate	Deaths	Marriages	Excess of Births
1922	19,987	919	7,152	5,878	12,835
1923	19,982	1,053	7,893	5,814	12,089
1924	19,708	1,025	7,327	6,234	12,381
1925	20,283	1,035	7,545	6,471	12,738
1926	19,765	994	8,215	6,428	11,550

The immigration and emigration, including arrivals and departures by sea and by rail across the border—Immigration, 1926, 87,624; 1925, 93,979. Emigration, 1926, 78,166; 1925, 82,274.

Brisbane, the capital, with an area of 385 square miles, had in 1926 a population of 274,260. The population of the chief towns at the same date was: Rockhampton, 30,000; Townsville, 29,800; Maryborough, 12,000; Gympie, 9,131; Ipswich, 20,526; Toowoomba, 23,886; Charters Towers, 9,100; Bundaberg, 10,000; Mt Morgan, 6,700; Cairns, 9,000; Warwick, 7,000.

Religion.

There is no State Church. Previous to 1861 valuable grants of land had been made to the principal religious denominations, which they still retain. The following were the numbers in 1921—Church of England, 309,786; Church of Rome, 172,662; Presbyterian, 91,610; Methodist, 77,566; Lutheran, 17,891; Baptist, 14,735; other Christian sects, 44,132; Hebrew, 1,003; other non-Christians, 3,264; no religion, 3,926; unspecified, &c., 19,397.

Instruction.

Primary secular education is free and compulsory. According to the marriage statistics, 99·88 per cent. of persons married during 1926 were able to read and write. The Public Expenditure on account of education, science and art, for the year 1926–27 was 1,645,435/. During the year 1926 there were 1,739 State schools (including 13 high schools and 147 provisional schools, also 11 'Rural Schools,' one Farm Home and 3 Aboriginal schools) in operation, with 4,230 teachers, and an average daily attendance of 108,526 pupils. Secondary education is provided for by 10 grammar schools, 6 for boys and 4 for girls, with, in 1926, 101 teachers and an average attendance of 1,650 pupils; 13 'High Schools' with (1926) 99 teachers and 1,666 scholars. There were besides (1926) 177 private schools, with 1,086 teachers, and an average daily attendance of 22,317 pupils. The Government grants annually a considerable number of scholarships (1,664 in 1926–27), tenable for two and a half years, to the various grammar schools. There were 17 technical schools in 1926 with 13,871 enrolled students. The Queensland University (established in 1911) in Brisbane had, at the end of 1926, 13 professors, 18 lecturers, and 32 other members of staff, with 481 students on the roll.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by Supreme Courts, Magistrates' Courts, and Courts of Petty Sessions. In these last Justices of the Peace sit, presided over in the more important centres by Police magistrates. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief Justice and six puisne judges. The total number of persons convicted of serious offences by the Superior Courts in 1926-27 was 269, and the summary convictions at petty sessions in the same year numbered 26,815 (including cases of bail estreated). Including penal establishments, there were, at the end of 1927, 7 prisons, with 397 male and 9 female prisoners. The total police force, including native troopers, averages about 1,249 men.

Pauperism, Pensions, etc.

Charitable institutions are maintained by public subscription, supplemented by State endowment; hospitals, benevolent asylums, an institution for the blind, deaf, and dumb, refuges and homes helped. Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are payable by the Commonwealth. The number of Old Age Pensioners in the State at June 30, 1927, was 17,236, and of Invalid Pensioners, 7,357. The number of War Pensioners at the same date was 26,464 (including dependants). Maternity allowance was paid to 19,300 mothers during 1926-27.

Finance.

The following table shows the net revenue and expenditure of Queensland during five years ending June 30 :—

—	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue .	12,599,403	13,428,039	14,897,256	15,599,718	16,147,787
Expenditure .	12,784,382	13,415,332	14,880,289	16,154,404	16,490,954

The gross income from or expenditure on account of Departments under the control of the Commonwealth is not included.

The following were the chief sources from which revenue was received during 1926-27 :—Net amount from Commonwealth, 1,095,338*l.*; stamp duty, 960,286*l.*; income tax, 2,821,217*l.*; licences, 137,576*l.*; land tax, 481,937*l.*; from land—rent, pastoral occupations, 457,137*l.*; other rents and sale of land, 933,049*l.*; from railways, 7,349,501*l.*

The chief items of expenditure during 1926-27 were as under :—Interest on public debt, 4,831,250*l.*; public instruction, 1,516,383*l.*; treasurer's department, 457,904*l.*; public lands department, 313,475*l.*; home department, 1,502,601*l.*; public works department, 184,747*l.*; department of labour and industry, 49,788*l.*; department of agriculture, 165,330*l.*; railways, 6,493,329*l.*. The total expenditure from loans, mostly on public works, was 3,901,292*l.*, of which the principal items were railways, 2,375,481*l.*; soldiers' settlement, 17,537*l.*; loans to local bodies, 561,003*l.*; main roads, 313,121*l.*; sugar works, 74,349*l.*; water supply, 130,629*l.*; buildings, 139,632*l.*; land resumption and settlement, 40,059*l.*

The estimated value of landed property in 1926 for assessment for Local Government purposes was 73,426,304*l.*. This includes lands leased from the Crown for agricultural and pastoral purposes, as Runs and Grazing Farms, etc., the lessees' interest in which has been capitalised for assessment purposes at 22,986,769*l.*, but is exclusive of unoccupied Crown lands, the property of local bodies, reserves for public purposes, and lands upon which are erected buildings for public worship.

The gross public debt of the State amounted, on June 30, 1927, to 106,479,915*l.*

Defence.

For Defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Production and Industry.

Of the total area of the State, 17,768,636 acres (1926) have been alienated : in process of alienation, under deferred payment system, are 6,802,460, leaving 404,548,904 acres still the property of the Crown, or about 94·27 per cent. of the total area. The receipts from the sale of land up to the end of 1926 amounted to 10,945,906*l*. Land is made available for selection in the following modes and classes :—(1) Agricultural Selections—i.e., Perpetual Lease Selections ; (2) Grazing Selections—i.e., Grazing Homesteads and Grazing Farms ; and (3) Perpetual Lease Prickly-pear Selections. The largest area that may be acquired by any one person as a Perpetual Lease Selection is 2,560 acres. The annual rent for the first 15 years of the term is  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the notified capital value. The greatest area which may be applied for or held as a Grazing Homestead or a Grazing Farm is 60,000 acres. The term may be any number of years not exceeding 28. A Grazing Farm must be continuously occupied during the whole term of the lease by the selectors residing on it personally or by bailiff ; and it must be enclosed with a substantial fence within three years from the issue of the licence to occupy. The area of a Prickly-pear Selection must not exceed 2,560 acres. During the first period of the lease no rent is payable, but the prickly-pear must be regularly eradicated and the land kept clear ; thereafter the rent is  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the notified capital value.

A large proportion of the area is leased in squatting runs for pastoral purposes, amounting to 186,382,240 acres in 1926, besides 81,464,121 acres in grazing farms and homesteads, and 28,096,600 acres under occupation licence. Perpetual Leases, 8,872,890 acres ; Prickly Pear Leases, 5,077,240. The live-stock in 1926 numbered 571,622 horses, 5,464,845 cattle, 16,860,772 sheep, and 183,662 pigs. The total area under cultivation in 1926 was 1,288,518 acres, and of this 941,783 acres were under crops, and 346,735 acres lying fallow-idle, etc., also 543,528 acres laid down with permanent artificial pasture. The wool production, expressed as greasy, was in 1920, 114,809,963 lbs. ; 1921, 132,579,733 lbs. ; 1922, 134,971,150 lbs. ; 1923, 121,913,075 lbs. ; 1924-5, 140,862,541 lbs., valued at 15,553,572*l*. ; 1925-6, 146,985,689 lbs., valued at 10,993,305*l*.

A considerable area consists of natural forest, eucalypti, pine and cedar being the timbers mostly in demand, although a considerable quantity of more ornamental woods are utilised by cabinet makers. The amount of wood cut in the various saw mills in 1925-6 was (in superficial feet) :—pine, 70,622,589 ; cedar, 250,819 ; hardwood, 42,402,672 ; other, mostly cabinet timber, 18,386,364 ; number of railway sleepers, 500,610 ; total value, 2,617,862*l*. Forest reservations total 5,297,782 acres (1926).

The quantity actually cut for all purposes is nearly double these quantities.

The crops, &c., in two years were as follows :—

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

Constitution and Government.

South Australia was formed into a British Province by Letters Patent of February, 1836, and a partially elective Legislative Council was established in 1851. The present Constitution bears date October 24, 1856. It vests the legislative power in a Parliament elected by the people. The Parliament consists of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The former is composed of twenty members. Every three years half the members retire, and their places are supplied by new members elected from each of the five districts into which the State is divided for this purpose. The executive has no power to dissolve this body. The qualifications of an elector to the Legislative Council are, to be twenty-one years of age, a natural born or naturalised subject of His Majesty, and have been on the electoral roll six months, besides having a freehold of 50*l.* value, or a leasehold of 20*l.* annual value, or occupying a dwelling-house the rent of which is not less than 17*l.* per annum, or a registered proprietor of a Crown lease with improvements to the value of at least 50*l.*, the property of the elector; head teacher of a college or school residing on premises; postmaster or postmistress residing in the building; railway stationmaster resident in premises; member of police force in charge of a station; officiating minister of religion. By the Constitution Amendment Act, 1894, the franchise was extended to women, who voted for the first time at the General Election of April 25, 1896. There were 137,771 registered electors in 1927. The qualification for a member of Council is merely that he be thirty years of age, a natural born or naturalised subject, and a resident in the State for three years. Each member of the Council and also of the House of Assembly receives 400*l.* per annum and a free pass over Government railways. The salary of members was increased from 200*l.* per annum on December 1, 1921.

The House of Assembly consists of 46 members elected for 3 years, representing 19 electoral districts. The qualifications for an elector are that of having been on the electoral roll for 6 months, and of having arrived at 21 years of age; and the qualifications for a member are the same. There were 309,588 registered electors in 1927. Judges and ministers of religion are ineligible for election as members. The election of members of both houses takes place by ballot.

The executive is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and an Executive Council, consisting of 6 responsible Ministers and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Governor of South Australia.—Col. the Hon. Sir Alexander G. A. Hore-Ruthven, V.C., K.C.M.G., Jan., 1928. (Salary, 5,000*l.* per annum.)

The Chief Justice (Hon. Sir George J. R. Murray, K.C.M.G., 2,500*l.*), being also Lieutenant-Governor, acts during the absence of the Governor.

The departments of the Public Service are controlled by the following Ministers (appointed April 4, 1927):—

Premier, Treasurer, and Minister of Railways.—Hon. R. L. Butler, M.P.

Chief Secretary, Minister of Mines and Minister of Marine.—Hon. H. Tassie, M.L.C.

Attorney-General and Minister of Industry.—Hon. H. Homburg, M.P.

Commissioner of Crown Lands and Minister of Local Government.—Hon. G. F. Jenkins, M.P.

Commissioner of Public Works and Minister of Education.—Hon. M. McIntosh, M.P.

Minister of Agriculture, Minister of Immigration, Minister of Expatriation, and Minister of Irrigation.—Hon. T. Cowan, M.L.C.

The provision for the payment of Ministers was increased from 5,000*l.* to 7,750*l.* to date from December 1, 1921. They are jointly and individually responsible to the Legislature for all their official acts, as in the United Kingdom.

Agent-General for South Australia in London.—Sir Henry Barwell, K.C.M.G., Australia House, Strand, London, W.C. 2.

Area.

The total area of South Australia is 380,070 square miles. The settled part of the State is divided into counties, hundreds, municipalities, and district councils, the last being the most general, as they cover most of the settled districts. There are 49 counties proclaimed, covering 54,179,840 acres. This area covers the settled portion of the State, 136,485,603 acres being in occupation. Outside this area there are three extensive pastoral districts—the western, northern, and north-eastern, covering 189,064,960 acres, 93,048,528 being under pastoral leases, with a population of less than 5,000. There are 39 municipalities and 155 district councils.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Constitution and Government.

In 1791 Vancouver, in the Discovery, took formal possession of the country about King George Sound. In 1826 the Government of New South Wales sent 20 convicts and a detachment of soldiers to King George Sound and formed a settlement then called Fredericks Town. In 1827 Captain James (afterwards Sir James) Stirling surveyed the coast from King George Sound to the Swan River, and in May, 1829, Captain (afterwards Sir Charles) Fremantle, took possession of the territory. In June, 1829, Captain Stirling founded the Swan River Settlement, now the Commonwealth State of Western Australia, and the towns of Perth and Fremantle, and was appointed Lieutenant-Governor.

Large grants of land were made to the early settlers, and agricultural and pastoral occupations were pursued by a small population with varying success, until, in 1850, the State was in a languishing condition, and the inhabitants' petition that it might be made a penal settlement was acceded to. Between 1850 and 1868, when transportation ceased, 9,718 convicts were sent out. The Imperial convict establishment was transferred to the Colonial Government on March 31, 1886.

In 1870 partially representative government was instituted, and in 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council was, in the first instance, nominated by the Governor, but it was provided that in the event of the population of the Colony reaching 60,000, it should be elective. In 1893 this limit of population being reached, as set forth in a proclamation dated July 18, of that year, the Colonial Parliament passed an Act (57 Vict. No. 14) amending the constitution.

By the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1899, further amended by the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1911, it is provided that the Legislative Council shall consist of 30 members representing 10 electoral provinces and holding their seats for six years. Members must be 30 years of age, resident in the State for two years, and either be natural-born British subjects or naturalized for 5 years and resident in the State for 5 years. Every elector must have resided in the State for 6 months, and must possess within the province freehold estate of the clear value of £50, or be a householder occupying a dwelling-house of the clear annual value of £17, or holder of a lease of the value of £17 per annum, or the holder of a lease or licence from the Crown of the annual rental of £10, or have his name on the electoral list of a Municipality or Roads Board in respect of property in the province of the annual rateable value of £17. The Legislative Assembly consists of 50 members, each representing one electorate, and elected for 3 years. Members must be 21 years of age, be either natural-born subjects of the Crown and have resided in Western Australia for twelve months, or naturalized for 5 years and have resided therein for 2 years. Electors must be 21 years of age, natural-born or naturalized subjects of the Crown, and must have resided in the State for 6 months, and must be resident in the district for at least one month when making their claims. Members of and electors for both Houses may be of either sex. Enrolment for the Legislative Assembly is compulsory. No person can be registered as a voter in more than one district or more than once in each Province for which he holds a sufficient qualification. Members of the Legislature are paid 600*l.* a year, and travel free on all Government railways. The entire management and control of the unalienated lands of the Crown in Western Australia is vested in the Legislature of the State.

State of political parties (1927):—Legislative Council: Labour Party, 5; United Party, 10; Country Party, 6; National Labour, 4; Others, 5. Legislative Assembly: Labour Party, 27; United Party, 16; Country Party, 7.

Governor.—H. E. Col. Sir William Robert Campion, K.C.M.G., D.S.O. (1924).

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. Sir Robert Furse McMillan, Kt. (June, 1921).

The salary provided for the Governor is 4,000*l.* per annum. He is assisted in his functions by a cabinet of responsible ministers, as follows:—

Premier, Treasurer, and Minister for Forests.—Hon. Philip Collier, M.L.A.

Minister for Railways, Justice, and Police.—Hon. John C. Willcock, M.L.A.

Minister for Public Works, Water Supply, Labour and Trading Concerns.—Hon. Alexander McCallum, M.L.A.

Area and Population.

Western Australia includes all that portion of the continent situated to the westward of 129° E. longitude, together with the adjacent islands. The total estimated area of the State is 975,920 English square miles, or, 624,588,800 acres. It is divided into 38 magisterial districts.

The enumerated population in the various census years was as follows:—

Years	Males	Females	Total
1848	2,818	1,804	4,622
1859	9,522	5,315	14,837
1870	15,375	9,410	24,785
1881	17,062	12,646	29,708
1891	29,807	19,975	49,782
1901	112,875	71,249	184,124
1911	161,565	120,549	282,114
1921	177,278	155,454	332,732

There were enumerated, in 1921, 1,956 half-caste aborigines. The number of full-blooded aborigines is not known, but for the year 1925–26 their total number was estimated at 22,222.

Of the total population in 1921, 248,866 were returned as born in Australia, of whom 142,947 were recorded as natives of Western Australia. The number of married persons was 121,685 (61,899 males and 59,786 females); widowers, 4,528; widows, 8,526; divorced, 316 males and 294 females; unmarried, 108,792 males and 85,843 females. The conjugal condition of the remaining 2,798 persons was not stated. The number of males under 21 was 72,846, and of females 70,455. The population on December 31, 1926, was estimated to be: males, 203,210; females, 175,536; total, 378,746; and on June 30, 1927: males, 207,205; females, 177,838; total, 385,043.

Perth, the capital, had an estimated population on December 31, 1926, within the 10-mile radius area of the Metropolitan district, of 184,223. This, however, includes the chief port of the State, Fremantle, with its suburbs, the population of which, 1926, was estimated at 31,158. The other principal municipalities, with population in 1926, are:—Kalgoorlie, 5,300; Boulder, 5,884; Albany, 3,980; Bunbury, 4,900; Claremont, 6,300; Collie, 3,550; Geraldton, 4,199; Midland Junction, 4,950; Northam, 5,000.

The movement of population for the State in 5 years is given as follows:—

Years	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Immigrants	Emigrants
1922	2,446	8,131	3,167	31,141	28,212
1923	2,376	7,854	2,930	33,335	28,552
1924	2,596	8,301	3,263	35,195	29,924
1925	2,746	8,185	3,315	32,920	29,731
1926	2,844	8,301	3,350	30,732	29,120

In 1922 there were 335; in 1923, 286; in 1924, 327; in 1925, 335, and in 1926, 325 illegitimate births.

Religion.

The religious division of the population was as follows at the census of 1921:—Church of England, 153,229; Methodists, 39,108; Presbyterians, 28,377; Congregationalists, 6,557; Baptists, 5,541; other Protestants, 14,618; Roman Catholics, 64,488; Catholics (Undefined), 2,048; other Christians, 2,930; Hebrews, 1,919; Mohammedans, 826; Buddhists, 1,177; other non-Christians, 654; indefinite, 1,478; no religion, 1,774; not stated, 8,008.

Instruction.

Of the total white population of 15 years and upwards in 1921, 3.97 per cent. were stated to be unable to read. Primary education is compulsory.

The following table gives particulars of schools and pupils for three years:—

—	No. of Schools	No. of Scholars enrolled	Av. Attendance during year	Cost per Head of av. Attendance
Government Schools				£ s. d.
June 30, 1924	789	51,726	45,644	9 18 3½

1925	122	11,609	10,539	—
1926	120	11,766	10,635	—

Education is free throughout from the kindergarten to the University and comprises ample provision also for secondary education, technical schools, continuation classes, scholarships, etc. During the financial year ended June 30, 1927, the total sum spent on education and schools, exclusive of a grant of 21,500*l.* to the University of Western Australia, was 647,062*l.*

Justice and Crime.

The following table gives the number of apprehensions and convictions for five years :—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
Apprehended or summoned . . .	10,844	10,182	10,679	11,858	12,335
Summary convictions . . .	9,748	8,985	9,534	10,047	11,105
Convictions in superior courts . .	60	110	87	99	92

The total number of distinct persons committed to prison in the year ended June 30, 1927, was 1,052; the number of commitments totalled 1,760—viz.: adult males, 1,626, adult females, 134.

All the above figures are exclusive of aboriginal crime.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions.

There are two charitable institutions, one situated at Claremont, and one at Fremantle, both supported by public funds, with 704 inmates on December 31, 1926. Twenty-eight Government hospitals, a Government sanatorium for consumptive patients, three hospitals for the insane, and two depôts for diseased natives at Port Hedland and Derby, are maintained by public funds, whilst three public and forty other assisted hospitals exist, in addition to numerous private hospitals situated in Perth and other centres of population. Nine Protestant and four Roman Catholic orphanage industrial schools are supported partly by private subscriptions and partly out of public money. There are also ten native and half-caste institutions, including three Government native settlements. Government receiving depôt for all State children who are afterwards sent to the various Institutions. On June 30, 1927, a total of 865 adults and 2,523 children, total, 3,388 persons in the State received monetary assistance from the public funds for widows and others.

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are now paid by the Commonwealth Government. The number of pensioners in Western Australia at June 30, 1927, was: Old Age, 7,326; Invalid, 2,699; War Pensioners, 26,689.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure of Western Australia in six years, ended June 30, are given as follows :—

Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure	Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1922 . .	6,907,107	7,639,242	1925 . .	8,381,446	8,439,844
1923 . .	7,207,492	7,612,856	1926 . .	8,808,166	8,907,809
1924 . .	7,865,594	8,094,753	1927 . .	9,750,833	9,722,588

Two-fifths of the public income is derived from railways and tramways (3,869,301*l.* for the year ended June 30, 1927), and the rest mainly from various forms of taxation (1,211,343*l.*), lands, timber, and mining (550,912*l.*), water supply, etc. (498,272*l.*), other business and trading concerns (770,393*l.*), surplus returned to the State of the Commonwealth Revenue derived from Customs, Excise, Post Office and other receipts, Disabilities Grant and interest on transferred properties (1,153,132*l.*) and Royal Mint and other receipts (1,697,480). Western Australia had a net public debt of 61,849,239*l.* On June 30, 1927, the annual charge for which was 3,295,038*l.* The amount of accrued sinking fund on March 31, 1927, was 8,756,936*l.*

Production and Industry.

Up to June 30, 1927, of the entire acreage of the State, 12,093,622 acres had been alienated; on that date 19,646,555 acres were in process of alienation: the area alienated and in process of alienation thus amounting to 31,740,177 acres. At the same date there were in force leases comprising an area of 234,160,422 acres, of which 229,970,629 acres were pastoral, and 1,834,802 acres were timber, while 50,603 acres were under mining leases, and 31,430 acres were Miners' Homestead leases. The area under crop in 1921 was 1,804,986 acres; in 1922, 1,901,680 acres; in 1923, 2,274,998 acres; in 1924, 2,323,070 acres; in 1925, 2,710,856 acres; in 1926, 2,932,110 acres, and in 1927, 3,324,523 acres. The chief crops for two recent years were as follows:—

Crops	1925-26	1926-27	1925-26	1926-27
	Acres	Acres	Bushels	Bushels
Wheat . . . .	2,112,032	2,571,187	20,471,177	30,021,616

The estimated acreages sown with wheat, oats and barley for the season 1927-28, both for grain and hay, are respectively 3,222,369, 411,282, and 18,788 acres.

The principal areas occupied by the more important trees of Western Australia, and the quantity cut in two years, according to the official Industrial Returns, were as follows:—

	Prime Forest Areas.	Acres of Timbered Country.	1925-26 <sup>3</sup>	1926-27 <sup>3</sup>

The live-stock at the end of 1926 consisted of 166,463 horses; 827,303 cattle; 7,458,766 sheep; 69,798 pigs; 20,979 goats; 5,021 camels; and 9,442 mules and donkeys.

The wool clip in 1926 was 50,235,640 lb.; the exports 53,787,555 lb. (excluding 4,168,051 lb. on skins), valued at 3,508,313*l*.

Gold was first obtained in Western Australia in 1886. The sensational gold finds at Coolgardie and Kalgoorlie in 1892 and 1893 gave an impetus to Western Australian gold mining, which, in a few years' time, placed this State at the head of all the Australian Colonies as regards gold output. The aggregate output to the end of 1926 was 36,708,510 fine oz., valued (according to prices realised) at 158,517,441*l*. There were in the State, in 1926, 414 leases of gold mines; men employed in the mines, 4,387, viz., 2,099 above and 2,288 underground; output of gold, 437,343 fine oz., value 1,857,716*l*. (standard mint value, exclusive of premiums realised on export sales).

The mineral output of the State for two years is shown in the following table:—

In Western Australia, in 1921, there were 48,979 persons engaged in various forms of primary production. Of these, 26,564 were directly engaged in agriculture; 4,833 in pastoral pursuits; 5,657 in forestry, and 9,044 in mining and quarrying. There were, on June 30, 1926, a total of 1,170 industrial establishments in the State, employing either machinery or at least four hands. The total number of persons employed by them was 22,140, as against 21,754 in 1925. The gross output of these establishments for eighteen months ended June 30, 1926, was computed at 21,449,799*l*. The total estimated value of Western Australian production during 1925 was 30,805,718*l*, distributed as follows:—agricultural, 9,754,956*l*; pastoral, 5,488,113*l*; dairy, poultry, and bee-farming, 1,717,831*l*; forestry and fisheries, 3,993,226*l*; mining, 2,521,426*l*; manufacturing, 7,335,166*l*.

Commerce and Communications.

The external commerce of Western Australia, exclusive of inter-State trade, is comprised in the statement of the commerce of Australia given under the heading of the Commonwealth.

The total value of the imports and exports, including inter-State trade, in 5 years is shown in the subjoined statement:—

June	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . .	13,777,679	14,344,145	16,074,035	16,462,572	18,374,450
Exports . .	11,105,220	14,123,289	14,664,548	14,581,657	15,151,959

The most important of the exports for 1926-27 were wheat (4,667,095*l.*) and flour (1,161,324*l.*), wool (3,518,313*l.*), gold specie (735,663*l.*), timber (1,658,018*l.*), pearl shell (212,337*l.*), pearls (43,414*l.*), hides and skins (376,004*l.*), silver (68,742*l.*), sandal-wood (199,754*l.*), fresh fruit (334,272*l.*).

There were on the West Australian register on December 31, 1926, 55 steamers of 12,821 tons, and 346 sailing vessels of 12,310 tons; total, 401 vessels of 25,131 tons. Tonnage inwards and outwards, 1925-26, from and to ports outside the State, 6,525,015.

For the year ending June 30, 1927, the State had 3,918 miles of State Government railway, and 450 miles of Commonwealth line, the latter being the western portion of the Trans-Australian line (Kalgoorlie-Port Augusta), which links the State Railway System to those of the other States of the Commonwealth.

Money and Credit.

A branch mint was opened at Perth in 1899. The issues of Imperial coin to the end of 1926 were: gold, 99,339,029*l.*; silver, 15,600*l.*; bronze, 2,000*l.* The issue in 1926 was: gold, 1,313,578*l.*; silver and bronze, nil.

There are nine banks in Western Australia besides the State Government Savings Bank and the Commonwealth Bank of Australia and Savings Bank. The total paid-up capital of the cheque paying banks in the quarter ended June 30, 1927, was 32,717,628*l.*, of which 4,000,000*l.* is profit transferred to Capital Account by the Commonwealth Bank; deposits, 14,897,290*l.*; total average liabilities, 16,093,530*l.*; total assets, 21,413,793*l.*

State Government Savings Bank.—The amount due to depositors on June 30, 1927, inclusive of interest, was 6,881,263*l.*, whilst in addition an amount of 84,269*l.* was due under the head 'Schools Savings Bank.'

Branches of the Commonwealth Savings Bank were opened in this State at the beginning of 1913. On June 30, 1927, 2,728,867*l.* stood to the credit of 83,686 depositors.

TASMANIA.

Constitution and Government.

Abel Jans Tasman discovered Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) on November 24, 1642. The island became a British settlement in 1803 as a dependency of New South Wales; in 1825 its connection with New South Wales was terminated; in 1851 a partially elective Legislative Council was established, and in 1856 responsible government came into operation. On January 1, 1901, Tasmania was federated with the other Australian States into the Commonwealth of Australia.

Parliament consists of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The Council has 18 members, elected on a property qualification of 10*l*. freehold or 80*l*. a year leasehold. Certain professional men and all 'returned soldiers' are also electors. Members sit for 6 years, and retire in rotation. There is no power to dissolve the Council. The House of Assembly has 30 members, elected for 3 years by adults with six months' residence in the State. Members of both Houses are paid 300*l*. a year. Women received the right to vote in 1903. Proportional representation was adopted in 1907, the method being the single transferable vote in 6-member constituencies. By-elections are superseded (from 1919) by a recount of the votes at the preceding General Election. At the election in 1925 for the House of Assembly 16 Labour and 14 Nationalist members were returned.

Governor.—Sir James O'Grady, K.C.M.G. (Oct., 1924). Salary, 2,750*l*.

Chief Justice.—Hon. Sir H. Nicholls, K.C.M.G.

The Governor is aided in the exercise of the executive by a Cabinet of responsible ministers, as follows :—

Premier and Treasurer and Minister for Mines.—Hon. J. A. Lyons.

Chief Secretary and Minister of Railways.—Hon. James A. Guy.

Attorney General and Minister of Education.—Hon. G. G. Becker.

Minister of Lands and Works and Agriculture.—Hon. James Belton.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Hon. Andrew Lawson and Hon. P. Kelly.

Each of the ministers has a salary of 950*l*. per annum. The Premier has an additional 200*l*. a year. A minister must have a seat in one of the two Houses.

Agent-General in London.—Lt.-Col. R. E. Snowden, Australia House, Strand, London, W.C. 2.

Official Secretary.—H. W. Ely.

Area and Population.

Area, with Macquarie (170 square miles), 26,215 square miles or about 16,778,000 acres, of which 15,571,500 acres form the area of Tasmania Proper, the rest constituting that of a number of small islands, in two main groups, the north-east and north-west.

The population has increased as follows (census returns about April 1) :—

Year	Population	Increase per Ct. per Annum	Year	Population	Increase per Ct. per Annum
1861	89,977	2·44	1901	172,475	1·64
1871	99,328	1·13	1911	191,211	1·04
1881	115,705	1·38	1921	213,780	1·12

In 1921 there were 107,743 males and 106,037 females. The average density is 8.15 persons to a square mile. Of the total population in 1921, 5.96 per cent. were natives of the British Isles, 0.44 per cent. natives of other European countries, and 92.44 per cent. natives of the Commonwealth and New Zealand. There were 371 Hindus, 234 Chinese, and 106 other coloured Asiatics. The pure aboriginal is extinct.

The births, deaths, and marriages for five years were as follows:—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of Births
1922	5,817	1,674	1,997	3,820
1923	5,657	1,592	2,137	3,520
1924	5,883	1,529	2,123	3,260
1925	5,218	1,504	1,996	3,222
1926	4,988	1,435	1,912	3,076

Population of the capital, Hobart, and suburbs (March 31, 1927), 52,100, of Launceston and suburbs, 27,000.

Religion

In 1921, belonging to the Church of England, 112,222; Roman Catholics, 83,106; Catholics (undefined), 2,359; Methodists, 27,171; Presbyterians, 14,796; Baptists, 5,832; Congregationalists, 4,543.

Instruction.

Primary education is free and secular, and compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14. Nine-tenths of the primary teaching is at State schools. The cost of primary education to the State in 1925 was 8*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.* per head of average attendance, exclusive of buildings, which cost annually about 5*s.* per head. Secondary education is about equally divided between the new State High Schools and the older endowed schools. The 5 State High Schools in 1925 had an average attendance of 1,001, at a cost of 16*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.* per head, exclusive of buildings.

There are 4 Technical Schools, and 3 junior Technical Schools, with a total enrolment of 1,450.

The University of Tasmania, established 1890, had 280 students taking courses for degrees in 1926. University expenditure in 1926 (exclusive of capital expenditure) was about 18,500*l.* In 1926, 11 Tutorial Classes were provided by the University at different centres for the Workers' Educational Association.

Justice and Crime.

There are a Supreme Court, courts of petty sessions and general sessions, the latter presided over by a stipendiary magistrate, assisted by justices of the peace. The Supreme Court is both a court of first instance and a Court of Appeal in all jurisdiction, civil and criminal. The State is also divided into four districts with local civil courts presided over by Commissioners who are also police magistrates, and petty sessions have all the powers of two justices of the peace. Petty offences and a limited number of civil claims are dealt with, in petty sessions and in general sessions by justices of the peace. During the year 1925, 6,415 persons were summarily convicted, and 95 persons were committed for trial. The total police force on June 30, 1926, was 240. There was 1 gaol, with 94 male inmates, at the end of June, 1926.

Old Age Pensions.

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are paid by the Commonwealth Government. The number of pensioners in Tasmania on June 30, 1926, was: Old Age, 6,903; Invalid, 2,242; War, 11,133.

Revenue and Expenditure.

The revenue is derived chiefly from taxation (income, land, death duties and taxation of betting), and from the rental and sale of Crown lands. The customs and excise duties are in the hands of the Commonwealth, and an amount equal to 25s. per head of population is returned to the State, together with an additional special grant.

The public debt of Tasmania amounted, June 30, 1927, to 24,303,068*l.*, of which 29 per cent. has been spent on railways, 14 per cent. on hydro-electric works, and 24 per cent. on roads and bridges.

State taxation amounted to 5*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.* per head, of which income tax provides 2*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* (including tax on lottery prizes formerly collected by the Commonwealth Government), land tax 10*s.* 8*d.*, death duties 14*s.* 1*d.* Land and income taxes and death duties are also collected by the Commonwealth, averaging 2*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* per head, and customs and excise of 6*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* in 1925-26 per head.

Defence.

For defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Production and Industry.

The total area of Tasmania is 16,778,000 acres, including 1,206,500 acres islands and lakes. Unalienated land, chiefly rugged mountain country, much of it mineral-bearing, amounts to about 10,500,000 acres. Of this unalienated land about 2,700,000 acres are leased.

The net value in 1925-26 of agricultural and pastoral products was 4,274,000*l.*, of manufactures, 3,378,000*l.* (output less raw material, fuel, etc.), and of mining products, 1926, 1,475,000*l.*

Agricultural production and yield per acre:—

Manufactures.—The two important manufactures for export are metal extraction and fruit-preserving. The electrolytic-zinc works at Risdon near Hobart are now using large quantities of ore imported from Broken Hill, and also considerable quantities of Tasmanian West Coast ores. The output in 1925-26 was 46,588 tons of zinc, valued at 1,668,813*l.*, with considerable quantities of cadmium and other by-products. Other manufactures that have an output beyond local requirements are wool and confectionery. The carbide works at North-West Bay are able to supply the needs of all Australia.

Commerce, Shipping, &c.

Principal imports, 1925-26: Food, drink and tobacco, 2,477,441*l.*; drapery, clothing and textiles, 1,529,254*l.*; metals and metal manufactures, 1,577,636*l.*; ores and concentrates, 607,239*l.* Total imports, 8,450,793*l.* Principal exports, 1925-26: Butter and cheese, 116,659*l.*; fruit, fresh, 651,581*l.*; fruit, dried, preserved or pulped, 357,742*l.*; hops, 162,969*l.*; jams and jellies, 398,717*l.*; oats and chaff, 81,828*l.*; peas, 84,015*l.*; potatoes, 598,678*l.*; wool, 815,676*l.*; hides and skins, 398,517*l.*; zinc bars and blocks, 1,589,197*l.*; timber, 545,804*l.* Total exports, 8,710,855*l.*

Direct oversea imports and exports are about 19 per cent. and 30 per cent. respectively of total imports and exports.

In 1925-26, Hobart did 55 per cent. of the total trade, Launceston 28 per cent., Burnie and Devonport each about 6 per cent.

The registered shipping in 1926 consisted of 120 sailing vessels of 3,981 tons, and 61 steamers of 9,222 tons. Total, 183 vessels, 13,766 tons.

For shipping, railways, posts and telegraphs, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Savings Banks.

The number of depositors in Savings Banks, including the Commonwealth Savings Bank, 1926, was 136,309, and the amount on deposit 4,768,086*l.*

THE NORTHERN TERRITORY OF AUSTRALIA.

Government.

The Northern Territory, after forming part of New South Wales, was annexed in 1863 to South Australia, and in 1901 entered the Commonwealth as a corporate part of South Australia. The Commonwealth Constitution Act of 1900 made provision for the surrender to the Commonwealth of any territory by any State, and under this provision an agreement was entered into on December 7, 1907, for the transfer of the Northern Territory to the Commonwealth, and it formally passed under the control of the Commonwealth Government on January 1, 1911.

On the 1st March, 1927, the Northern Territory was divided for administrative purposes into two Territories, North Australia and Central Australia, the dividing line between the two Territories being the twentieth parallel of south latitude. Each Territory is under a Government Resident, with headquarters at Darwin and Alice Springs respectively. This division was effected under the authority of the Northern Australia Act, 1926, which also provides for the appointment of a North Australia Commission, the powers of which extend to matters relating to the development of North Australia, and also to the administration of Crown Lands throughout North Australia and Central Australia. The Act further provides for the appointment of Advisory Councils for North Australia and Central Australia, each Council to consist of the Government Resident and four members (two to be elected by the people of the Territory, and two to be appointed by the Minister of State for Home and Territories). It is the function of each Council to advise the Government Resident in relation to any matter affecting the Territory under his control, including advice as to the making of new Ordinances or the repeal or amendment of existing Ordinances (other than Ordinances relating to the administration of Crown Lands), but not including any matter relating to the powers of the Commission or any matter under the control of the Commission.

North Australia Commission.—J. Horsburgh (Chairman), G. A. Holler, and W. R. Easton.

Government Resident (North Australia).—R. H. Weddell.

Government Resident (Central Australia).—J. O. Carwood.

Area and Population.

The Northern Territory (North Australia and Central Australia) is bounded by the 26th parallel of south latitude, and the 129th and 138th degrees of east longitude. Its area is 523,620 square miles. The area alienated on June 30, 1926, amounted to 745 square miles absolutely; 234,564 were held under leases and licences; and the remainder, 288,311 square miles, was unoccupied. The coast line is about 1,040 miles in length. The Territory possesses many fine rivers and several good harbours, the principal being Port Darwin. The greater part of the interior consists of a tableland rising gradually from the coast to a height of about 1,700 feet. On this tableland there are large areas of excellent pasturage. The southern part of the territory is generally sandy with a small rainfall, but it can be watered by means of sub-artesian bores. The climate is tropical, but varies considerably over the whole Territory. The proximity of the sea in the north keeps it fairly equable in the coastal region, but further south the climate is of a continental type, showing a great variation between the hottest and coldest months.

Population.—The population, excluding aborigines, has varied as follows:—

Year	Europeans	Others	Totals
1881	670	2,781	3,451
1901	1,055	3,756	4,811
1911 (Census)	1,418	1,892	3,310
1921 (Census)	2,459	1,408	3,867
1925 (31st Dec.)	2,556	1,100	3,656
1926 (31st Dec.)	2,898	about 1,000	3,898

Of the 1921 Census total 1,046 were females. Chinese in the Territory numbered 722. The aborigines are estimated to number about 20,000.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for 6 years were as follows:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1920-21	73,858	353,557	1923-24	59,371	303,133
1921-22	71,239	289,062	1924-25	81,812	339,299
1922-23	55,952	283,084	1925-26	97,298	382,268

The chief sources of revenue for the year ending June 30, 1926, were Customs and Excise, 6,628*l.*; Railways, 38,879*l.*; and Postal revenue, 8,752*l.* The chief items of expenditure (excluding interest, loans, &c.) were administrative staff, 69.080*l.*, and railways, 43,625*l.* The public debt, including Port Augusta-Oodnadatta Railway Loans, on June 30, 1926, was 2,193,496*l.*

Production and Industry.

The soils of the Territory differ greatly, but it is stated that most products suitable to the tropical and semi-tropical zones can be grown successfully. At present, however, agriculture is insignificant. In most parts the natural grasses are extremely rich in nutriment, and provide food for cattle, horses, sheep, and other stock. The numbers of stock on December 31, 1925, were:— Cattle, 970,842; horses, 46,380; goats, 21,859; pigs, 1,382; sheep, 8,030; camels, 452.

The Territory is rich in mineral resources, though these are very little developed. The aggregate value of the minerals produced to June 30, 1926, was 3,419,505*l.* Production in 1924-25 and in 1925-26 was as follows:—

—	1924-25	1925-26	—	1924-25	1925-26
	£	£		£	£
Gold . . .	1,939	598	Mica . . .	2,335	2,132
Tin Ore . .	15,966	15,852	Other Minerals .	960	447
Copper Ore .	15	60	Total .	21,715	19,084

Commerce.

The overseas imports and exports are given as follows:—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1918	20,977	67,911	1923-24	14,432	8,000
1921-22	12,115	5,036	1924-25	20,636	41,944

TERRITORIES OF THE AUSTRALIAN COMMONWEALTH : TERRITORY OF PAPUA (BRITISH NEW GUINEA).

This possession is the south-eastern part of the island of New Guinea, with the islands of the d'Entrecasteaux and Louisiade groups and all islands between 8° and 12° S. latitude, and 141° and 155° E. longitude. Area 90,540 square miles, of which about 87,786 are on the mainland of New Guinea, and 2,754 on the islands above mentioned. On June 30, 1927, the population was as follows :—European, 1,366; Papuans (estimated), 275,000. (For the part of New Guinea lately possessed by Germany and now administered by Australia, see below).

To prevent that portion of the island of New Guinea not claimed by Holland from passing into the hands of a foreign power, the Government of Queensland annexed it in 1883. This step was not sanctioned by the Imperial Government, but on November 6, 1884, a British Protectorate was proclaimed over the Southern portion of the Eastern half of New Guinea, and in 1887 Queensland, New South Wales and Victoria undertook to defray the cost of administration, and the territory was annexed to the Crown the following year. The Federal Government took over the control in 1901; the political transfer was completed by the Papua Act of the Federal Parliament in November, 1905, and on September 1, 1906, a proclamation was issued by the Governor General of Australia declaring that British New Guinea was to be known henceforth as the Territory of Papua. There is an executive council composed of 8 official members and 1 non-official member, and a legislative council composed of the executive councillors and 5 non-official members, 4 being nominated by the Lieutenant-Governor and appointed by the Governor-General of Australia, and the fifth being nominated by the Lieutenant-Governor of Papua as representing the interests of the Christian Missions of the Territory.

Lieut.-Governor and Judge.—Sir J. H. P. Murray, K.C.M.G.

Government Secretary.—Herbert William Champion.

Tribes have in large areas settled down to peaceful habits. Five missionary bodies are at work; many hundreds of natives are being taught by these bodies. 186,966 acres of land have been leased, chiefly by planters, the principal cultures being coconuts (50,506 acres at December 31, 1925), rubber (7,728 acres), sisal hemp (3,560 acres). On December 31, 1925, there were 62,981 acres of plantations. A preferential tariff is granted by the Commonwealth on certain raw material from Papua, and a bonus for 10 years on other products imported into Australia. Freehold alienation is prohibited, but leases may be obtained at low rentals for long terms. Indigenous sago is plentiful in the western portion of the Territory, and there are considerable numbers of native-owned coconut trees. A regulation, which is strictly enforced, requires that each native shall plant coconut trees or other economic trees or plants if his land is suitable, or the natives may, in lieu of paying a tax in money, establish communal plantations under the direction of European instructors.

There are four ports of entry—Port Moresby, Samarai, Woodlark Island and Daru.

There are 8 magisterial districts, each in charge of a resident magistrate. There are also 20 assistant resident magistrates, and 9 patrol officers. There is a Central Court at Port Moresby, but it holds sittings wherever and whenever necessary. For native government some simple regulations have been passed. There were (1927) 1,077 village policemen; armed constabulary, 284 (exclusive of Europeans who are officers of armed constabulary).

Throughout the Territory there are numerous schools belonging to the various Christian missions; the attendance of native children is compulsory if English is taught. There is a tax not exceeding 10s. per head on indentured native labourers, and not exceeding 20s. per head on other natives. After expenses of collection are paid the balance is devoted, first, to native education, and, secondly, to other purposes having for their object the direct benefit of the natives. The education is chiefly undertaken by the missions aided by grants from the taxation fund. 7,142*l.* was spent on education in 1926–7. The expenses of the plantation instructors to develop native agriculture are borne by the Education Fund, 2887*l.* being expended in 1926–27.

A Government Anthropologist is supported from this fund with a view to assisting the Government to understand the native point of view. A Family Bonus is paid to native mothers of four or more children under 16 years of age at the rate of 5*s.* for four and 1*s.* for each child over the four. In 1926–27, 5,336*l.* was spent from the fund on medical work among the natives, besides 1,871*l.* on native hospital buildings.

Years ended 30 June	Local Revenue	Expenditure	Imports	Exports	Tonnage entered and cleared
	£	£	£	£	Tons
1923	63,124	123,691	315,423	179,452	77,676
1924	77,750	131,640	354,965	239,408	68,170
1925	82,908	143,831	459,080	367,629	78,613
1926	116,387	157,203	470,774	685,896	129,553
1927	111,508	167,728	455,904	454,462	226,948

Revenue is mainly from customs duties. An annual subsidy of 50,000*l.* is given by the Australian Government. In addition, 27,500*l.* has been loaned to the Territory for the establishment of Government plantations, which is being repaid from profits on the plantations. In 1926–27 revenue includes receipts from sale of produce of Government plantations, and expenditure includes the cost of upkeep.

Gold, silver, copper and osmiridium are the only minerals exported. There are 9 proclaimed mineral fields, seven of which are gold fields, and 2 copper. Mining is one of the most important industries. Gold is obtained in the Louisiade Islands, on the mainland, and on Woodlark Island. A large area near Port Moresby with promising copper deposits has been proclaimed a mineral field, and this is being vigorously developed. A railway from the field to the coast has been constructed and smelters have been erected. Indications of petroleum have been found over an area of 1,000 sq. miles, and boring by the Anglo-Persian Oil Company is still proceeding on behalf of the Australian Government. Prospecting Licences have also been issued to a number of private companies. Copper ore exports in 1926-27, 531 tons of copper matte, and 51 tons of blister copper, valued at 35,799*l*. In 1926-27 the gold output was valued at 26,124*l*. The trade is principally with Queensland and New South Wales. The chief imports are food-stuffs, tobacco, drapery and hardware; exports 1926-27, copra (9,542 tons, 186,837*l*.); gold (8,806 ozs., 29,115*l*.); osmiridium (26 ozs., 430*l*.); rubber (761 tons, 156,274*l*.). Number of horses (1925), 718; cattle, 5,975; mules, 168.

A steamer trades between Sydney and Port Moresby every month, and small coastal vessels run at frequent intervals between the various inter-territorial ports. Ocean-going shipping entered and cleared 1926-27, 226,948 tons. There are wireless telegraph stations at Port Moresby, Samarai, Popo, and Daru.

There are branches of the Bank of New South Wales at Port Moresby and Samarai. Commonwealth Government notes are legal tender. The currency and its legal tender are the same as in the United Kingdom and Australia.

NEW ZEALAND.

New Zealand was first discovered in 1642 by Tasman, and the coast was explored by Captain Cook in 1769, and in subsequent years. It became a resort for whalers and traders, chiefly from Australia. In 1840 the native chiefs ceded the sovereignty to the British Crown and the islands became a British Colony.

The aborigines, called Maoris, are a branch of the Polynesian race; they are divided into about twenty clans, analogous to those of the Scottish Highlands. Between 1845 and 1848, and again between 1860 and 1870, about half of these clans were in revolt against British rule, but peace was permanently established in 1871.

Government and Constitution.

By Order in Council, the designation of the Colony of New Zealand was changed to the Dominion of New Zealand, on and from September 26, 1907. The present form of government was established by Statute 15 & 16 Vict., cap. 72, passed in 1852. The Colony was divided into six provinces, now nine. By an Act of the Colonial Legislature, 39 Vict., No. xxi., passed in 1875, the provincial system of government was abolished, and the powers previously exercised by superintendents and provincial officers were exercised by the Governor (Governor-General from June 1917), or by local boards. The legislative power is vested in the Governor-General and a 'General Assembly' consisting of two Chambers—a Legislative Council and a House of Representatives. The Governor-General has the power of assenting to or withholding consent from bills, or he may reserve them for His Majesty's pleasure. He summons, prorogues, and dissolves the Parliament. He can send drafts of bills to either House for consideration, but in case of appropriations of public money must first recommend the House of Representatives to make provision accordingly before any appropriations can become law. He can return bills for amendment to either House.

The Legislative Council consists (September, 1927) of forty-one members, who are paid at the rate of 315*l.* per annum. Members hold their seats for seven years only, unless reappointed. Provision has been made for the Legislative Council to be made elective at a date to be fixed by Proclamation. Twenty-four members are to be elected at the first election and 40 at subsequent elections. Three Maori members may be appointed by the Governor-General. Present sitting members hold office till the end of the term of their appointment.

The House of Representatives consists of eighty members, including four Maoris, elected by the people for three years. They are paid at the rate of 450*l.* per annum. Every man or woman registered as an elector is eligible as a member of the House of Representatives. For European representation every adult person (of either sex), if resident one year in the Dominion and three months in an electoral district, is required to be registered an elector for such Electoral District. No person may be registered on more than one electoral roll. Every adult Maori resident in any of the four Maori electoral districts can vote, provided he (or she) be not registered on any European roll. Registration is not required in Native districts.

The result of the general election of November 1925 was: Reform Party, 55; Liberals and Independent Liberals, 11; Labour Party, 13; Independent, 1.

Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief.—His Excellency General Sir Charles Fergusson, Bt., LL.D., G.C.M.G., K.C.B., D.S.O., M.V.O. Salary 5,000*l.*, and 2,500*l.* allowances.

The Cabinet (September, 1927) is as follows:—

Prime Minister, Minister of Railways, Native Affairs, in Charge of Public Trust, Native Trust and Scientific and Industrial Research Departments.—Rt. Hon. J. G. Coates, P.C., M.C.

Member of the Executive Council without Portfolio and Leader of the Legislative Council.—Rt. Hon. Sir F. H. D. Bell, P.C., G.C.M.G., K.C.

Minister of Finance, Minister of Stamp Duties, Minister of Customs, Minister in Charge of Land and Income Tax and State Advances Departments.—Hon. W. D. Stewart.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government New Zealand is divided into counties and boroughs. The counties are subdivided into ridings. County councils are empowered to constitute road districts on petition being made. Besides the road districts, which are very numerous, there are town, drainage, electric supply, water supply, river, tramway, local railway, hospital, and harbour districts.

The ratepayers in the road districts of a county are qualified as electors for the purposes of the county council, and the members of each road board are elected by the ratepayers of the district.

Area and Population.

There are two principal islands, the North and South Islands, besides Stewart Island, and small outlying islands, including (since 1901) the Cook and some other islands in the Pacific Ocean. The group is 1,000 miles long, and 180 miles across at the broadest part; coast line 3,000 miles. New Zealand is about 1,200 miles east of Australia. Area, excluding annexed islands, 103,568 square miles. North Island, 44,131 square miles, South Island 58,120, Stewart Island 662 square miles, Chatham Islands 372 square miles, outlying islands 284 square miles. Acreage 66,890,262 acres, exclusive of the Cook and other islands (179,200 acres), and up to March, 1927, 21,214,818 acres had been alienated, and 14,597,746 acres reserved and set apart by the State for special purposes. The area of Native lands at March 31, 1927, was 5,798,093 acres. Population at the Census of April 20, 1926, was 1,344,469, exclusive of Maoris, 63,670, and residents of Cook and other annexed islands, 13,877, of the Tokelau Islands,

1,033, and of Western Samoa (mandated territory), 40,229. Census population, exclusive of aborigines :—

Instruction.

The University of New Zealand consists of the Otago University at Dunedin, with 50 professors and lecturers ; the Canterbury University College at Christchurch, with 32 professors and lecturers ; the Auckland University College, with 33 professors and lecturers ; and the Victoria University College at Wellington, with 29 professors and lecturers ; students attending lectures in the four constituent colleges (1926), 4,653. They are all endowed with lands. The Canterbury Agricultural College is a recognised school of agriculture.

At the end of 1926 there were 41 incorporated or endowed secondary schools, with 568 (excluding part-time) teachers and 13,651 pupils (excluding 460 in lower departments). Of the total income more than half is from endowments and Government payments. There are also 77 District High Schools with 149 teachers and 3,162 scholars. Two Junior High Schools with 137 pupils and 8 Day Technical Schools with 1,096 pupils. Children receiving secondary instruction at Technical High Schools (fourteen) numbered 5,700 in 1926. Of private secondary schools there were 35 registered, with 2,794 pupils. Twelve secondary schools for Maoris had 570 pupils.

For primary schools there is an Education Department (which also exercises certain functions in regard to both university and secondary schools). There are 9 Local Education Boards. At the end of 1926 there were 2,601 public primary schools, 6,883 teachers (including 700 probationers), 219,969 scholars on the rolls; average attendance (1926), 194,097. Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14. The instruction given at the public schools is secular only, and for the ordinary standard course entirely free. Where there are no schools classes may be formed in the public school for extra subjects, for which special subsidies are given.

There are 7 schools of mines; 4 normal schools; 5 central schools of art; 13 industrial schools; a school for the deaf; an institute for the blind (at Auckland); special schools for mentally backward boys in Otago and Nelson; and a similar school for girls at Richmond, Nelson. There were also, at the end of 1926, 301 registered primary private schools, with 26,778 pupils.

There were 130 Native village schools, with 282 teachers and 6,591 scholars, including 835 Europeans. Total net expenditure by the State on Native schools in 1926-27 was 80,709*l*. Total expenditure out of public funds in 1926-27 upon education of all kinds 3,910,241*l*.

Justice and Crime.

There are eight supreme court judges, and thirty-three stipendiary magistrates. There are numerous magistrates' courts and justices of the peace.

In 1926 there were 46,205 summary convictions, and 1,562 convictions in supreme courts, including 984 cases sent up from lower courts for sentence. At the end of 1926 the gaols contained 1,435 prisoners.

Pauperism, Pensions, etc.

The Dominion is divided into districts, with elective boards for the administration of the public hospitals and charitable relief. The Government subsidises bequests and voluntary contributions at the rate of 20*s*. in the pound; and contributions by local authorities, according to a sliding scale, ranging from 1*s*. in the pound to 2*s*. in the pound, and averaging throughout the Dominion 20*s*. in the pound. The apportionments are made according to the value of rateable property within the district. The total expenditure on Charitable Aid during the year ended March 31, 1926, was 191,483*l*. During 1926 the benevolent and orphan asylums accommodated 10,456 inmates; and 3,908 children were wholly or partly maintained by the State in industrial schools and other institutions in 1926.

An Act, passed in 1898 and amended on several occasions since, provided for old-age pensions. Every person, not an alien or an Asiatic, who fulfils certain conditions is entitled to a pension of 39*l*. a year, with an additional 6*l*. 10*s*. where the pensioner has no income other than his pension. The joint annual income of a married couple in receipt of pensions must not exceed 143*l*. (including pensions). Pensions are also granted to widows, to miners incapacitated as a result of miners' phthisis, to veterans of the Maori war, and to certain classes of blind persons. In addition are those pensions granted in respect of the recent war.

Defence.

In 1909 New Zealand passed a Defence Act, amended 1910 and 1920, which provided for the gradual military training of every male New Zealander between the ages of 12 and 25, with further service in the Reserve up to age of 30. Under this Act a boy serves from 12 to 14 as a junior cadet, from 14 to 18 as a senior cadet, from 18 to 25 he becomes a soldier in the Territorial Force, and from 25 to 30 he serves in the Reserve. Senior cadets do 50 drills and a musketry course annually. The soldier in the Territorial Force does 30 drills, 6 whole-day parades, and 7 days continuous annual training. The strength of the Permanent Force in June, 1927, was 111 officers and 413 other ranks, and of the Territorial Force (limited by law to 30,000,) 1,238 officers and 21,245 other ranks. The senior cadets numbered 34,159.

The New Zealand military forces are under a general officer commanding, who has at his disposal a general headquarters divided into the general staff and administrative services and departments. New Zealand is organised into 3 military commands, the Northern, Central, and Southern, each command being under an officer commanding. Each command furnishes 1 mounted rifle brigade, 1 field artillery brigade, and 1 infantry brigade, and has attached to it a varying number of coast and pack artillery batteries, and certain depots. The forces are so organised as to be rapidly mobilised as a complete division and a mounted division.

The Air Force consists of 16 machines. The personnel is 120, including 19 permanent officers and men.

The Naval Defence Act, 1920, provided for the establishment of a New Zealand Naval Force, to be raised and maintained by voluntary enlistment only, enlistment being for a prescribed period not less than two years. In time of war the Naval Force (including vessels acquired for defence purposes) is at the disposal of the British Government. The Naval force consists of training ship Philomel (ex-cruiser of 2,500 tons), the light cruisers Dunedin and Diomedé, which were loaned free of charge by the Imperial Government, and the sloops Laburnum and Veronica. In addition there are the oil-tank vessel Nucula and the trawler Wakakuru. The establishment of a New Zealand Royal Naval Reserve is also provided for under the Act. The Diomedé and Dunedin are to be relieved by new cruisers of the York type (8,400 tons), involving the increase of the annual maintenance charge from 460,000*l.* to about 600,000*l.*

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Two-thirds of the surface of New Zealand is suitable for agriculture and grazing. About 12,500,000 acres are still under forest. The total area under cultivation (including 16,615,960 acres in sown grasses and 135,355 in fallow) in 1926 was 18,582,995 acres. The area of Crown lands (other than reserves) leased under various tenures at March 31, 1927, was 18,175,179 acres, and 2,721,488 acres were available for future disposal.

The largest freehold estates are held in the South Island. The extent of occupied holdings of or over one acre in 1926 (exclusive of holdings within borough boundaries) was as follows:—

Sizes of Holdings		Number of Holdings	Acres	Sizes of Holdings		Number of Holdings	Acres

Commerce.

In 1926 the imports duty-free amounted to 22,545,492*l.*; subject to duty, 27,344,071*l.*; total 49,889,563*l.*

Years	Total Imports	Exports of Domestic Produce	Exports of other Produce	Total Exports
	£	£	£	£
1922	35,012,561	41,099,148	1,027,101	42,726,249

1926	49,889,563	44,389,318	936,257	45,275,575

The value of imports is taken as the current domestic value in the country exporting same, plus a uniform addition of ten per cent. for freight, &c. For exports the 'free-on-board in New Zealand' value is given; but, as regards the main items, the Collector of Customs examines carefully the amounts stated and compares them with current price lists, to prevent any over-estimate. Beginning with 1914 the country of origin of imports is obtained, as well as country of shipment. The country of shipment is obtained in cases of exports, but this may or may not be the country of ultimate destination. Very little cargo in transitu passes through New Zealand.

The principal imports and exports in 1926 are given as follows:—

Attached to New Zealand are the following islands:

Auckland Islands, 50° 31' S., 166° 19' E., 200 miles S. of Stewart Island. Area of largest about 330 square miles. Uninhabited. The New Zealand Government maintains a depôt of provisions and clothing for the use of shipwrecked mariners on the largest island of the group.

Chatham Islands, 43° 50' S., 177° W., 536 miles E. of New Zealand. Area 375 square miles; population (April, 1926) 562 (268 Europeans and 294 Maoris and Morioris).

The Cook and other South Pacific Islands were annexed to New Zealand in June, 1901. They lie between 8° and 23° S. lat., 157° and 170° W long. The names of the islands with their populations (1926) are as follows:—

Cook Islands—	Population		Population
Rarotonga . . .	3,936	Palmerston Is. . .	97
Mangaia . . .	1,249	Penrhyn (Tongareva) . .	395
Atiu . . .	933	Manahiki . . .	416

Mitiaro . . .	238	Suwarrow . . .	—
Hervey Islands . .	23	Niue (Savage Is.) . .	3,795
		Total . . .	13,877

Total area of the Cook and other islands about 280 square miles.

Rarotonga is 20 miles in circumference; Atiu, 20 miles; Aitutaki, 21 miles; Niue (or Savage Island), 40 miles. Laws for the Cook Islands have been made since 1890 by a general Legislature, and are administered by an Executive Council, of which the Arikis, or native chiefs, are members. At Rarotonga and Niue there are (New Zealand) Resident Commissioners, whose approval is required for all enactments. The customs tariff of New Zealand is enforced. In 1915 an Act was passed by the New Zealand Parliament consolidating the laws relating to the Islands, and providing for the appointment of a member of the Executive Council of New Zealand as Minister of the Cook Islands. The Minister is charged with the administration of the Islands. The Act provides for the constitution of Island Councils, lower and higher Courts of Justice, and native land court, as well as for the establishment of public schools, &c. In 1926 the numbers of births, marriages, and deaths were respectively 414, 139, and 267. Education: there are 19 schools in the group, with roll number of 2,195 scholars. Revenue, financial year 1926–27, 23,794*l.*; expenditure, 29,604*l.* The trade for 1926 was:—Imports, 152,036*l.*, including 109,636*l.* from New Zealand and 13,935*l.* from United States; exports 156,243*l.*, including 119,407*l.* to New Zealand, 23,794*l.* to United States of America. Chief exports, 1926:—Bananas, 16,888*l.*; oranges, 57,134*l.*; tomatoes, 26,881*l.*; copra, 40,424*l.*; shell, 10,600*l.*; hats, 1,083*l.*, and fancy baskets, 1,079*l.* A wireless station is maintained at Rarotonga, with sub-stations at Aitutaki Atiu, Mangaia and Niue.

Kermadec Islands, 36° S., 178° 30' W., 600 miles N.N.E. of New Zealand. Area 15 square miles. Now uninhabited. The largest of the group is Raoul or Sunday Island, 20 miles in circuit; Macaulay Island is 3 miles in circuit.

Ross Dependency.—The coasts of the Ross Sea, with the adjacent islands and territories, between 160° East longitude and 150° West longitude, and south of the 60th degree of latitude, were proclaimed a British Settlement and placed under the jurisdiction of the Governor-General of New Zealand by Order-in-Council of 30th July, 1923.

Union Islands (Tokelan).—These Islands, formerly part of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony, have been transferred to the jurisdiction of New Zealand, February 11, 1926, and are administered by the Administrator of Western Samoa. They lie between 8° 30' and 11° S. lat., and 171° and 172° W. long. (population 1926, 1,033), and comprise five clusters of islets, the principal of which are Fakaofo or Bowditch, Nukunono or Duke of Clarence, Atafu or Duke of York; area of group, 7 square miles.

Small uninhabited outlying islands within the boundaries of New Zealand are: Campbell Island, the Three Kings Islands, the Antipodes Islands, the Bounty Islands, and the Snares Islands.

FIJI.

Constitution and Government

The Fiji Islands were discovered by Tasman in 1643 and visited by Captain Cook in 1769. The sovereignty was ceded to Great Britain on October 10, 1874. The government is administered by a Governor appointed by the Crown, assisted by an Executive Council consisting of 6 members. Laws are passed by the Legislative Council, of which the Governor is president. It comprises twelve nominated members (including one Indian member), seven members elected by persons of European descent, and two nominated Fijian members.

Governor of Fiji and High Commissioner for the Western Pacific.—Sir Eyre Hutson, K.C.M.G. (appointed, 1925). Salary 3,000*l.* as Governor of Fiji, and 1,200*l.* as High Commissioner for the Western Pacific.

There is a constabulary consisting of Europeans, Fijians and Indians, and a Defence Force (Europeans, half-castes, and Fijians).

For the purposes of native government the colony is divided into 19 provinces, in 6 of which a superior native chief exercises, under the title of Roko Tui, a form of rule which recognises to a large degree the principles of native administration by which the people formerly governed themselves. In thirteen of the provinces there are European commissioners; 186 native officials are employed in subordinate administrative capacities. There are also 30 native stipendiary magistrates associated with 17 District Commissioners in the administration of justice. A European commissioner, who is generally Government medical officer, resides in Rotuma. In several cases the District Medical Officer is also the District Commissioner.

Area and Population.

Fiji comprises a group of about 250 islands (about 80 inhabited) lying between 15° and 22° south latitudes and 177° east and 178° west longitude. The largest is Viti Levu, area 4,053 square miles; next is Vanua Levu, area 2,130 square miles. The island of Rotuma, between 12° and 15° of south latitude, and 175° and 180° east longitude, was added to the colony in 1880. Total area, including Rotuma, 7,083 square miles.

At the 31st December, 1926, the population of the Colony, including Rotuma, was estimated at 171,644; Europeans, 4,184 (2,376 males, 1,808 females); Fijians, 89,401 (46,208 males, 43,193 females); Indians, 68,733 (41,460 males, 27,273 females); Chinese, 987 (909 males, 78 females); half-castes, 3,071 (1,591 males, 1,480 females); others, 5,268 (3,362 males, 1,906 females).

Among Europeans the birth-rate in 1926 was 18·16 per 1000, and deaths 9·32; among Fijians, birth-rate, 33·95, death-rate, 23·09; among Indians, birth-rate, 32·65, death-rate, 8·26; others, birth-rate, 27·43, death-rate, 13·70; marriages, 5·83 of the total population.

Suva, the capital, is on the south coast of Viti Levu: European population (census of April 24, 1921), 1,443, suburbs, 298, total, 1,741.

Religion and Instruction.

Attending at Methodist native churches in 1924, 79,634; Roman Catholic Mission, 11,564. The Methodist Mission comprises 20 European missionaries, 20 European mission sisters, 110 native ministers, 193 catechists, 757 teachers, and 3,851 local preachers, 4,422 class leaders, with 692 churches, and 394 other preaching places. The Roman Catholic Mission has 30 European ministers and 287 native teachers, 50 European sisters, 57 churches and chapels, 3 native training institutions.

In 1926 there were two Government grammar schools for European children at Suva, one for boys and one for girls, with a total roll number of 248. In Levuka there is a Government school for both boys and girls, at which 156 were on the roll in 1926: and another at Rarawai with a roll number of 45. Besides these the Roman Catholic Mission has three schools for Europeans. The Queen Victoria School (a Government school), and six provincial schools (supported by Government), are boarding schools for Fijian boys. There were 533 pupils in 1926. There is one Government Indian school with a roll number in 1926 of 36. The Government paid grants-in-aid in 1926 to 29 assisted primary schools and 25 assisted vernacular schools, with 4,592 pupils. Expenditure on education in 1926 was 31,584*l*.

Shipping and Communications.

During 1926 the number of merchant vessels entered at the ports of entry was 174 steamers of 675,001 tons, and 16 sailing vessels of 7,696 tons. Total tonnage entered and cleared in 1926, 1,357,907 (British 983,402).

There is a private small-gauge railway of 120 miles from Tavua to Sigatoka.

There is telegraphic communication between Suva and Levuka, 54 miles, of which 11½ miles is by submarine cable, and an overland telephone from Suva to Lautoka, 125 miles. Wireless telegraph stations have been erected at Suva, Labasa, Taveuni and Savusavu. There is direct cable communication with Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

The Government Savings Bank had, at the end of 1926, 5,197 depositors, whose deposits amounted to 136,840*l*. The headquarters are at the General Post Office, Suva, and there are fourteen branches throughout the Colony.

The Bank of New South Wales has three branches and the Bank of New Zealand has two in the Colony. The currency in circulation consists of Government notes and English coins of pre-war fineness. The currency notes in circulation on December 31, 1926, amounted to 365,399*l*. The gold reserve in the note guarantee fund amounted to 73,096*l*, and the securities forming the investment portion of the fund to 305,118*l*.

Money, weights, and measures are the same as in the United Kingdom.

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

TONGA.

(FRIENDLY ISLANDS.)

The Tonga or Friendly Islands continued up to 1899 to be a neutral region in accordance with the Declaration of Berlin, April 6, 1886. By the Anglo-German Agreement of November 14, 1899, subsequently accepted by the United States, the Tonga Islands were left practically under the Protectorate of Great Britain, and a Protectorate was proclaimed on May 18, 1900. British and foreign nationals are subject to the jurisdiction of the Tongan courts only for offences against Tongan laws relating to customs, taxes, quarantine and local police, not recognised as offences against British law. In other respects they are subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of the High Commissioner. In 1905 the financial administration came under the supervision of the British Agent and Consul in Tonga.

Queen.—Salote, succeeded on the death of her father, George II, on April 12, 1918.

There is a Legislative Assembly which meets annually, composed of seven nobles elected by their peers, seven elected representatives of the people, and the Ministers of the Crown, numbering nine, or twenty-three members in all. The elections are held triennially.

The kingdom consists of 3 groups of islands, called respectively Tongatabu, Haapai (which are low-lying groups of coral formation), and Vavau (which is high and mountainous), together with the outlying islands of Niuaotobutu, Taofahi, and Niuafoou, and lies between 15° and 23° 30' south, and 173° and 177° west, its western boundary being the eastern boundary of Fiji. There are two active volcanoes in the group, on the Islands of Tofua and Kao. The main group was discovered by Tasman in 1643. The climate is mild and healthy, malaria being unknown. The temperature during seven months of the year, from May to November, rarely exceeds 84° F. in the shade, and seldom, even in the hottest part of summer, exceeds 90° F. Total area, approximately 385 square miles; Capital, Nukualofa; population, estimated at the end of 1926, 25,918 Tongans, 530 Europeans, 235 half-castes, and 365 other Pacific islanders. The natives are Christian, there being about 16,000 adherents of the Wesleyan Free Church of Tonga, 4,000 of the Free Church, and 3,000 Roman Catholics. The native Tongans enjoy free education, free medical attendance and dental treatment. At the end of 1926 there were 111 public primary schools, with 4,529 pupils on the roll. At Tonga College there were 8 teachers, 3 Europeans, and 5 Tongans, and 170 students on December 31, 1926. The revenue amounted in 1925-26 to 91,696*l.*, and the expenditure to 68,759*l.* Native produce consists almost entirely of copra; the export in 1926 amounted to 13,992 tons, valued at 255,156*l.*, most of which was shipped to the U.K., Continental and American ports. Total imports, 1926, 227,882*l.* The imports include drapery, flour, biscuits, fish, hardware, timber, sugar, meats; and the exports copra. The trade is with Great Britain, New Zealand, Australia and the United States of America. Steamer communication with the outside world consists of one vessel of the Union Company's Fleet which maintains a four-weekly service with New Zealand, via Fiji and Samoa, in addition to which steam and sailing vessels visit the group for shipments of copra. There is a wireless station at Nukualofa which keeps up telegraphic communication through Samoa or Fiji, and a sub-station at Vavau, which communicates only with Nukualofa.

Since May 1, 1905, British coin is legal tender and there is a Government note issue. The weights and measures are the same as in Great Britain. Accounts are kept in pounds, shillings, and pence.

High Commissioner and Consul-General for the Western Pacific.—Sir Eyre Hutson, K.C.M.G.

Agent and Consul.—J. S. Neill.

The High Commissioner of the Western Pacific, assisted by deputies, has jurisdiction, in accordance with an Order in Council of 1893, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Pacific Islanders' Protection Acts of 1872 and 1875, and to settle disputes between British subjects living in these islands. The jurisdiction of the High Commissioner extends over all the Western Pacific not within the limits of Fiji, Queensland, or New South Wales, or the jurisdiction of any civilised Power, and includes the Southern Solomon Islands, and the various small groups in Melanesia.

In the sections devoted to New South Wales and New Zealand mention is made of various annexed Pacific Islands. The following summary (omitting islands described elsewhere) gives the names and positions of islands which are unattached:—

Ducie Island, 24° 40' S. lat., 124° 48' W. long.

Pitcairn Island, 25° 5' S., 130° 5' W.; area 2 sq. m.; pop. in 1914, 140 (35 adult males, 39 adult females, 66 children). The affairs of the island are conducted by a Council of 7 members, with a President, who acts also as Chief Magistrate, and a Vice-President, who is also Government Secretary, subject to the control of the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific. In religion the islanders (descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty) are 'Seventh Day Adventists.' The products of the island are sweet potatoes, beans, sugar cane, yams, taro, melons, pumpkins, oranges, bananas, pineapples, and arrowroot, which is prepared in limited quantities with antiquated appliances. Excellent coffee also grows. The island is well stocked with goats and poultry.

Phoenix Group between 2° 30' and 4° 30' S. lat., and 171° and 174° 30' W. long. Eight islands: Mary, Enderbury, Phoenix, Birney, Gardner, McKean, Hull, Sydney; area of group, 16 sq. m., pop. 59.

Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony. The islands in this group were proclaimed as Protectorates in 1892 and annexed (at the request of the native Governments) as Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony, on November 10, 1915. The Colony includes several groups of islands. (1) The Ellice Islands, between 5° 30' and 11° 20' S. lat., and 176° and 180° E. long. (population June 30, 1926, 3,582). The principal islands are Funafuti, Nukufetau, Vaitupu, Nui (or Netherland), Niutao (or Lynx or Speiden), Nanumaga (or Hudson), Nanumea (or St. Augustine), Nukulaelae (or Mitchell); Nukakita; area of group, 14 sq. m. (2) Fanning Island, 3° 50' N., 159° W.; area 15 sq. m.; Washington Island, 4° 40' N., 160° 20' W., area 6 sq. m., population of the two islands, June 30, 1926, 491, including 41 Europeans; and Ocean Island (population June 30, 1926, 2,386, including 96 Europeans and 397 Asiatics). The last-named island is the Colony headquarters. It is situated 0° 52' S., and 169° 35' E., is six miles in circumference, and was annexed by Great Britain in 1901. The island is exceedingly rich in high-grade phosphate, which is worked by the British Phosphate Commission, who purchased the rights of the Pacific Phosphate Company in 1921. A wireless station on the island maintains telegraphic communication via Fiji and Australia. (3) Christmas Island, situated roughly 2° N. lat., and 157° W. long., discovered by Cook in 1777, annexed by Great Britain in 1888, and included in the Colony in November, 1919, is the largest atoll in the Pacific, being over 100 miles in circumference. It is leased to the Central Pacific Coconut Plantations, Ltd., for a term of 87 years from January 1, 1914. Population 1922, European, 4, Tahitians, 28. (4) The Gilbert Islands on the equator (population 1926, 23,410). The principal islands are Butaritari, Makin, Tarawa, Apsaia, Marakei, Maiana, Abemama, Kuria, Aranuka, Nonouti, Tabiteuea, Berni, Nukunau, Onotua, Tamana, and Arorae. Area, 166 sq. m.; population at 1921 census: 264 Europeans, 29,285 Pacific Island natives, and 348 Asiatics; total, 29,897 (including 14,205 females). Education is provided by the Government. Revenue of the Colony for the year ended June 30, 1926, 51,697*l.*, of which the principal items were: Customs, 23,232*l.*; native taxes, &c., 9,097*l.*; licences, &c., 8,097*l.*; royalty on phosphates, 6,144*l.*; interest on investments, 1,269*l.*; fees of court, etc., 1,604*l.*; post office and telegraphs, 1 047*l.*; miscellaneous, 455*l.*; Imperial grant, 750*l.* The expenditure for the same period amounted to 40,610*l.* Principal crops: pandanus fruit and coconuts. The trade in 1925-26 amounted to 125,048*l.* (incomplete figures) for imports, and 388,157*l.* for exports (phosphate, 188,335 tons, 258,960*l.*; copra, 6,341 tons, 128,461*l.*; shark fins, 5½ tons, 715*l.*; beeswax, 372 tons, 21*l.*). The Colony is administered by the High Commissioner through a Resident Commissioner, whose headquarters are at Ocean Island.

British Solomon Islands, about 8° S. and 160° W., are Guadalcanar, Malaita, Ysabel, San Cristoval, New Georgia. Choiseul, Shortland, Mono (or Treasury), Vella Lavella, Ronongo, Gizo, Rendova, Russell, Florida, Rennell, and numerous small islands (the Lord Howe Group or Ontong Java, the Santa Cruz Islands, Tucopia and Mitre Islands, and the Duff, or Wilson Group, are also included in the Solomon Islands Protectorate). Area 11,000 sq. miles: European population (1922), 493; native population, about 150,000, Non-Europeans 90, of whom 63 are Asiatics. They are under British Protection. Education is entirely in the hands of missions. Revenue, for the year ended March 31, 1927, 77,445*l.*; expenditure, 63,741*l.* Coconuts, rubber, sweet potatoes, pine-apples, bananas are grown. The value of imports in 1926-27 was 296,772*l.*; and of exports, 451,944*l.* (mainly copra, 22,316 tons, 411,597*l.*; trocas shell, 260 tons, 14,200*l.*; ivory nuts, 893 tons, 12,158*l.*; timber logs, 719,400 square ft., 7,261*l.*). Vessels entered, 1926-27, 45,506 tons (27,295 British); cleared, 40,241 tons (British 26,496 tons). A paper currency was issued in 1917-18. Little gold is in circulation, and only 4,600*l.* Protectorate paper money. The chief medium of exchange is Commonwealth bank notes. There is a Resident Commissioner, whose headquarters are at Tulagi, a small island off the south coast of Florida. A nominated Advisory Council assists in the administration. (For part of the Solomon Islands lately owned by Germany and now administered by Australia, see section on late German New Guinea below.)

Resident Commissioner.—R. R. Kane, M.C.

Starbuck Island, 5° 30' S. lat., 155° W. long.; area 1 sq. m., uninhabited. Malden Island, 4° S. lat., 155° W. long.; area 35 sq. m., contains a considerable deposit of guano, and is leased to the Malden Island Proprietary, Ltd., for a period of 21 years from January 1, 1922. Jarvis Island, on the equator, 159° W., area 1½ sq. m., pop. 30. Palmyra, 6° N., 162° 30' W., area 1½ sq. m. Baker Islands, on the equator.

These islands are mostly of coral formation; most of them grow coconut trees, and some of them are valuable for their guano.

The New Hebrides Group lies roughly 500 miles west of Fiji and 250 miles N.E. of New Caledonia. Estimated area 5,700 square miles. The group is under joint administration of English and French officials, as provided for by Anglo-French Convention of February 1906, ratified October 1906, and a Protocol signed at London on August 6, 1914, and ratified on March 18, 1922. The interests of British, French, and natives, respectively, are guaranteed; the conditions of land-holding in the Islands fixed; and the regulation of the recruitment of native labour provided for. Within the Islands Great Britain is represented by a High Commissioner, who delegates his powers to a Resident Commissioner stationed in the group.

The larger islands of the group are Espiritu Santo, Malekula, Epi, Ambrym, Efate or Sandwich, Erromanga, Tanna and Aneityúm. There are three active volcanoes, on Tanna, Ambrym and Lopevi, respectively. Earthquake shocks are of common occurrence. The native population of the group is about 55-60,000. On Malekula, Santo and Pentecost cannibalism is still practised. White population 1926: British 211, French 680. Foreigners, including Asiatics, who have opted for British regime 33, and for French regime 3,675. With the latter are included some 3,600 Tonkinese coolies under indenture to the French. There are numerous Presbyterian and Catholic mission native schools; one French Government school and two Catholic mission schools for whites. Public revenue, 1926: British service, 825*l.*; condominium service, 1,777,199 francs; public expenditure: British service, 15,661*l.*; condominium service, 1,217,559 francs.

Area under cultivation: British, 8,685 acres; French, 35,500 acres. British acreage under cultivation is composed principally of coconuts and a few hundred acres under cotton. French acreage under cultivation includes coconuts, about 20,000 acres; cocoa, 8,000 acres; cotton, 5,500 acres; coffee, 2,000 acres.

Bananas, sugarcane, oranges and all tropical fruits grow well. A small saw-mill has been established on Efate. Kauri pine is found on Aneityúm, but is no longer worked. There are several British and French trading companies operating in the group. Settlers and speculating companies have acquired large areas of land within the islands, the ownership of which is generally disputed, and which in consequence remains undeveloped pending adjudication by the mixed tribunal. Imports, condominium, 1926: value in French currency, 30,457,405 francs; value in British currency, 197,840*l.* Exports, condominium: value in French currency, 43,267,835 francs; value in British currency, 374,229*l.* The trade is mostly with Australia, New Caledonia and France. Principal imports are: Provisions and foodstuffs, clothing, metal-work and furniture; exports: Copra (8,382 tons in 1926, value 184,318*l.*); coffee (274 tons, 21,890*l.*); cocoa (1,950 tons, 87,730*l.*); cotton, in seed (3,090 tons, 61,793*l.*); miscellaneous, 18,498*l.* Import of arms, ammunition, wines and spirits is prohibited except under special permit. There is frequent communication between New Caledonia and Australia; a four-weekly mail service being maintained by the Burns, Philip Line and Messageries Maritimes, while a two-monthly service is also maintained by the last-named company with France and the New Hebrides via Tahiti and Panama. The shipping entered and cleared from the Port of Vila during 1926 was: 68 vessels of 82,685 tons entered; 61 vessels of 81,686 tons cleared.

MANDATED TERRITORIES IN THE PACIFIC: NEW GUINEA, WESTERN SAMOA, AND NAURU ISLAND.

TERRITORY OF NEW GUINEA.

(LATE GERMAN NEW GUINEA.)

GERMAN NEW GUINEA was the name given to all those territories held by Germany in the Western Pacific which were governed from Rabaul, the capital of these Possessions. It included: Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, Bismarck Archipelago, the German Solomon Islands, Nauru, the Caroline Islands, the Marshall Islands, and the Marianne or Ladrone Islands (excepting the Island of Guam). These Possessions were occupied by an Australian Force on September 12, 1914. The islands north of the Equator, namely, the Marshall, Caroline, Pelew, and Ladrone (Marianne) Islands, are now administered by Japan as mandatory. Those south of the Equator, namely, the Bismarck Archipelago, those of the Solomon Islands formerly owned by Germany, and (late) German New Guinea, are assigned to Australia, German Samoa to New Zealand, and Nauru, a small islet just south of the Equator, to the British Empire.

NEW GUINEA.—The mandate from the League of Nations is dated December 17, 1920, and on May 9, 1921, the Australian Government established its civil administration in the Territory. The laws of the Commonwealth, subject to local modifications as necessary, may be applied to the mandated territories. The military training of the natives, except for local police purposes, is prohibited, and no naval or military base or any fortifications may be established.

The non-indigenous population at the last census, April 4, 1921, was 8,173, of which the British numbered 715, Chinese 1,402, Dutch 215, German 579, Japanese 87, and United States of America 60. The number of persons engaged in agricultural pursuits was 460, and those practising religion professionally numbered 256.

The administrator of the Territory of New Guinea is Brigadier-General E. A. Wisdom, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D. The seat of Administration is at Rabaul.

1. North Eastern New Guinea. This territory, the northern section of south-east New Guinea, lies between 2° 15' and 8° south latitude, and 141° 30' and 148° east longitude. The area, including Manam, Karkar, Long, Bagabag, Schouten, Le Maire, and some smaller islands, is 68,500 square miles. The native population in 1926 for areas explored was, counted and estimated, 237,329, but so little is known of the interior that any figures are very conjectural. It was declared a German Protectorate in 1884, and was under the control and development of the New Guinea Company from 1885 to 1899. The principal station on the mainland is at Madang. The coast-line is very little broken, and there are few good harbours. There are high ranges running parallel with the coast plain, which is from 20 to 100 miles wide and broken with steep spurs in some places extending to the actual coast-line. The ranges in the interior have been little explored, and some of their summits are known to exceed 12,000 feet. The principal rivers are the Sepik, which is navigable for over 250 miles, the Ramu or Otilie, and the Markham. The climate is hot and the rainfall large. There are two missionary societies at work; these missions are also planters and traders. Inter-island trade is carried on by small steamships and motor-schooners. There is a five-weekly service from Australia to Madang.

The area under cultivation in 1926 was 38,441 acres. The greater part of this area was planted with coconuts (about 34,800 acres). Rubber and cocoa are also grown. Tropical fruits grow very abundantly. The staple articles of food of the natives are yams, taro, sago, and bananas. There is very little land used for pasture. The land is rich in mineral wealth, but no minerals are worked on account of the difficulty of transporting mining machinery. Native labour is used to work the plantations, and the natives are recruited either from the adjacent villages or from other parts of the Possessions. There are upwards of 6,000 native labourers so recruited for plantation purposes.

The chief towns are: Madang and district (non-indigenous population, 272); Morobe and district (non-indigenous population, 139); Aitape and district (non-indigenous population, 103).

2. Bismarck Archipelago.—In November, 1884, a German Protectorate was declared over the New Britain Archipelago and several adjacent groups of islands, and in May, 1885, they were renamed the Bismarck Archipelago. The Archipelago lies between 141° 30' and 156° east longitude, and the Equator and 8° south latitude. The chief islands are New Britain, area 10,000 square miles; New Ireland, area 3,000 square miles; Lavongai (late New Hanover, 530 square miles; Duke of York Islands, area 22 square miles; the Admiralty Islands (principal island, Manus), area 600 square miles. The other groups included in this Archipelago are Mussau Islands, Gardner Islands, Nuguria, Nissan Island, the Vitu Islands, Umboi Islands, Hermit Islands, Ninigo Group, Kaniet and Sae Islands. In these various groups there are upwards of 100 small islands. The native population of the Archipelago in 1926 of areas patrolled was 120,459.

New Britain, the largest island of this group, is a long island of crescent shape lying east and west. It has a mean breadth of 50 miles and a length of 300 miles. The island is practically undeveloped except for the Gazelle Peninsula in the north, four plantations on the northern coast, and six plantations on the southern coast, west of Henry Reid Bay. A Government station, named Gasmata (non-indigenous population 16), has been established about midway along the southern coast. Talasea (non-indigenous population 34) is situated on the north coast. The interior of the island is little known. The native population within explored areas in 1926 was 81,859. A mountain chain traverses the entire length of the island, and in the centre consists of several irregular ranges. There are several active volcanoes. The highest known peak is the Father, about 7,500 feet high, which is an active volcano. The island has very fine harbours. The only one visited by oversea shipping is Simpson Harbour, in Blanche Bay. The principal settlement is around the shores of this bay. The chief crop is coconuts. There are two missionary societies at work. The chief town is Rabaul (non-indigenous population, 1,350), which is the seat of the Government. The old capital was at Kokopo (non-indigenous population, 369), which is situated 14 miles south-east of Rabaul. At Rabaul there is an anchorage for all ships and a fine jetty has been built. Rabaul is well laid out and has a fine public garden. New Britain and the adjacent islands, including Duke of York Island, have an area of 14,600 square miles.

New Ireland, the second in size and importance of the Bismarck Archipelago, is situated north of New Britain, from which it is separated by St. George's Channel. The chief town is Kavieng (non-indigenous population, 356), at the north-west extremity of the island. The only other town is Namatanai (non-indigenous population, about 148), on the south-east coast. The island has a long range of mountains running through it. It is of older formation than New Britain, and does not show any signs of recent volcanic activity. The principal harbour is Nusa, on the north coast of which Kavieng, the seat of the local administration, is situated. The interior of the island, with the exception of the extreme southern end, is fairly well known. The native population in 1926 was 38,600, including adjacent islands. The soil is fertile and the climate similar to that of New Britain. The chief industry is coconut growing. There are numerous plantations around the coast near Kavieng. New Ireland and adjacent islands, including New Hanover, Tabar, Litui, Tanga, Feni, Mussau and Emirau Groups have an area of 3,800 square miles.

The Admiralty Islands are the most important of the small groups. The chief island is Manus, sometimes called Great Admiralty Island. The chief town is Lorengau (population, including district, about 40) on the north-east coast. The native population of the group in 1925 was 13,800. Coconuts are the chief article of cultivation, and there are valuable pearl and other shell fisheries.

3. Solomon Islands.—The portion of the Solomon Islands within the area of the territory of New Guinea consists of the Islands of Bougainville, Buka, and adjacent islands, including Nuguria, Nissan, Kilnailau, Tauu (Mortlock), and Nukumanu (Tasman) Islands. Bougainville has an area of 3,500 square miles, and a native population in 1926 of 48,053, and Buka an area of 300 square miles, and a native population, 1926, 7,575. Choiseul, Isabel or Mahaga, and various smaller islands to the east of Bougainville were transferred to Great Britain in 1899. The islands are very mountainous. Of the several volcanic cones, Bagano (in the Crown Prince range) is the only active volcano. The highest mountain is the dormant volcano Mount Balbi (in the Emperor range), 10,170 feet high situated in the centre of the island. The principal harbour is Kieta, situated on the east coast of Bougainville, where there is a Government station. Other good harbours are: Rawa and Tinputz on the north-east coast of Bougainville. There is a good harbour on the west side of Buka, named Carola Hafen. Missionary work amongst the natives is carried on by the Marist Brothers of the Roman Catholic Mission. As the plantations are new there is comparatively little export trade. The natives grow bananas, coconuts, taro, and sweet potatoes. The non-indigenous population is 148.

TERRITORY OF WESTERN SAMOA.

The former German Samoan Islands, now the Territory of Western Samoa, include Savaii and Upolu, the largest of the Samoan or Navigators' Islands. Samoa is a group of islands in the Western Pacific, lying in 13½ deg. to 14 deg. S. lat., and 168 deg. to 173 deg. W. long. The islands are some 130 miles N. of Tonga and between 400 and 500 miles N.E. of Fiji. The group consists of nine islands, in addition to rocks and islets. They are all, with the exception of Rose Island, of volcanic formation, and are, for the most part, surrounded with coral reefs. The four largest islands are Savaii, Upolu, Tutuila and Tau, in the Manu'a Group. By the Anglo-German Agreement of November 14, 1899, ratified by the United States in January, 1900, Great Britain renounced all rights over the islands in favour of Germany as regards Savaii, Upolu, Apolima and Manono, and in favour of the United States as regards Tutuila and other islands.

On August 29, 1914, the British occupied German Samoa. By the Treaty of Peace, 1919, Germany surrendered her possessions abroad, and Samoa is assigned under a mandate dated December 17, 1920, from the League of Nations to His Majesty the King in right of his Dominion of New Zealand, which has been empowered to govern Western Samoa. The military training of the natives, except for local police or defence purposes, is prohibited, and no naval or military base or any fortifications may be established.

The civil administration was inaugurated on May 1, 1920. There is a Legislative Council, consisting of not less than six official members, and unofficial members (not exceeding in number the official members)—of whom three are elected members. The Administrator is entitled to preside over every meeting of the Council. No person is qualified for appointment to the Legislative Council unless he is either a natural-born British subject or a Samoan, or was born in Samoa. There is a Native Council which advises the Administrator in native affairs.

Savaii has an area of about 660 square miles; Upolu has an area of between 550 and 600 square miles. Both islands are mountainous, fertile, and well watered. Several adjacent islets, exceedingly fertile, were included in the German dependency. The port of Apia is in Upolu. The inhabitants of the islands are Polynesians, professing Christianity (Protestants, Catholics, and Mormons). Population of Western Samoa, as recorded at December 31, 1926, was:—Europeans and half-castes, 2,555; Samoan natives, 38,003; Chinese labourers under contract, 947; other islanders, 155; total, 41,660. There are four Government schools, and also schools conducted by various Missions—the number of scholars recorded being over 11,400. There are 60 miles of good roads. The chief products are copra and cacao. The cultivation of cotton, bananas and other products is being undertaken experimentally, whilst rubber tapping (1,700 acres planted) has now been re-commenced. The revenue collected in Western Samoa for the year ended March 31, 1927, was 133,813*l.*; the ordinary expenditure was 141,710*l.* There was an excess of assets over liabilities of 7,060*l.* on March 31, 1927. Imports for 1926, 324,940*l.* (from United Kingdom, 50,368*l.*, New Zealand, 92,159*l.*, Australia, 87,850*l.*, Canada, 8,071*l.*, U.S.A., 66,275*l.*); exports, 320,785*l.* (to United Kingdom, 141,188*l.*, New Zealand, 4,300*l.*, Australia, 15,683*l.*, U.S.A., 16,715*l.*, Germany, 78,540*l.*). The exports are mainly copra (12,249 tons, 275,086*l.* in 1926) and cacao beans (356 tons, 20,151*l.* in 1926). In 1926, 84 vessels (93,441 tons, of which 72 vessels of 66,922 tons were British) entered at and cleared from the port of Apia.

There is regular steam communication from New Zealand, and the products of the territory are transported to overseas markets by steam and oil vessels which call at Apia every few weeks. A high power wireless station is erected at Apia.

The German currency has been replaced by sterling in the form of Samoan Treasury notes issued under the authority of the New Zealand Government. A branch of the Bank of New Zealand was opened at Apia in April, 1915.

The Hon. Wm. Nosworthy, Minister of External Affairs for New Zealand, is in charge of Samoa and other late German Islands assigned to New Zealand.

NAURU ISLAND.

The island lies 26 miles south of the Equator, in longitude 166 degrees east, about 400 miles from the nearest Marshall Islands. Area, 5,396 acres. It is a circular atoll of approximately 12 miles in circumference, surrounded by a reef. There is no anchorage adjacent to the island. There is an extensive plateau bearing phosphate of a high grade, the mining rights of which are vested in the British Phosphate Commission subject to the rights of the native landowners. It is chiefly on the fertile section of land between the sandy beach and the plateau that the natives have established themselves, and from which they obtain the necessary food for themselves and families. With the exception of a small fringe round a shallow lagoon, about one mile inland, the plateau which contains the phosphate deposits is not utilized for the purposes of native villages.

The island was annexed by Germany in October, 1888, and surrendered to the Australian forces in 1914. It is administered under a mandate conferred on the British Empire and approved by the League of Nations and dated December 17, 1920. The military training of the natives, except for local police or defence purposes, is prohibited, and no naval or military base or any fortifications may be established. Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand agreed in July, 1919, that Australia should appoint the first Administrator for a term of five years, and thereafter the administrator was to be appointed as the three Governments should decide. The first appointment, that of Brig.-Gen. T. Griffiths, C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O., was made in June, 1921. General Griffith's term of office was subsequently extended until July, 1927. The three Governments concerned agreed that Australia should also appoint the second Administrator for a period of five years. Mr. W. A. Newman, a senior officer of the Australian Public Service, was appointed Administrator on June 11, 1927. The administrator has all the powers of government, administrative, legislative and judicial. The expenses of administration are met out of local revenue.

Population, April 1, 1927: 115 Europeans, 761 Chinese, 6 Caroline and Marshall islanders, 15 Gilbert and Ellice islanders, 1,266 Nauruans; total, 2,163.

Education.—Attendance at school both for European and Native children is compulsory until children reach the age of 16 years; then, until they reach the age of 17 years, they are required to attend for technical training at specified periods.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure of the island have been as follows:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1921	9,519	11,851	1924	18,399	13,580
1922	11,181	11,423	1925	15,174	15,256
1923	11,837	10,265	1926	16,424	13,963

Excess of assets over liabilities as at December 31, 1926, 23,965*l*.

Import duties are imposed on beer, spirits, wines, and tobacco, and a 10% ad valorem duty on practically all other goods except food supplies which are admitted free. By a concession obtained in 1905 from the German Government, the Phosphate Commission (now designated the British Phosphate Commission) receives exemption for all materials and plant used for the exploitation of phosphates, as well as for provisions required for its employees. An export duty of 10s. per ton is charged on copra. A Capitation Tax of 2*l.* for Europeans, 1*l.* for Chinese, 15s. for natives is collected from all physically fit adult males under the age of 60 years. A Royalty of 7½*d.* per ton is paid for every ton of phosphate shipped, of which 4*d.* per ton is paid to the native landowner, 1½*d.* per ton is paid to the Administrator to be used solely for the benefit of the Nauruan people, and 2*d.* per ton is held by the Administrator in trust for the benefit of the landowner or his assigns, to whom the interest will be paid after the principal has been invested for a period of 20 years. The British Phosphate Company also contributes 1,000*l.* per annum towards the cost of the Nauruan Police.

Commerce.—The export trade of the island consists, with the exception of a small quantity of copra, almost entirely of phosphate, shipped to Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and other countries. Tons exported 1922, 193,675 ; 1923, 212,800 ; 1924, 280,990 ; 1925, 224,260 ; 1926, 274,935.

Shipping.—Practically the whole of the shipping coming to the island consists of steamers under charter to the British Phosphate Commission. Numbers of vessels entered and cleared : in 1922, 48 of 153,113 tons ; 1923, 52 of 210,300 gross tons ; 1924, 63 of 276,446 gross tons ; 1925, 53 of 239,088 gross tons ; 1926, 64 of 294,448 gross tons.

Wireless Station.—The outstanding feature of Nauru, apart from the phosphate works, is the Wireless Station, erected by the Germans to link up the island with their other Pacific possessions and Tsingtau. It was opened in December 1913, and though partially dismantled shortly after the outbreak of war, was soon restored, and has been in use ever since.

PART THE SECOND

THE UNITED STATES

UNITED STATES.

(UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Declaration of Independence of the thirteen States of which the American Union then consisted was adopted by Congress July 4, 1776. On November 30, 1782, Great Britain acknowledged the independence of the United States, and on September 3, 1783, the treaty of peace was concluded.

The form of government of the United States is based on the Constitution of Sept. 17, 1787, to which ten amendments were added Dec. 15, 1791; an eleventh amendment, Jan. 8, 1798; a twelfth amendment, Sept. 25, 1804; a thirteenth amendment, Dec. 18, 1865 (slavery abolished); a fourteenth amendment, July 28, 1868; a fifteenth amendment, March 30, 1870 (equal rights for white and coloured citizens); a sixteenth amendment, February 25, 1913 (income tax authorised); a seventeenth amendment, May 31, 1913; an eighteenth amendment, January 29, 1919 (liquor prohibition amendment); and a nineteenth amendment, August 26, 1920 (woman suffrage).

By the Constitution, the government of the nation is entrusted to three separate authorities, the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial. The executive power is vested in a President, who holds his office during the term of four years, and is elected, together with a Vice-President chosen for the same term, in the mode prescribed as follows:—‘Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no senator or representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.’ The practice is that in every State the electors allotted to the State are chosen by direct vote of the citizens on a general ticket, on the system known in France as scrutin de liste. The Constitution enacts that ‘the Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States’; and further, that ‘no person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.’

The quadrennial election is held every fourth (leap) year. Electors are chosen in the several States on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November; the electors meet and give their votes at their respective State capitals on the second Monday in January next following their appointment; and the votes of the electors of all the States are opened and counted in the presence of both Houses of Congress on the second Wednesday in February. The presidential term begins on March 4, in the year following leap years.

The President is commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and of the militia in the service of the Union. The Vice-President is ex-officio President of the Senate; and in the case of the death or resignation of the President, he becomes the President for the remainder of the term.

President of the United States.—Calvin Coolidge, of Massachusetts, born at Plymouth, Vermont, July 4, 1872; graduated at Amherst College, 1895; admitted to the Bar, 1897; member of Massachusetts General Court, 1907–1909; Mayor of Northampton, 1910–1912; member of the State Senate, 1912–1915; President of the Senate, 1914 and 1915; Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, 1916–1918; Governor, 1919 and 1920; Vice-President of the United States, 1921-1923; succeeded as President August 2, 1923, on the death of President Harding; re-elected November 1924.

Since the adoption of the Constitution the offices of President and Vice-President have been occupied as follows:—

By a law which came into force Jan. 19, 1886, in case of removal, death, resignation, or inability of both the President and Vice-President, the Secretary of State, and after him, in the order of the establishment of their departments, other members of the Cabinet, shall act as President until the disability of the President is removed or a President shall be elected. On the death of a Vice-President the duties of the office shall fall to the President pro tempore of the Senate, who receives the salary of the Vice-President.

The administrative business of the nation is conducted by ten chief officers, or heads of departments, who form what is called the 'Cabinet.' They are chosen by the President, but must be confirmed by the Senate. Each of them presides over a separate department, and acts under the immediate authority of the President. They are, in the order prescribed by law for their succession to the Presidency, in case both the President and the Vice-President die or become unable to take office:—

1. Secretary of State.—Frank Billings Kellogg, of Minnesota, born in New York, 1856; educated in the public schools; admitted to the Bar, 1877; City attorney; Rochester, Minnesota, and county attorney, Olmstead County; removed to St. Paul; Special Counsel for the U.S. in the suits against the Standard Oil and News-print Paper Trusts, and in action to dissolve; the merger of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific railways; U.S. Senator from Minnesota, 1917-1923 member Republican National Committee, 1904-1912; Ambassador to Great Britain, 1923-1925. Present appointment, Feb. 14, 1925.

2. Secretary of the Treasury.—Andrew William Mellon, of Pennsylvania, born in Pennsylvania, 1852; educated at the University of Pittsburg; prominent in the development of coal, coke, and iron industries, and in banking. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

3. Secretary of War.—Dwight F. Davis, of Missouri, born in Missouri, 1879; educated at Harvard and Washington Universities; interested in sports and all movements aiming at the improvement of the health of the public and the promotion of recreation. Director War Finance Corporation, 1921-23. Assistant Secretary of War, 1923-25. Present appointment, October 12, 1925.

4. Attorney-General.—John Garibaldi Sargent, of Vermont, born in Vermont, 1860; graduated at Tufts College, 1887, admitted to the Bar, 1890. Secretary military and civil affairs, Vermont 1900; Attorney General of Vermont, 1908-1912. Present appointment, March 17, 1925.

5. Postmaster-General.—Harry Stewart New, of Indiana, born in Indiana, 1858; educated at Butler University. Editor and publisher of the Indianapolis Journal; Captain and Acting Adjutant-General in the 3rd Brigade, 7th Army Corps, during the Spanish War of 1898; member of State Senate of Indiana; member and chairman Republican National Committee; U.S. Senator from Indiana, 1917-1923; present appointment, February 27, 1923.

6. Secretary of the Navy.—Curtis Dwight Wilbur, of California, born in Iowa, 1867; graduated at U.S. Naval Academy, 1888; resigned from navy, admitted to the Bar, 1890; Judge, Superior Court, Los Angeles county, California, 1903-1918; Justice, Supreme Court of California, 1918-1922; Chief Justice, 1922-1924. Present appointment, March 14, 1924.

7. Secretary of the Interior.—Dr. Hubert Work, of Colorado, born in Pennsylvania, 1860; graduated at the University of Michigan, and (in medicine) at the University of Pennsylvania; President 1912, of the American Medico-Psychological Society; First Assistant Postmaster-General, 1921; Postmaster-general, 1922; present appointment, February 27, 1923.

8. Secretary of Agriculture.—William M. Jardine, of Kansas, born in Idaho, 1879; educated at the Agricultural College of Utah and the University of Illinois; instructor and professor of agronomy; Agricultural College of Utah, 1904-1907; assistant cerealist U.S. Department of Agriculture, 1907-1910; agronomist, Kansas State College of Agriculture, 1910-1918; President of that College, 1918-1925. Present appointment, Feb. 14, 1925.

9. Secretary of Commerce.—Herbert Clark Hoover, of California, born in Iowa, 1874; graduated civil engineer, Leland Stanford Jr. University, 1895; engaged in mine development in America, Australia, and China; Chairman (in London) of the American War Relief Committee, 1914-1915; American Food Administrator, 1917-1919; Administrator of Food Relief for Belgium, 1915-1918; Commander of the French Legion d'honneur. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

10. Secretary of Labour.—James John Davis, of Illinois, born in Wales, 1873; prominent officer in Labour organisations. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

Each of the above ministers has an annual salary of 12,000 dollars, and holds office during the pleasure of the President.

The whole legislative power is vested by the Constitution in a Congress, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives. The Senate consists of two members from each State, chosen by popular vote for six years. Senators must be not less than thirty years of age; must have been citizens of the United States for nine years; and be residents in the States for which they are chosen. Besides its legislative functions, the Senate is entrusted with the power of ratifying or rejecting all treaties made by the President with foreign Powers, a two-thirds majority of senators present being required for ratification. The Senate is also invested with the power of confirming or rejecting all appointments to office made by the President; and its members constitute a High Court of Impeachment. The judgment in the latter case extends only to removal from office and disqualification. The House of Representatives has the sole power of impeachment.

The House of Representatives is composed of members elected every second year by the vote of citizens who, according to the laws of their respective States, are qualified to vote for members of the State legislature. By amendments of the Constitution, disqualification on the ground of race, colour, or sex, is forbidden. Accordingly the electorate consists practically of all citizens of both sexes over 21 years of age. But the franchise is not universal. There are requirements of residence varying in the several States as to length from three months to two years; differing requirements as to registration; in some States the payment of taxes is necessary to qualify for the suffrage; in others the ability to read—in Massachusetts the ability to read English. Some of the Western States admit to the franchise unnaturalised persons who have formally declared their intention to become citizens. Several of the Southern States have adopted methods—which differ from one another—too complicated for explanation here, with the frankly avowed purpose of excluding the negroes from the franchise and yet avoiding the constitutional consequences of discriminating 'on account of race, colour, or previous condition of servitude.' Untaxed Indians are excluded from the franchise, in most States convicts, in some States duellists and fraudulent voters; in Massachusetts voters are required to be able to read English. In some Southern States they are required to give a reasonable explanation of what they read. Women by the 19th amendment to the Federal Constitution, passed in 1920, have the vote and eligibility for both the Federal and the State Legislatures on the same terms as men.

The number of members of the House of Representatives to which each State is entitled is determined by the census taken every ten years. By the Apportionment Act consequent on the census of 1910 the number of representatives is 433.

In 1912 with the admission of Arizona and New Mexico it became 435, distributed as follows:—

Alabama . . . 10	Maryland . . . 6	Oregon . . . 3
Arizona . . . 1	Massachusetts . . 16	Pennsylvania . . 36
Arkansas . . . 7	Michigan . . . 13	Rhode Island . . 3

On the basis of the census of 1910 there is one representative to every 210,415 inhabitants. According to the census of 1920 the number of members of Congress has been fixed at 460, but no new apportionment has been made by Congress since 1912.

According to the terms of the Constitution, representatives must not be less than twenty-five years of age, must have been citizens of the United States for seven years, and be residents in the States from which they are chosen. In addition to the representatives from the States, the House admits a 'delegate' from each organised Territory, who has the right to speak on any subject and to make motions, but not to vote. The delegates are elected in the same manner as the representatives.

Each of the two Houses of Congress is made by the Constitution the 'judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members'; and each of the Houses may, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

The Congress of the United States has the power to propose alterations in the Constitution, by the 5th article of the same. The article orders that the Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to the Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of all the States, shall call a convention for proposing the amendments, which in either case shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or other mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress.

The salary of a senator, representative, or delegate in Congress is 7,500 dollars per annum, with an allowance, based on distance, for travelling expenses. The salary of the Speaker of the House of Representatives is 12,000 dollars per annum.

No senator or representative can, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the United States which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States can be a member of either House during his continuance in office. No religious test is required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States, or in any State.

The period usually termed 'a Congress' in legislative language continues for two years; as, for example, from noon, March 4, 1927, until noon, March 4, 1929, at which latter time the term of the representatives to the 70th Congress will expire, and the term of the new House of Representatives will begin. The term of one-third of the Senators expires at the same time.

The 70th Congress (1927-29), elected November, 1926, is constituted as follows: Senate, 48 Republicans, 47 Democrats, 1 Farmer Labour; House of Representatives, 238 Republicans, 194 Democrats, 2 Farmer Labour, 1 Socialist.

The National Government has authority in matters of general taxation, treaties and other dealings with foreign powers, army, navy, and (to a certain extent) militia, commerce, foreign and inter-State, postal service, coinage, weights and measures, and the trial and punishment of crime against the United States.

Slavery was abolished throughout the whole of the United States by the thirteenth Amendment of the Constitution, passed December 18, 1865. The vast change in the political and social organisation of the Republic made by this new fundamental law was completed by the fourteenth and fifteenth Amendments of the Constitution, passed in 1868 and 1870, which gave to the former slaves all the rights and privileges of citizenship.

STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Union comprises 13 original States, 7 States which were admitted without having been previously organised as Territories, and 28 States which had been Territories—48 States in all. Each State has its own constitution, which must be republican in form, and each constitution derives its authority, not from Congress, but from the people of the State. Admission of States into the Union is granted by special Acts of Congress, either (1) in the form of 'enabling Acts,' providing for the drafting and ratification of a State constitution by the people, in which case the Territory becomes a State as soon as the conditions are fulfilled, or (2) accepting a constitution already framed, and at once granting admission.

Each State is provided with a Legislature of two Houses, a Governor, and other executive officials, and a judicial system. Both Houses of the Legislature are elective, but the Senators (having larger electoral districts) are less numerous than the members of the House of Representatives, while in some States their terms are longer and, in a few, the Senate is only partially renewed at each election. Members of both Houses are paid at the same rate, which varies from 150 to 1,500 dollars per session, or from 1 to 8 dollars per day during session. The duties of the two Houses are similar, but in many States money bills must be introduced first in the House of Representatives. The Senate has to sit as a court for the trial of officials impeached by the other House, and, besides, has often the power to confirm or reject appointments made by the Governor. In most of the States the sessions are biennial, the Governor having power to summon an extraordinary session, but not to dissolve or adjourn. State Legislatures are competent to deal with all matters not reserved for the Federal Government by the Federal constitution, or falling within restrictions imposed by the State constitutions. Among their powers are the determination of the qualifications for the right of suffrage, and the control of all elections to public office, including elections of members of Congress and electors of President and Vice-President; the criminal law, both in its enactment and in its execution, with unimportant exceptions, and the administration of prisons; the civil law, including all matters pertaining to the possession and transfer of, and succession to, property; marriage and divorce, and all other civil relations; the chartering and control of all manufacturing, trading, transportation, and other corporations, subject only to the right of Congress to regulate commerce passing from one State to another; the regulation of labour; education; charities; licensing, including regulation of the liquor traffic; fisheries, and game laws. The revenues of the States are derived chiefly from a direct tax upon property, in some cases both real and personal, in others on land and buildings only. The prohibition upon Congress to levy direct taxes save in proportion to population, contained originally in the national constitution, left this source of revenue to the States exclusively until 1913, when an amendment was adopted authorising the imposition of an income tax by Congress.

The Governor is chosen by direct vote of the people over the whole State. His term of office varies in the several States from 1 year to 4 years and his salary from 3,000 to 18,000 dollars. His duty is to see to the faithful administration of the law, and he has command of the military forces of the State. His power of appointment to State offices is usually unimportant. He may recommend measures, but does not present bills to the legislature. In some States he presents estimates. In all but two of the States the Governor has a veto upon legislation, which may, however, be overridden by the two Houses, in some States by a simple majority, in others by a three-fifths or two-thirds majority.

The officials by whom the administration of State affairs is carried on (secretaries, treasurers, members of boards of commissioners, &c.) are usually chosen by the people at the General State elections for terms similar to those for which governors hold office, the party in power appointing its own adherents.

In the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska there is a local legislature, the form of which has been prescribed by the National Government. These bodies have powers similar to those of the States, but any of their acts may be modified or annulled by Congress. The Governor of a Territory is appointed for 4 years by the President to whom he makes an annual report. The President appoints also the Territorial secretaries and other officials, together with the Territorial judges. Porto Rico, although not designated as a 'territory' in the technical sense, is self-governing. Its government is organised on a system almost identical with that of the territories. The Philippine Islands are governed by a civil Governor and elected Upper and Lower Legislative Chambers.

The District of Columbia is the seat of the United States Government, provided by the State of Maryland for the purposes of government in 1791. It is co-extensive with the city of Washington, and embraces an area of 60 square miles. The district has no municipal legislative body, and its citizens have no right to vote either in national or municipal concerns. By an Act of Congress of 1873, its municipal government is administered by three commissioners, appointed by the President.

The unit of local government in the North, especially in the New England States, is the rural township, governed directly by the voters who assemble annually or oftener if necessary, and legislate in local affairs, levy taxes, make appropriations, and appoint and instruct the local officials (select men, clerk, school-committee, &c.). Where cities exist the township government is superseded by the city government. Townships are grouped to form counties, each with its commissioners and other paid officials who have charge of public buildings, lay out highways, grant licences, and estimate and apportion the taxation necessary for county purposes. In the South the counties are themselves the units, though subdivided for educational or other special purposes. Their officials have in general additional functions, as the care of the poor and the superintendence of schools. In the Middle and North-Western States the two systems of local government are mixed. In the West all the public land is already divided into townships six miles square.

II. MOVEMENT OF POPULATION.

The registration area for births was established in 1915, and the birth rates are computed from returns for certain areas for which the registration of births is accepted by the Bureau of the Census as approximately complete. In 1925 these areas included Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, California, Oregon, South Carolina, Nebraska, Delaware, Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Florida, Iowa, North Dakota, West Virginia, the District of Columbia, and the Virgin Islands. The estimated population of this area was 87,636,000, or 75.9 per cent. of the total estimated population of the United States, and the number of births (exclusive of still-births) returned was 1,878,880, or 21.4 per 1,000 population.

Death rates are computed from returns for States and cities which were admitted to the registration area for deaths on the basis of approximately complete registration. In 1925 these areas included California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Alabama, West Virginia, the District of Columbia, the territory of Hawaii, the Virgin Islands, and 24 cities in non-registration States. The estimated population for the registration area (exclusive of Hawaii) was 103,108,000, or 89.4 per cent. of the total estimated population of Continental United States; and the number of deaths returned from this area was 1,219,019, corresponding to a death rate of 11.8 per 1,000 population.

The number of marriages in 1926 was, 1,202,079 representing 10.26 per 1000. There were 180,861 divorces, against 175,449 in 1925, and 3,823 marriages annulled.

Total number of immigrants admitted in year ending June 30, 1927, was 335,175.

The total number of alien immigrants from 1820 to 1926 (June 30) was 36,573,505. In the following statement, immigrants from Canada and Mexico are included in the total —

Instruction.

Each State of the Union has a system of free public schools established by law. The work of these is supplemented by private and parochial schools. In 1880 the percentage of illiterates in the population above ten years of age was 17 per cent., in 1890 13·3 per cent., in 1900 10·7 per cent., in 1910 7·7 per cent., in 1920 6 per cent. The following statistics are for 1920.

Since the admission of the State of Ohio in 1803, the United States Government, upon the organization of all new States excepting a few in which no lands of the public domain were available, has set aside for the benefit of the public schools therein from one to four 'sections' (square miles) of land in each township of six miles square. The proceeds of the sale of this land make the principal part of the permanent school funds of such States. The income of permanent school funds and unsold school lands constitutes about 2.7 per cent. of the revenue receipts of the schools of the country. Taxation and appropriation yield about 92.1 per cent. of the total revenue receipts, and other sources yield about 5.2 per cent. In 1924 the amount expended on public schools of elementary and secondary grades was 1,820,743,936 dollars. In 1924 the 913 universities, colleges, and professional schools had an income of 387,694,609 dollars from productive funds, from fees, and from United States Government, State, and Municipal appropriations, and from all other sources.

The total number of periodicals was in 1916, 23,024 (in 1920, 21,012); in 1870 the total number was 5,871; in 1900, 20,806; and in 1911, 22,806.

Justice and Crime.

The judicial system, like the executive and legislative systems, is dual. The Federal or National Government maintains courts for the trial of crimes against the United States and of civil suits which are brought by the Government or its officers, or which arise under the Constitution, treaties and laws of the United States. These laws relate to such subjects, among others, as Admiralty, Patents, Banking and Bankruptcy. The Federal Courts also have jurisdiction of cases between citizens of the different States and between citizens of a State and foreign States, citizens or subjects. In this class of cases, as well as in cases arising under the Constitution, treaties and laws of the United States, the amount in controversy must exceed 3,000 dollars, besides interest and costs. The State Courts have jurisdiction over all civil and criminal cases arising under State laws which do not conflict with the National Constitution and laws enacted by Congress. The State Courts also have jurisdiction of proceedings in probate and divorce.

In the separate States the lowest courts are those of Justices of the Peace, but in many towns and cities of fairly substantial population, Police Judges have jurisdiction as Examining Magistrates in criminal matters and to hear and determine misdemeanours for violation of the municipal laws. In all matters, except in misdemeanours for violation of the municipal laws, the Justices of the Peace have also jurisdiction in such towns or cities as examining magistrates, as well as to hear and determine civil cases involving usually not more than 200 dollars, and also to hear, determine and sentence for certain petty offences which are not heinous.

The highest court in each State is the Supreme or Appellate Court with a Chief Justice and Associate Justices and, in some States, commissioners who hear and determine cases under assignment of the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices. The Chief Justice and Associate Justices are usually elected by the people, but sometimes are appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the State Senate; they usually hold office for a term of years, but in some instances for life or during good behaviour. Their salaries range from 5,000 to 17,500 dollars.

The Judges of the Courts of the United States, which include the District Courts, the Court of Claims, the United States Customs Court, the Court of Customs Appeals, the Circuit Courts of Appeal, and the Supreme Court of the United States, hold office during good behaviour. They may, however, retire with full pay at the age of 70 years, if they so desire, and if they have served a period of ten years.

The United States District Courts are the lowest of the Federal Courts. There are 94 of these, each State and territory forming one or more districts. These Courts appoint Commissioners, who have the power of Examining Magistrates, but may not finally adjudge and determine, except in the Territory of Alaska, where they have jurisdiction equivalent to that of the Justices of the Peace and Probate Courts of the counties of the States. The United States District Courts try all criminal cases arising under the Laws of the United States, as indicated above, including capital offences.

The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and 8 Associate Justices, appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. The United States is divided into 9 circuits, to each of which the Chief Justice or an Associate Justice is assigned. Cases from inferior courts are taken to the Circuit Courts of Appeal by appeal or writ of error, or to the Supreme Court either on appeal, writ of error, or writ of certiorari. That Court has also original jurisdiction in cases affecting foreign Ministers and those between the different States. The salary of the Chief Justice is 20,500 dollars, and that of each of the Associate Justices 20,000 dollars.

The Court of Claims has jurisdiction of suits based on claims against the Government founded on the Constitution and laws of the United States or arising out of contracts entered into with the Government and not sounding in tort. The United States Customs Court (formerly the Board of General Appraisers) has jurisdiction in customs cases. The Court of Customs Appeals passes upon appeals from decisions of the United States Customs Court involving questions as to the classification of merchandise under tariff Acts and the rates of duty to which various articles are liable.

The District of Columbia, in which the seat of the National Government is located, has a Juvenile Court, a Municipal Court, a Police Court, a Supreme Court, and a Court of Appeals.

Most of the more important territorial and insular possessions of the United States, except the Philippines, have two systems of Courts, one corresponding to the Courts of the States to adjudicate cases arising under laws enacted by the territorial or insular legislatures, and the other, the United States Courts, to pass on cases involving Federal Law. The Philippine Islands have no Federal District Court.

Pauperism.

On January 1, 1923, there were 78,090 paupers in the almshouses of the United States, being 71.5 per 100,000.

Finance.

The following table gives what the Treasury terms 'Ordinary receipts and expenditures.' 'Ordinary receipts' include receipts from customs, internal revenue, direct tax, public lands, and 'Miscellaneous,' but do not include receipts from loans, premiums, or Treasury notes, or revenues of Post-Office Department. 'Ordinary expenses' include disbursements for War, Navy,

Indians, pensions, payments for interest, and 'Miscellaneous,' but do not include payments for premiums, principal of public debt, or disbursements for postal service paid from revenues thereof.

On June 10, 1921, the President approved an Act to provide a National Budget System and an independent Audit of Government Accounts. This provided for an annual budget system for the first time in the history of the United States.

<sup>2</sup> Deduct.

On June 30, 1927, the cash balance in the general fund of the Treasury, exclusive of the gold reserve against United States notes and trust funds, held for the redemption of gold and silver certificates and Treasury notes of 1890, for which they are pledged, and after deducting current liabilities, amounted to 234,057,410 dollars.

National debt on June 30 of the years shown:—

Year	Gross Debt	Year	Gross Debt
	Dollars		Dollars
1900	1,263,416,913	1923	22,349,687,758

1922	22,964,079,190	1927	18,510,174,266

The gross debt on June 30, 1927, was made up as follows:—Debt bearing no interest, 244,523,065 dollars; matured debt on which interest has ceased, 14,707,235 dollars; and interest-bearing debt (between 2 and 4½ per cent.) 18,250,943,966 dollars. The net debt, including matured interest obligations, etc.—that is, what remains after deducting the cash in the Treasury from the gross debt plus matured interest obligations, etc., was 18,422,283,459 dollars.

The National Bureau of Economic Research, New York, which has been engaged since 1920 in a study of the American national income, estimates that the latter has increased from 27,100,000,000 dollars, of current purchasing power, in 1909, to 82,682,000,000 dollars in 1926:—

The Department believes that the foregoing figures represent more than 95 per cent. of all foreign issues, both public and private.

STATE FINANCE.

The revenues required for the administration of the separate States are derived from direct taxation, chiefly in the form of a tax on property real and personal; and the greater part of such revenue is collected and expended by the local authorities, county, township, or school district.

For details see the separate States.

Defence.

I. A R M Y.

The Army of the United States, as authorised under the Act of Congress of June 4, 1920, consists of the Regular Army, the National Guard while in the service of the United States, and the Organised Reserves, including the Officers' Reserve Corps and the Enlisted Reserve Corps.

Original or first enlistments in the Regular Army are for one or three years at the option of the soldier, but all re-enlistments are for three-year periods. Enlisted men are classified in seven grades. The pay of the lowest grade, or private, is 21 dollars per month (about 4 shillings a day at normal exchange rates), and that of the highest grade, or master sergeant, is 126 dollars per month. In addition enlisted men receive an increase of 5 per cent. of their base pay for each 4 years of service in the army, the total increase not to exceed 25 per cent. Certain enlisted men also receive additional pay as specialists, the maximum addition under this head being 30 dollars per month.

The strength of the Regular Army, as authorised by Congress for the year 1928, was 12,079 officers and 125,000 enlisted men exclusive of Philippine Scouts for whom the appropriations allow of 6,445. The authorised number of warrant officers is 1,262.

The actual strength at the end of June 1927 was 133,268 all ranks.

The war organisation and establishments of the Regular Army on mobilisation are as follows:—

Army Corps . . .	83,378	Infantry Brigade . . .	6,306
Infantry Division . . .	19,765	Artillery Brigade . . .	3,390
Cavalry Division . . .	7,639

For plans of mobilisation, war and demobilisation the United States is divided into 3 Army areas, which for administration and training are subdivided into 9 Corps areas.

At the end of June, 1927, the United States Army troops stationed abroad were as follows:—

Philippines . . .	12,189	Alaska . . .	257
Hawaii . . .	14,433	Miscellaneous <sup>1</sup> . . .	1,734
Panama . . .	8,645
China . . .	1,015
Porto Rico . . .	1,161	Total . . .	39,434

The Officers' Reserve Corps consists of officers of all grades, including general officers, organised into sections corresponding to the various branches of the Regular Army. In the higher grade it is at present composed principally of men who served as officers during the World War, and on June 30, 1927, had a strength of 110,014. These officers may be called for training not exceeding 15 days each year, and with their own consent may be ordered to active service at any time and for any period, provided that the appropriations for the purpose are not exceeded.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps, maintained for the purpose of keeping up the strength of the Officers' Reserve Corps, is organised into units at civil educational establishments. It is divided into a Senior Division, formed mainly at the universities, and a Junior Division, formed mainly at the secondary schools. On June 30, 1927, 108,957 students were enrolled in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, of whom 70,809 were enrolled in senior units and 38,148 in junior units. Students of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps before being commissioned in the Officers' Reserve Corps must complete the four years' military training prescribed, which includes two summer training camps of a period of six weeks each.

The Enlisted Reserve Corps consists of men voluntarily enlisted therein who have qualifications making them eligible for enlistment in the Regular Army. On June 30, 1927, the Enlisted Reserve Corps had a strength of 5,735. Provided the appropriations for the purpose are not exceeded, enlisted reservists may be called up for training not exceeding fifteen days each year, and with their own consent may be ordered to active service at any time and for any period.

The National Guard, or organised militia, is maintained by the several States with the aid of grants from the Federal Government. It is organised into the same arms of the service as the Regular Army, and is supplied by the Federal Government with uniforms, arms, and equipment of the same type as issued to the Regular Army. Service in the National Guard is purely voluntary. When Congress shall have authorised the use of the armed land forces of the United States for any purpose requiring the use of troops in excess of those of the Regular Army, the President may draft into the military service of the United States any or all members of the National Guard, to serve for the period of the war or emergency. In certain emergencies the President may also call forth the National Guard, for service within the continental limits of the United States, without reference to Congress. The strength of the National Guard as presented by law is 435,000, but is limited at present to 186,000. The actual strength on June 30, 1927, was 181,142. Enlistment is for three years, with re-enlistments for one year or three years. Minimum training required includes 48 drill periods yearly, each of not less than one and one-half hours' duration, in addition to fifteen days' training in encampments or manoeuvres. For these drill periods, pay for each drill attended is provided, under certain conditions, for officers and men at approximately one-thirtieth of the monthly pay for like grades in the Regular Army.

Citizens' military training camps are operated during the summer months, at which thousands of young men acquire military training each year, without cost to themselves. Four courses are provided, the highest of which has as its object the training of non-commissioned officers and specialists of the Regular Army, National Guard, and Organised Reserves with a view to qualifying them for service as officers in the Officers' Reserve Corps. Civilians attending the highest course must have had prior military training equal to that obtainable in the three lower courses.

The President is Commander-in-Chief of both the Army and the Navy. The Secretary of War controls the Army with the aid of two Assistant Secretaries and a Chief of Staff. The former have supervision of the procurement of all military supplies, and are charged with the mobilisation of industrial establishments for wartime needs, while the latter is entrusted with the general supervision of the Army.

Although the infantry during the war were chiefly armed with a modified Enfield rifle, the Springfield rifle, of American design, remains the standard small arm. The approved calibres of mobile artillery are as follows:—

for the light . . . .	75 mm. gun and 105 mm. howitzer for the medium . . . .	4.7 inch gun and 155 mm. howitzer for the heavy . . . .	155 mm. gun and 8 inch howitzer.

The 155 mm. howitzer is now issued in lieu of the 105 mm. howitzer for the light mobile artillery, pending the development and production of a satisfactory 105 mm. howitzer. The most powerful mobile gun is a 14-inch gun on railway carriage. The most powerful gun is a 16-inch gun on barbette carriage.

In the Budget for 1927-28, 285,000,000 dollars were voted for the army and 20,600,000 dollars for the air corps.

II. NAVY.

As provided under the terms of the Washington Treaty of August 17, 1923, the United States has now 18 capital ships. The replacement tonnage for the battleship class is to be the same as for the British Navy, viz. 525,000 tons. As authorised by Congress on December 18, 1924, the Navy Department is now completing important alterations on the last three of the six oldest battleships. These alterations consist of, first, the installation of additional protection against submarine attack; second, the installation of anti-aircraft deck protection; third, the conversion from coal- to oil-burning; and various other improvements of less importance. While increased elevation of turret guns of these six battleships, and also the seven battleships next in age, is highly recommended in U. S. official naval circles, no legislation on the matter is pending before Congress. The construction of two 10,000-ton light cruisers, the Pensacola and Salt Lake City, has been commenced, and the contracts for the remaining six vessels of this type have been awarded. The Secretary's annual reports stress that there is a deficiency in fast cruisers, submarines and aircraft. The aircraft carriers, Saratoga and Lexington, commenced as battle cruisers, and the conversion of which was permitted by the terms of the Washington Agreement, are nearing completion.

The Air Service is an integral part of the Fleet. For the fiscal year 1927-28 a sum of 20,100,000 dollars is devoted to it. This sum is exclusive of personnel and certain establishment charges. In addition, authority was given to enter into certain contracts which will involve the expenditure of 9,480,000 dollars in future years.

The gross naval expenditures have recently been as follows: 1925-26, 317,402,328 dollars; 1926-27, 319,917,575 dollars. During these two years the amounts for new construction have been respectively 37,444,000 dollars and 33,275,000 dollars. For the fiscal year 1927-28 the naval appropriation is 331,271,227 dollars, which allows expenditure of 28,815,000 dollars for new construction and modernisation. This latter item provides for completing the Saratoga and Lexington, advancing work on the eight light cruisers 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, completing the submarine V4, advancing work on the fleet submarines V5 and V6, and completing six river gunboats.

The total number of enlisted men and marines was reduced, subsequent to the Washington Treaty, to 115,000, and in 1922-23 there was a further reduction to 86,000 enlisted men and 19,500 marines. The current appropriation provides for approximately 83,000 enlisted men and 18,000 marines. The establishment of permanent officers has been little reduced.

The American Navy is administered by the Secretary of the Navy, as the head of the executive departments, known as the Department of the Navy. The Secretary has an Advisory Council, the most important Naval member of which is the Chief of Operations, who is charged by law with the operations of the Fleet and with the preparations and readiness of plans for its use in war. The other members of the Council are the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; the Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, handling principally the officer and enlisted personnel of the Navy and the Chiefs of the following bureaux: Construction and Repair; Engineering; Aeronautics (constituted 1921-22); Supplies and Accounts; Yards and Docks; Ordnance; and Medicine and Surgery; also the Commandant of the Marine Corps and the Judge Advocate-General. The Chief of Operations is also President of the Naval General Board, which is an advisory body of senior officers, and is consulted on important questions of policy, including the number and types of ships that should constitute the Fleet.

The Government navy yards and construction and repairing establishments are at Portsmouth, N.H.; Boston, Mass.; Brooklyn, N.Y.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Washington, D.C.; Norfolk, Va.; Charleston, S.C.; Mare Island, Cal.; Puget Sound, Wash.; and Pearl Harbour, Hawaii; and naval stations are at Newport, R.I.; New London, Conn.; Key West, Fla.; Pensacola, Fla.; New Orleans, La.; San Diego, Cal.; Guantanamo, Cuba; Tutuila, Samoa; Cavite, P.I.; Guam; St. Thomas, W.I.; Balboa, C.Z. The naval training stations are at Hampton Roads, Va.; San Diego, Cal.; Newport, R.I.; and Great Lakes, Ill. A 20-year development programme for navy yards and naval bases has been approved by the Secretary, but no considerable appropriations have been granted to further the programme.

The Atlantic and Pacific Fleets have been united in a single command as the 'United States Fleet.'

The following is a classified statement of the strength of the United States Navy on September 1, 1925, 1926, and 1927. The whole Fleet is separated into the First Line and Second Line, the latter comprising the older ships which have little fighting value. In the following summary, vessels unserviceable for war purposes, gunboats, yachts, tugs, training-ships, &c., are not included:—

	Effective September 1.

Other vessels of the United States navy may be summarised. There are 4 mine-layers; 3 modern gunboats; about 50 small 'eagle' patrol vessels, and 34 submarine-chaser patrol vessels; about 15 old gunboats and yachts rated as patrol vessels; 9 tenders for destroyers, 2 for aircraft, and 9 for submarines; 3 repair ships; 5 colliers and 18 oilers; and a large number of miscellaneous auxiliaries, mine-sweepers and tugs.

The main strength of the destroyer flotillas lies in the first-line boats, of which there are 148 35-knot boats, many of them reaching 1,215 tons, and carrying 4 4-in. guns, 1 3-in. anti-aircraft, and 4 21-in. triple torpedo-tubes; 109 earlier 35-knot boats (1917-20), 14 of them fitted for mine-laying; and 19 29-30-knot boats (1912-17). No destroyers are now building for the United States.

The first-line submarine flotilla comprises 49 of the S class, 800-993 tons, 6 fleet submarines built, and 3 building or completing—a total of 58. There are also 65 second-line submarines.

In the Budget for 1928-29 it is proposed to include 362,167,020 dollars for naval expenditure.

In 1925 there were 6,371,640 farms, of which 3,868,332 were operated by owners, 40,700 by managers, and 2,462,608 by tenants.

The farm population on January 1, 1927, was estimated at 27,892,000, a decrease of 649,000 over January 1, 1926, while the latter was a decrease of 441,000 over that of 1925.

The estimated gross value at farm of all crops and animal products was, in 1923 and 1924, 16,672,000,000 dollars; in 1925, 16,817,000,000 dollars; and in 1926 (preliminary estimate), 16,566,000,000 dollars.

The areas and produce of the principal cereal crops for three years are shown in the subjoined tables.

The cotton production in 1926 was grown in the following States (in bales, 500 lbs. gross): Texas, 5,606,000; Mississippi, 1,884,000; Oklahoma, 1,760,000; Arkansas, 1,546,000; Alabama, 1,497,000; Georgia, 1,493,000; North Carolina, 1,204,000; South Carolina 997,000; Louisiana, 828,000; Tennessee, 450,000; Missouri, 218,000; California, 131,000; Arizona, 122,000; New Mexico, 75,000; Virginia, 51,000; Florida, 32,000; all other, 17,000.

In 1926 there were under tobacco 1,664,700 acres, which yielded 1,323,388,000 lbs. of tobacco. The chief tobacco-growing States were North Carolina, 574,000 acres, yielding 393,190,000 lbs.; Kentucky, 426,000 acres, yielding 374,880,000 lbs.; Virginia, 188,000 acres, yielding 132,352,000 lbs.; Tennessee, 137,000 acres, yielding 106,997,000 lbs.; South Carolina, 81,000 acres, yielding 57,510,000 lbs.; Wisconsin, 29,000 acres, yielding 33,350,000 lbs.; Ohio, 44,000 acres, yielding 38,189,000 lbs.; Pennsylvania, 33,000 acres, yielding 43,560,000 lbs.; Connecticut, 22,000 acres, yielding 29,346,000 lbs.; Maryland, 32,000 acres, yielding 28,800,000 lbs.; Georgia, 52,000 acres, yielding 39,963,000 lbs.; Indiana, 17,000 acres, yielding 14,913,000 lbs.; Massachusetts, 6,000 acres, yielding 9,412,000 lbs.

The following table exhibits the number of farm animals in 1910 (April 15), 1920 (January 1), 1927 and 1928 (January 1):

The value of farm animals in the United States on January 1, 1928, was:—Cows and heifers 2 years old and over, kept for milk, 1,699,526,000 dollars; all cattle and calves, 3,014,086,000 dollars; total value of all farm animals, 5,996,922,000 dollars.

In 1926, 120,786,487,000 pounds of milk, 2,072,766,000 pounds of butter, 427,416,000 pounds of cheese, 1,733,504,000 pounds of condensed milk were produced.

In 1901 the estimated production of wool was 302,502,328 pounds; in 1922, 263,713,000 pounds; in 1923, 268,196,000 pounds; in 1924, 279,375,000 pounds; in 1925, 292,362,000 pounds; and in 1926, 311,501,000 pounds.

The preliminary census reports for 1925 show that the value of canned vegetables was 277,346,574 dollars; of canned fruits, 101,910,889 dollars; of dried fruits, 71,978,714 dollars. The total value of canned fruit and vegetable products, in 1925, was 616,067,748 dollars.

II. FORESTS AND FORESTRY.

The United States forests cover 469,500,000 acres, or about one-fifth of the whole country. The classification is as follows:—Virgin timber, 138,100,000 acres; second growth of saw timber size, 113,800,000 acres; second growth of cordwood size or smaller, 136,400,000 acres; non-producing and idle land, 81,200,000 acres. Forests publicly owned, i.e., by Federal, State, and other political divisions, represent 22 per cent. of the total forest land.

The net area of the 159 national forests—i.e., those owned by the Federal Government—on July 1, 1927, was 158,800,424 acres.

The receipts from the National Forests for the last three fiscal years were as follows:—

Fiscal Year	Timber	Grazing	Special Uses, &c.	All Sources
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1924	3,036,396	1,915,561	299,946	5,251,903
1925	2,940,436	1,725,274	334,367	5,000,077
1926	3,866,685	1,421,589	362,387	5,150,661

The principal forest regions of the United States are:—

Region	Forest Land Acreage	Predominant Type
New England. . . . .	25,708,000	Hardwoods, Pine, Spruce
Middle Atlantic . . . . .	28,678,000	Hardwoods and Southern Pine

Redwood . . . . .	88,485,000,000	Total . . . . .	1,141,081,000,000
Sugar Pine . . . . .

The lumber cut in the United States in 1926 was estimated at 36,935,930,000 board feet. Of this, 2,699,367,000 feet were exported, and 33,330,892,000 feet was distributed by rail, water, or other means to various domestic consuming centres. The remainder was added to stocks during the year. Imported sawed lumber in 1926 amounted to 1,940,410,000 board feet. The per capita consumption of lumber in the United States for that year is placed at 305 board feet, a decrease of 15 feet from the average for the three preceding years.

It is estimated that 1,080,000,000 cubic feet of timber is destroyed annually by fire in the forests of the United States, while 1,360,000,000 cubic feet is destroyed by insects, disease, and windfall.

III. MINING.

The following are the statistics of the metallic products of the United States in 1924 and 1925 (long tons, 2,240 lbs.; short tons, 2,000 lbs.). The values are: For iron, at point of production; for nickel and platinum, the values at New York City; for copper, lead and zinc, the values are those of sales; for quicksilver, the value at San Francisco in 1924 and New York in 1925.

The approximate total value of the mineral products in 1924 was 5,305,800,000 dollars; in 1925, 5,677,630,000 dollars.

The total production of coal from 1807, the date of the earliest record, to the close of 1925 was 16,815,968,028 short tons.

The precious metals in 1925 were mined mainly in California, Colorado, Alaska, South Dakota, and Arizona for gold, and Utah, Montana, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, and Colorado for silver. The production of gold and silver in the United States from 1792 to 1925 was as follows:—

Year	Gold		Silver
	Quantity	Value	Quantity	Value
	Ozs. troy	Dollars	Ozs. troy	Dollars
1792-1847 . . .	1,186,977	24,537,000	309,500	404,500
1848-1872 . . .	58,279,781	1,204,750,000	118,568,200	157,749,900

Total . . .	310,221,423	4,345,662,500	2,873,581,865	2,344,996,442

Production of gold in the United States in 1927 was 2,178,197 ounces, valued at 45,027,300 dollars; of silver, 58,646,622 ounces, valued at 33,252,653 dollars on the basis of 56·7 cents per ounce, the average New York price of bar silver.

Precious stones are found in considerable varieties in the United States, including sapphires (in Montana), turquoise, tourmaline, garnets, beryl, agates, amethyst, ruby, topaz, &c.

IV. MANUFACTURES.

The following table shows the condition of manufacturing industries in the United States as reported at each census from 1900 to 1925. The censuses of 1921, 1923 and 1925 cover establishments with products valued at 5,000 dollars or more, whereas at prior censuses the corresponding limit was 500 dollars. The omission of data for establishments having products valued at 500 dollars or more, but less than 5,000 dollars, affects very slightly the totals except for number of establishments, as establishments of this class in 1921 (53,999) while representing 21·6 per cent. of the total number of establishments, only reported six-tenths of one per cent. of the total number of wage earners and three-tenths of one per cent. of the total value of products.

In the statistics shown below, data for establishments engaged in automobile repairing for 1914 to 1919 and for coffee roasting and spice grinding for 1914 to 1923 have been omitted, as no data have been collected for these industries at subsequent dates.

For comparison of broad types of manufacturing, the industries covered by the census of manufactures have been divided into 16 general groups. The following table presents statistics for these groups:—

The following table shows the relative importance of industries with products valued at 1,000,000,000 dollars or over in 1925:—

Industry	Number of establishments	Wage earners, average number	Wages	Cost of materials	Value of products
			Expressed in thousands of dollars
Motor vehicles (not including motor cycles)	297	197,728	341,210	2,108,192	3,198,123

In certain textile industries the average number of active spindles and looms in the years 1923 to 1926, was as follows: <sup>1</sup>

Year	Spindles in operation			Looms in operation
	Cotton	Woollen	Worsted	Woollen and Worsted	Carpet and Rugs
1923	34,681,000	1,905,637	2,210,034	63,919	7,853
1924	31,186,000	1,832,715	1,807,810	55,568	7,087
1925	32,642,000	1,812,925	1,805,532	54,158	7,246
1926	32,348,000	1,668,008	1,813,345	49,129	6,562

<sup>1</sup> These figures show the average number of active spindles and looms, based on monthly returns from about 97 per cent. of the manufacturers.

The value of the output of certain textile industries in 1923 and 1925 was:—

Nature of products	1923	1925
	Dollars	Dollars
Carpets and rugs, wool, except rag	199,481,000	188,903,000

Silk goods	761,822,000	808,979,000
Woollen and worsted goods	1,062,559,000	957,790,000

The National Industrial Conference Board estimates that the total manufacturing production in the United States increased about 65 per cent. in volume from 1914 to 1925, or at a rate of about  $3\frac{1}{2}$  times as fast as the population which increased less than 18 per cent. The production of the manufacturing industries per wage earner employed in 1925 was 35 per cent. greater than in 1914. The amount of installed power back of every factory worker increased 32 per cent. between 1914 and 1925.

The development of the iron and steel industries since 1875 is shown by the following figures, supplied by the American Iron and Steel Institute:—

The production of tin plates and terne plates was in 1904, 461,134 gross tons (census); in 1920, 1,445,545 gross tons; in 1921, 794,274 gross tons; in 1922, 1,287,895 gross tons; in 1923, 1,506,862 gross tons; in 1924, 1,418,654 gross tons; in 1925, 1,657,795 gross tons; and in 1926, 1,782,306 gross tons.

In 1925 there were 310 blast furnaces in active plants with a daily capacity of 136,086 tons; and in 1923, 363 (in active establishments), with a daily capacity of 141,555 tons. In 1923 the output of pig-iron was 40,162,855 gross tons, value 984,983,493 dollars; and in 1925, 36,495,562 tons, value 744,733,899 dollars. Active Bessemer, or modified Bessemer steel plants in 1925 had 102 converters; and in 1923, 105; with total daily capacity of 55,239 gross tons of ingots or direct steel castings, double turn, in 1925; and 57,723 tons in 1923. Active open-hearth steel plants in 1925 had 1,141 basic and acid furnaces; and in 1923, 1,135; daily capacity of steel, in 1925, 144,699 gross tons; and in 1923, 131,658 tons. The crucible steel furnaces in active steel plants in 1925 were 70 of 390 gross tons daily capacity, on double turn; and in 1923, 100 of 649 tons; and the electric steel furnaces numbered 178 of 4,383 tons in 1925, and 156 of 3,217 tons in 1923.

The total value of products of the steel works and rolling mills in 1923 was 3,154,325,000 dollars; and in 1925, 2,946,068,000 dollars. The values of the principal products, excluding the values of amounts consumed in the same works, were as follows:—

In the United States the values are fixed not according to average prices, but according to invoices or shipping papers, which the importers and exporters have to produce. For imports the invoices are signed by an American Consul; for exports the shipping papers are signed by the exporter or agents at the port of shipment. The quantities and values are determined by declarations.

The 'most favoured nation' treatment in commerce between Great Britain and the United States was agreed to for 4 years by the treaty of 1815, was extended for 10 years by the treaty of 1818, and indefinitely (subject to 12 months' notice) by that of 1827.

Internal Communications.

On January 1, 1927, the road mileage in State Highway Systems was 287,928, of which 163,059 miles were surfaced roads, and 28,456 graded and drained. There were also, on January 1, 1926, 3,006,082 miles of rural road, of which 521,260 miles were surfaced.

Railway history in the United States commenced in the year 1828. According to Poor's Railway Manual, the extent of railways in operation in 1830 was 23 miles; it rose to 52,922 miles in 1870; to 167,191 miles in 1890. According to the Interstate Commerce Commission's corresponding mileage, it was (year ended on June 30) in 1900, 198,964; in 1910, 249,992; in 1916 (year ended December 31), 266,381; in 1920, 263,821; in 1921, 262,544; in 1922, 261,984; in 1923, 262,482; in 1924, 262,158; in 1925, 261,871; and in 1926, 261,562. The ordinary gauge is 4 ft. 8½ in.

Loading of revenue freight cars for 52 weeks ending December 25, 1926, reached peak of 53,309,644 cars, which was an increase of 2,085,492 cars over the best previous record, that of 1925, and an increase of 4,775,221 cars over that of 1924.

The following table, based on the figures of the Interstate Commerce Commission, shows some railway statistics for 5 years:—

		per 100 square miles of land area	per 10,000 of the population	Number of passengers	Weight of revenue freight in tons
1922	250,413	8.42	22.60	967,409,205	1,840,954,570

1926	249,138	8.38	21.13	860,348,000	2,452,786,000

The total capital (stock and funded debt) outstanding on December 31, 1926, was 21,748,806,000 dollars; the total amount of dividends declared, 473,683,000 dollars; interest accrued on funded debt, 581,709,000 dollars. Equipment in service on Dec. 31, 1926, was as follows: locomotives, including electric, 67,282; freight cars, 2,435,269; passenger train cars, 56,853.

The telegraphs of the United States are largely in the hands of the Western Union Telegraph Company, which had (December 31, 1926) 249,916 miles of pole line and cable, 1,668,293 miles of wire, and 24,688 offices. The receipts of all companies in 1926 were 136,406,026 dollars; expenses 121,098,832 dollars; net income 15,307,194 dollars.

A very large proportion of the telephone business also is controlled by one company. The statistics of this corporation, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and its associated operating companies which together form the 'Bell Telephone System,' are shown in the following table for January 1 of each year:—

	1925	1926	1927	1928

On July 1, 1927, there were 50,266 post offices. The total expenditure of the Postal Service during the year 1926-1927 was 714,577,491 dollars; total receipts, 683,121,988 dollars; excess of expenditures over revenues, 31,455,503 dollars; losses by fire, burglary, bad debts, &c., 50,697 dollars, making the total deficiency in postal revenues 31,506,200 dollars.

Money orders issued during 1926-27 were as follows: domestic, 194,216,619, amounting to 1,647,580,285 dollars; international, 3,783,563, amounting to 68,951,620; total, 197,950,082, amounting to 1,716,531,905 dollars.

For the year ending June 30, 1927, mails were transported by rail on a length of 228,992 miles. The total number of employees in the railway mail service was 20,550. During the year there were 18,114,363,681 distributions and redistributions of pieces of mail, exclusive of registered mail, by railway postal clerks.

On June 30, 1927, the postal savings deposits amounted to 147,359,254 dollars, an increase of 13,180,696 dollars as compared with the previous year.

Currency and Credit.

The monetary system has been monometallic since 1873, gold being the standard. There are a number of different types of currency in circulation, the issuance of which are governed by various laws. Gold coin, gold certificates, silver dollars, Treasury notes of 1890, and United States notes are legal tender to any amount. Subsidiary silver coins are legal tender to an amount of Ten Dollars in one payment.

Gold certificates and silver certificates are always backed dollar for dollar by gold or silver, respectively, held in the Treasury. They are receivable for all public dues and may be held by banks as lawful reserve. Treasury notes of 1890 are redeemable in either gold coin or silver dollars. They are being cancelled when received by the Treasury of the United States and are being replaced by silver certificates. United States notes are legal tender for all debts, public and private, except duties on imports and interest on public debt. Federal Reserve Notes, though not legal tender, are receivable by the government for all public dues and are receivable on all accounts by all Federal Reserve Banks, National Banks, and other member banks of the Federal Reserve System. They are redeemable in gold coin at the Treasury, and in gold or lawful money at any Federal Reserve Bank. National bank notes and Federal Reserve Bank notes are also not legal tender but are receivable for all public dues except duties on imports, and may be used by the Government in all payments except interest on a public debt. They are redeemable in lawful money at the Treasury and at the various banks of issue.

The following statement shows the stock of United States money, including paper currency in circulation in foreign countries and the amount held by the Cuban agencies of the Federal reserve banks, on October 1, 1927 :—

<sup>1</sup> Does not include gold bullion or foreign coin outside the vaults of the Treasury and the Federal reserve banks.

<sup>2</sup> Gold holdings of the Federal reserve banks on this date amounted to 2,961,368,291 dollars, including 2,400,129,301 dollars of gold coin and bullion held by these banks, or held for their account in the Treasury, and all of the gold certificates not included as "in circulation," amounting as shown to 561,258,990 dollars.

<sup>3</sup> Not included in the total. Money held in trust against gold and silver certificates and treasury notes of 1890 is included under gold coin and bullion and standard silver dollars.

<sup>4</sup> Includes gold coin and bullion and standard silver dollars held in the Treasury in trust, dollar for dollar, against gold and silver certificates and treasury notes of 1890 outstanding. The amount of money so held in trust, which is equal to the total amount of certificates and notes of 1890 outstanding (2,093,820,007 dollars), must be deducted from this total before combining it with total money in circulation to arrive at total stock of money in the United States.

The coinage of the United States mints in five calendar years was as follows, in dollars :—

Banking.

The banking system of the United States includes: (1) National banks supervised by the Federal Government, under the National Bank Act of 1863 and subsequent amendments; (2) State banks and trust companies organised under the banking laws of the various States; (3) Federal Reserve banks operating under the general supervision of the Federal Reserve Board as provided in the Federal Reserve Act of December 23, 1913; and (4) banks for extending agricultural credits operating under supervision of the Federal Farm Loan Board.

National banks, numbering 7,832 on October 31, 1927, are required to have a minimum capital of 25,000 dollars. Under certain limitations they are permitted to establish branches within the cities in which they are located. They are authorised to issue circulating notes not in excess of paid-in capital, secured by United States bonds of certain issues deposited with the Treasurer of the United States. The effective limit upon the note circulation of National banks is the amount of bonds eligible as security. On June 30, 1927, less than 675,000,000 dollars of such bonds were outstanding and nearly 666,000,000 dollars of these were on deposit with the Treasurer to secure circulation. National banks on June 30, 1927, reported resources and liabilities as follows:—

For state banking institutions, numbering 18,991 on June 30, 1927, minimum capital and other requirements imposed by state banking codes vary from state to state. In the aggregate these institutions reported for June 30, 1927, loans of 23,000,000,000 dollars, investments of 10,000,000,000 dollars, deposits of 33,000,000,000 dollars, and rediscounts of 448,000,000 dollars.

There is no central bank in the United States. The Federal reserve system, established by Act of December 23, 1913, comprises the Federal Reserve Board of eight members sitting in Washington, and 12 Federal Reserve banks located one in each of the Federal Reserve districts into which the country is divided. Of the Board members, six are appointed for ten-year terms by the President, who designates one to serve as Governor and one as Vice-Governor of the Board. The Secretary of the Treasury and Controller of the Currency are members ex-officio and the Secretary of the Treasury serves ex-officio as Chairman of the Board. This Board prescribes administrative regulations and exercises general supervisory powers. In each Federal Reserve district the capital of the reserve bank is subscribed by member banks of the district in proportion to their capital and surplus. Member banks include all National banks, since these banks are required by law to join the system, and such eligible state banks and trust companies as elect to accept the conditions of membership. On June 30, 1927, the number of state members was 1309. Total resources of member banks—national and state—amounted on this date to 42,810,000,000 dollars, being equal approximately to two-thirds of the resources of all banks in the country. Member banks are required to deposit their reserves in the reserve banks and only deposit credits in the reserve banks count as legal reserve for the member banks. The reserve banks are authorized to issue Federal Reserve notes secured by gold or eligible paper, with a minimum gold reserve of 40 per cent.; to discount eligible paper for member banks; to fix the rate of discount on advances to member banks subject to review and determination of the Federal Reserve Board; to engage in certain open market operations, principally to buy and sell U.S. securities and bankers' acceptances; to function as collection agencies and clearing houses for member banks; and to act as fiscal agents of the United States Government. These banks make no loans to individuals and carry no deposits, except for other banks and for governments. On October 20, 1927, the capital funds and total resources of these banks were as follows:

District	Federal Reserve Bank (in thousands of dollars)	Capital paid in and Surplus (in thousands of dollars)	Total Re-sources	District	Federal Reserve Bank (in thousands of dollars)	Capital paid in and Surplus (in thousands of dollars)	Total Re-sources

Banks operating under the supervision of the Federal Farm Loan Board include the Federal Land Banks (12 in number) and the Joint-Stock Land Banks (54 in number) which extend to farmers mortgage loans amortized over periods of 20 to 35 years; and the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks (12 in number) which extend agricultural credits for periods of from 6 months to 3 years. Loans outstanding of the Federal and Joint-Stock Land Banks amounted on August 31, 1927, to 1,749,393,000 dollars, and of the Federal Intermediate Credit banks, on September 24, 1927, to 62,989,000 dollars.

Savings banks and trust companies reported for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, total savings deposits of 26,090,902,000 dollars belonging to 48,354,784 depositors, an increase of 1,384,710,000 dollars and 1,592,544 depositors over previous year. Actual total is much larger as in 14 states saving deposits are not separately reported.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The dollar of 100 cents is of the par value of 49·32*d.*, or 4·8665 dollars to the pound sterling.

The monetary unit, in accordance with the monetary law of March 14, 1900, is the gold dollar of 25·8 grains (or 1·6718 gramme) ·900 fine. The Government undertakes to maintain parity between gold and silver coin, and in 1890 established a fund of 150,000,000 dollars in gold for the repayment of United States notes and Treasury notes in gold at sight. This fund has been increased to 154,189,000 dollars.

Gold coins in common use are 20, 10 and 5-dollar pieces called double eagles, eagles, and half-eagles. The eagle weighs 258 grains or 16·71818 grammes ·900 fine, and therefore contains 232·2 grains or 15·0464 grammes of fine gold.

The silver dollar weighs 412·5 grains or 26·730 grammes ·900 fine, and therefore contains 371·25 grains or 24·057 grammes of fine silver. Subsidiary silver coins contain 347·22 grains of fine silver per dollar.

Seven kinds of Notes are in circulation in the United States. (1) United States Notes, in denominations of 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 dollars (so-called "Greenbacks") which are covered by a gold reserve of 154 million dollars in the Treasury. (2) Gold Certificates, in denominations of 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000, 5,000, and 10,000 dollars. (3) Silver Certificates in denominations of 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 dollars. (4) Treasury Notes of 1890. (5) Federal Reserve notes in denominations of 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000, 5,000 and 10,000 dollars. (6) National Bank Notes in denominations of 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 dollars. (7) Federal Reserve Bank Notes. Of the note issues only United States Notes, Treasury Notes of 1890, and gold certificates are legal tender.

British weights and measures are usually employed, but the old Winchester gallon and bushel are used instead of the new or imperial standards. They are:—

Wine Gallon = 0·83333 gallon.

Ale Gallon = 1·01695 „

Bushel . = 0·9692 imperial bushel.

Instead of the British cwt. a Cental, of 100 pounds, is used; the short ton contains 2,000 lbs.; the long ton, 2,240 lbs.

ARIZONA.

Government.—Arizona was admitted into the Union as a Sovereign State on February 14, 1912. In the laws which the first State Legislature of Arizona enacted, the affairs of State government are placed under direct control of the people, who can at any time exercise the machinery of the Initiative, Referendum and the Recall. Among the amendments to the Constitution upon which the people voted in 1912 was one giving the State power to engage in industrial pursuits.

The State Senate consists of 19 members, and the House of Representatives 46. The State is represented in the National Congress by one member of the lower house and two Senators.

Governor.—George W. P. Hunt, 1927–29 (6,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—James H. Kerby.

The State capital is Phoenix (population in 1924 estimated at 45,000). Tucson had a population of 20,292 in 1920. The State is divided into 14 counties.

Area, Population and Instruction.—Area 113,810 square miles, including 146 square miles of water. The Indian reservations had an area of 33,891 square miles in 1926, with a population of 44,729. According to the 1920 census, population is 334,162.

The population in four census years was:—

1890	86,886	1,357	88,243	0.8	1910	202,345	2,009	204,354	1.8
1900	121,088	1,848	122,931	1.1	1920	326,157	8,005	334,162	2.9

The estimated population in 1925 was 407,702; on July 1, 1928, 474,000. In 1920 the population by race and sex was:—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . . .	159,345	5,859	1,370	17,028	183,602

The National Guard consists (June 30, 1927) of 57 officers, 1 warrant officer and 848 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Arizona, with its dry climate, is not well suited for agriculture, but along the watercourses and where irrigation is used the soil is productive. The wide pasture-lands in this State are favourable for the rearing of cattle and sheep. Several large reservoirs for the storage of water have been constructed by the United States and State Government, notably the Roosevelt dam, which supplies water to the rich Salt River Valley District, of which Phoenix is the principal city. The Government has completed the Yuma project, by which the waters of the lower Colorado River are brought to the Arizona side under the river by means of an inverted syphon. Other similar irrigation and hydroelectric projects are the San Carlos Dam, to empound the waters of the Gila river; the Mormon Flats Dam, on the Salt River, about 30 miles below the Roosevelt Dam, for furnishing electrical power to many of the largest copper mines in the State and many of the smaller cities and towns; and another dam on the Salt River, between the Roosevelt and Mormon Flats Dams.

In 1925 Arizona contained 10,802 farms, with 10,101,361 acres of pasture land and 578,246 acres of crop land, out of a total farm area of 11,065,291 acres. The total value of all farm property was (in 1925) 194,048,096 dollars, and the most important crops (1926) were as follows:—Cotton, 115,000 bales; wheat, 950,000 bushels; corn, 1,120,000 bushels; citrus fruits (oranges, lemons, tangerines, and grape fruit), 150,000 boxes. On January 1, 1928, there were 98,000 horses, 35,000 milch cows, and 546,000 other cattle, 1,267,000 sheep, and 17,000 swine. The wool clip in 1926 amounted to 6,758,000 pounds of wool. The national forests in the State have an area (June 30, 1926) of 11,316,232 acres, and the Grand Canyon has been made a National Park.

The mining industries of the State are important, producing copper, gold, silver, asbestos, lead, and zinc. The production of gold in 1926 amounted to 230,000 ounces; silver, 7,508,000 ounces, value 4,685,000 dollars; copper (1926), 729,325,000 pounds; and lead (1926) 10,646 short tons. The total value of all minerals mined in 1925 was 114,203,000 dollars. The leading industry, the smelting and refining of copper, had production in 1925 valued at 106,926,324 dollars.

In 1925 there were 2,409 miles of steam railroad. The state has 2,031 miles of road of which 1,421 had been surfaced by 1927.

On June 30, 1926, Arizona had 15 national banks with resources of 27,150,000 dollars, demand deposits of 12,777,000 dollars, savings deposits of 6,049,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 19,180,000 dollars.

CALIFORNIA.

Constitution and Government.—California, though unexplored and practically unknown to Europeans, was from its discovery down to 1846 politically associated with Mexico. On July 5, 1846, the American flag was hoisted at Monterey, and a proclamation was issued declaring California to be a portion of the United States, and on February 2, 1849, by the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, the territory was formally ceded by Mexico to the United States, and was admitted to the Union September 9, 1850.

The State Legislature is composed of the Senate of forty members (not more than one senator to a county), elected for terms of four years—half the number being elected each two years—and the Assembly, eighty members, elected for two years. Regular sessions are held biennially in the odd numbered years.

The qualifications for eligibility to the Senate or Assembly are citizenship of the State for three years and residence in the district for one year.

California is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 11 Representatives.

Governor.—Clement Calhoun Young, 1927–31 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—F. C. Jordan.

California is divided into fifty-eight counties, one of which—San Francisco—has a combined county and city government. The legislative authority is vested in a board of 18 supervisors elected from the city and county at large. Each of the other counties is governed by a board of 5 supervisors elected from districts. The seat of the State Government is at Sacramento.

Area and Population.—Area 158,297 square miles (2,645 square miles being water).

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was as follows :

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per Sq. Mile
1870	555,975	4,272	560,247	3·6
1900	1,474,008	11,045	1,485,053	9·5
1910	2,355,904	21,645	2,377,549	15·3
1920	3,388,098	38,763	3,426,861	22·0

<sup>1</sup> Including Indians and Asiatics.

Estimated population, July 1, 1928, 4,556,000.

In 1920 the population by sex and race was :—

	White	Negro	Chinese <sup>1</sup>	Japanese	Indian
Male	1,710,223	19,837	29,032	45,414	9,085
Female	1,554,488	18,926	5,043	26,538	8,275
Total	3,264,711	38,763	34,075	71,952	17,360

Of the total population in 1920, 1,813,591 were males, and 1,613,270 were females (68·0 per cent. were urban, and 1·1 per cent. Negro).

There are about 27 Indian reservations in the State, with a total area (1926) of 674 square miles. There were 18,913 Indians in the State in 1926.

Three-fourths of the population of California are of American birth. Of the 681,662 persons of white foreign birth in 1920, representing 19·9 per cent. of the total population of the State, 67,180 (9·9 per cent.) were German, 45,308 (6·6 per cent.) Irish, 53,572 (8·6 per cent.) English, 16,597 Scotch, 59,562 Canadian, 20,387 French, 88,502 (13·0 per cent.) Italian, 31,925 Swedish, 86,610 (12·7 per cent.) Mexicans, and 10,313 Greeks, with a sprinkling of Portuguese, Spanish, Norwegians, Danes, Swiss, Russians, and Armenians.

The estimated population of the larger cities on July 1, 1925, was: Los Angeles, 1,260,000; San Francisco, 622,000; Oakland, 280,000; Long Beach, 125,000; San Diego, 106,047; Sacramento, 100,000; Fresno, 70,000; Pasadena, 80,643; and Berkeley, 74,764. In 1926 the death-rate was 14.2 per 1,000; the birth-rate, 19.9; and the marriage-rate, 13.7.

Religion and Instruction.—In the matter of religious association all churches are represented in California, the Roman Catholic being much stronger than any other single church; next are Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists, Disciples of Christ and Episcopalians.

Education is compulsory for children from 8-16 years of age for eight months in the year. In 1926-27, the elementary schools had an enrolment of 659,188 pupils (339,016 boys and 320,172 girls), with 21,970 teachers; the public high schools had an enrolment of 472,516 pupils (234,195 boys and 238,321 girls), and 9,868 teachers; public kindergartens had an enrolment of 73,001 pupils and 1,310 teachers. The total expenditure during the year 1926-27 for the above branches of education was 141,577,131 dollars. The 7 teachers' colleges had 10,552 students (1,328 men and 9,224 women) and 187 teachers.

There are in California three great universities—the University of California (State), Leland Stanford Junior University, and the University of Southern California. The University of California comprises the following departments of resident instruction and research: At Berkeley, the Colleges of Letters and Science, Agriculture, Chemistry, Commerce, Mechanics, Mining, and Engineering, the Graduate Division and the Schools of Jurisprudence, Education, and Architecture; at San Francisco, the George Williams Hooper Foundation for Medical Research and the Schools of Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, and Fine Arts, and the Hastings College of the Law (affiliated); at Los Angeles, the Southern branch of the University of California, including a College of Letters and Science and a Teacher's College, also the Los Angeles Medical Department, a graduate school; at Mount Hamilton, the Lick Astronomical Department; at Riverside and Davis, Teaching and Research Branches of the College of Agriculture; at La Jolla, the Scripps Institution of Oceanography. In 1926-27, during the regular college year, there were at Berkeley, 722 officers of instruction and 10,962 students; at Los Angeles, 278 officers of instruction and 6,767 students; at other centres, 505 officers of instruction and research and 1,062 students: a grand total (with deduction for duplicates) of 1,518 officers and 18,702 resident students. The total annual income of the University is about 10,200,000 dollars. Leland Stanford Junior University near Palo Alto was chartered in 1885, and opened its doors to students in 1891. It has an endowment now amounting to about 40,370,185 dollars in interest-bearing funds, of which 22,000,000 dollars, besides large landed estates, was given by Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford in memory of their son. In 1927 it had 493 professors and teachers and 3,434 students. The University of Southern California at Los Angeles (Meth. Episcopal) had 550 instructors and 12,217 students (1925-26). It has an endowment of one million dollars. California (State) Polytechnic School is located at San Luis Obispo.

California has a comprehensive library system, at the head of which stands the State Library at Sacramento.

Charity.—On December 1, 1926, there were approximately 12,000 persons in county hospitals and almshouses, one half of whom were custodial cases and the others required hospital care. There were approximately 5,500 men and 85 women in state penitentiaries and 1,000 juveniles in state reform schools. On June 30, 1926, there were 3,900 boarding homes caring for 5,800 children as well as numerous other specialized institutions for the care of the sick, the blind and others.

Finance and Defence.—For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, the receipts and disbursements of all State funds was as follows :—

	Dollars

The assessed value of taxable property on June 30, 1927, was 7,647,025,607 dollars. The net bonded state debt amounted to 104,808,500 dollars on June 30, 1927.

The Mare Island Navy Yard, the most important of the Federal naval establishments on the Pacific coast, is situated in California about 25 miles north of San Francisco, and there are United States Army posts at San Francisco, Benicia, Monterey, and San Diego. The National Guard, on June 30, 1927, consisted of 372 officers, 6 warrant officers and 4,967 enlisted men.

Agriculture and Forestry.—Extending seven hundred miles from north to south, and intersected by several ranges of mountains, California has almost every variety of climate, from the very wet to the very dry, and from the temperate to the semi-tropical. Irrigation is extensively practised. At the date of the 1925 census there were 136,409 farms, comprising 27,516,955 acres, of which 8,401,342 acres were crop land and 16,871,635 acres were pasture lands. The value of farms, lands and buildings in 1925 was 3,152,488,322 dollars.

The cereal crops in 1926 were: maize, 2,510,000 bushels; wheat, 12,015,000 bushels; oats, 5,070,000 bushels; barley, 32,400,000 bushels; rice, 7,986,000 bushels; beans, 5,460,000 bushels. The fruit crops in 1926 included wine grapes, 414,000 tons; table grapes, 383,000 tons; raisins, 272,000 tons; oranges, 28,167,000 boxes; lemons, 7,712,000 boxes; apples, 10,350,000 bushels; pears, 207,000 tons; figs, 11,400 tons; peaches, 541,000 tons; apricots, 176,000 tons; plums, 71,000 tons; prunes, 150,000 tons; cherries, 20,000 tons; olives, 12,000 tons; almonds, 16,000 tons; and walnuts, 15,000 tons.

The hay crop is the most valuable of all crops grown in the State. In 1926 it yielded 5,149,000 tons. Hops amounted to 8,000,000 pounds, and cotton 64,000,000 pounds. The values of the main vegetable crops (1925) were: lettuce, 13,134,000 dollars; cantaloupes, 9,872,000 dollars; asparagus, 7,698,000 dollars; tomatoes, 7,678,000 dollars. Of the main field and fruit crops, 11,787,200 tons were harvested in 1926; and the total value to the farmer of the main field and fruit crops was 397,764,000 dollars.

On January 1, 1928, the farm animals were: 290,000 horses, 53,000 mules, 602,000 milch cows, 1,995,000 other cattle, 3,528,000 sheep, and 614,000 swine. The total value of all live-stock on January 1, 1925, was 148,575,000 dollars, and the value of livestock products produced and sold from the farms in 1924 is estimated at 165,000,000 dollars. The wool-clip in 1926 is estimated at 20,276,000 pounds.

There are in the State 20 national forests covering a total net area of 19,164,573 acres: 4 national parks with a total net area of 928,021 acres; 5 State parks with a total area of 13,065 acres; and private timber land with a total area of 5,800,000 acres. The total annual value of lumber produced is now approximately 50,000,000 dollars for pine, and 35,000,000 dollars for redwood.

Mining, Manufactures, etc.—Gold was first discovered in 1848. In 1926 the gold output (576,798·4 ounces) was valued at 11,922,481 dollars, and the silver output (2,022,460 fine ounces) valued at 1,262,015 dollars. Other mineral products were copper, 83,521,544 pounds, valued at 4,693,014 dollars, and 8,067,873 pounds of lead (645,429 dollars); zinc, 20,433,887 pounds, valued at 1,532,522 dollars; and quicksilver, 5,892 flasks (of 75 pounds net), valued at 516,383 dollars. California is one of three most important petroleum-producing States of the Union (Oklahoma and Texas being the other two); in 1926 the output reached 224,673,281 barrels. Natural gas utilised amounted to 214,547,477 cubic feet, valued at 19,465,347 dollars. Portland cement (13,797,173 barrels) was valued at 25,269,678 dollars. From California comes the whole of the borate materials produced in the United States. The output in 1926 was 47,605 short tons, valued at 1,625,298 dollars. The State also produced pyrite (100,896 short tons, valued at 466,038 dollars); magnesite (50,915 short tons); brick and hollow building tile; pottery clay, 797,461 tons; granite; mineral water; salt, 311,761 tons; soda, 63,333 tons. Bismuth, asbestos, manganese, lithium, tungsten, chromium, infusorial earth, ochre, and a great variety of precious stones are found in the State. The value of all the minerals produced in 1925 was 434,519,660 dollars; in 1926, 450,315,904 dollars.

In California in 1925 there were 9,638 manufacturing establishments, employing 249,552 wage-earners, using materials costing 1,474,887,292 dollars, and giving an output worth 2,442,952,104 dollars. Petroleum refining, the chief industry, reached a production in 1925 valued at 369,581,955 dollars; motion picture industry, 62,821,194 dollars; and meat packing, 115,787,976.

The coast and river fisheries are important, giving employment to from 12,000 to 15,000 persons. Salmon, tuna and sardines are the most important varieties of fish taken, but as many as one hundred and thirty different varieties of fish are found in the markets of the State. From 15,000 to 20,000 tons of fish meal and two and one-half to three million gallons of fish oil are produced from the offal from cannery operations.

Commerce and Communications.—The chief commercial ports of California are San Francisco and Los Angeles, through which in the year ending Dec. 31, 1926, the imports amounted to the value of 259,653,032 dollars, and the exports to 290,416,924 dollars.

Railways have been built in California to the extent of 13,033 miles (1926) for steam roads and about 3,204 miles for electric railways. During the year 1926 there were 620 automobile stage and truck lines operating on the highways of California. During 1926 the foregoing carriers transported (1) freight: steam roads, 44,799,393 tons; automobile stage and truck lines, 1,231,176 tons; and (2) passengers: steam roads, 43,156,341; electric roads, 712,569,466; automobile stage and truck lines, 24,319,697. The State has 6,582 miles of highway of which 3,537 miles have been surfaced.

On June 30, 1927, there were 55 State savings banks and 209 savings departments of State departmental banks having 1,868,043 depositors with 1,141,380,430 dollars to their credit, this being an average of 610 dollars per depositor.

On June 30, 1926, there were 34 commercial banks and 250 commercial departments of departmental banks having 1,234,451 depositors with 646,139,649'14 dollars to their credit, being an average of 523'42 dollars for each depositor.

British Consul-General at San Francisco.—Gerald Campbell.

There is a British Consul at Los Angeles, and British Vice-Consuls at San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

COLORADO.

Government.—The State was admitted into the Union on Aug. 1, 1876. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 35 members elected for four years, one-half retiring every two years, and of a House of Representatives of 65 members elected for two years. Sessions are biennial. Eligible to either House are all citizens of the United States male and female 25 years of age and 12 months resident in the district for which they seek election. Qualified as electors are all persons male and female (except criminals and insane) 21 years of age who are citizens of the United States, and have resided in the State for 12 months immediately preceding the election.

Governor.—Wm. H. Adams, 1927-1929 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Charles M. Armstrong, 1927-1929.

The State sends to the Federal Congress two Senators and 4 Representatives.

The State is divided into 63 counties. The State Capital is Denver.

Area and Population.—Area 103,948 square miles (290 square miles being water). Indian reservations in 1926 covered an area of 619 sq. miles, with a population of 790. Census population on Jan. 1, 1920, 939,629.

Population in four census years was as follows:—

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per Sq. Mile
1860	34,231	46	34,277	0·3
1900	531,130	8,570	539,700	5·2
1910	787,571	11,453	799,024	7·7
1920	928,311	11,318	939,629	9·1

<sup>1</sup> Including Asiatics and Indians. In 1920, 291 Chinese and 1,383 Indians.

In 1920 the population by sex and race was:—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . . .	424,245	5,884	1,918	734	492,781
Female . . . . .	489,858	5,484	907	649	446,898
Total . . . . .	924,108	11,318	2,825	1,383	939,629

Estimated population July 1, 1928, 1,090,000.

In 1920, the foreign-born white population numbered 116,954 (12·4 per cent. of the total State population) of whom 9,584 were English, 3,357 Scottish, 6,191 Irish, 11,992 (10·3 per cent.) German, 16,669 (14·3 per cent.) Russian, 12,579 (10·8 per cent.) Italian, 10,112 Swedish, 7,621 Canadian, 10,894 Mexican. Denver, the capital, had a population in 1920 of 256,491, Pueblo, 43,050; Colorado Springs, 30,105; Trinidad, 10,906; Boulder, 11,006. Of the total population in 1920, 48·2 per cent. were urban and 1·2 per cent. Negro. In 1926 the Indian Reservations had an area of 619 square miles, and an Indian population of 790.

Religion and Instruction.—Roman Catholics outnumber other denominations, Methodists and Presbyterians ranking next, then Baptists and Congregationalists, Episcopalians.

In 1926 the 635 public elementary, the 280 senior high schools and the 155 junior high schools had 9,612 teachers with 250,087 enrolled pupils. Public school teachers are trained at the State Teachers' College, which in 1926-27 had 90 teachers and 4,483 students. Another State normal school, the Western State College of Colorado, has been established at Gunnison, having (in 1926-27) 44 teachers and 959 students. Public school expenditure, year ending June 30, 1926, 26,888,074·36 dollars. For superior education there are several colleges. Colorado College, founded in 1874 at Colorado Springs, had 74 professors and 962 students in 1926-27. The University of Colorado, opened in 1877 at Boulder, had 254 professors and 5,895 students (including summer school) in 1926-27. The University of Denver, founded by Territorial Charter in 1864, had 168 professors and teachers and 3,984 students (including summer school) in 1926-27; the Chamberlin Observatory in University Park stands at an altitude of 5,280 feet above sea-level. Colorado Women's College had 23 professors and 146 students in 1926-27. There are also an Agricultural College, at Fort Collins, with 115 professors and 1,848 students (including summer school) in 1926-27; and a School of Mines with 41 professors and 529 students in 1926-27.

On November 30, 1926, there were 540 prisoners in the county jails; 171 in the State reformatory, and 958 in the State penitentiary.

Finance and Defence.—The revenue and expenditure for the year ending November 30, 1927, were as follows:—

	Dollars
On hand December 1, 1926 . . . . .	5,351,773
Receipts in 1926-27 . . . . .	23,142,582
Total Receipts . . . . .	28,494,355
Disbursements in 1926-27 . . . . .	22,794,347
Balance Dec. 1, 1927 . . . . .	5,700,008

The State total debt on September 30, 1927, was 12,152,352 dollars. The assessment valuation for 1927 amounted to 1,565,357,426 dollars.

On September 30, 1927, the National Guard consisted of 162 officers, 1 warrant officer, and 1,659 men.

Production and Industry.—The number of farms in 1925 was 58,020, with a total area of 24,167,270 acres, of which 7,199,300 acres were crop land and 15,350,783 acres pasture. The value of all farm property in 1925 was 712,489,922 dollars. By irrigation large portions of the State have been brought under cultivation. The chief grain crops in 1926 were wheat (18,452,000 bushels), corn (10,472,000 bushels), and oats (4,680,000 bushels). Barley and hay are also produced in great quantities. In 1926, 2,867,000 tons of sugar beets, 11,760,000 bushels of potatoes, and 3,444,000 bushels of apples were produced. Fruit and vegetables are widely cultivated. Within the State stock-raising is older than husbandry; on January 1, 1928, the number of farm animals was: 324,000 horses, 86,000 mules, 242,000 milch cows, 1,317,000 other cattle, 2,746,000 sheep, 509,000 swine. The wool-clip in 1926 yielded 7,740,000 pounds of wool. The national forests in the State have an area (June 30, 1926) of 13,253,779 acres.

Colorado has great mining and smelting industries, coal (10,616,760 tons in 1926) and the ores of the precious metals being extensively worked. In 1926 the value of the gold output (334,339 fine ounces) was 6,911,405 dollars; the silver output was 4,624,000 fine ounces valued at 2,885,376 dollars; the copper output was 3,350,000 pounds, valued at 462,300 dollars; the lead output was 66,000,000 pounds, valued at 5,478,000 dollars; the zinc output was 65,000,000 pounds, valued at 4,745,000 dollars. Portland cement, mica, tungsten, graphite, travertine building stone, petroleum, rose quartz, and fluorspar are also produced. Total mineral output in 1925 was valued at 63,149,000 dollars.

The manufacturing industries of Colorado, according to the census of 1925, engaged 1,416 establishments with 31,967 wage-earners who earned 43,007,674 dollars. They gave an output valued at 278,778,008 dollars.

There are large works for the smelting and refining of metals (iron, lead, copper, zinc); the chief base metals refined are lead and zinc, but three-fourths of the value of the smelting products is for gold and silver.

Denver is the centre of distribution for the live stock traffic of the Rocky Mountain States.

In 1926, there were in the State 5,036.43 miles of main-track steam railway, and 392 miles of electric railways.

On June 30, 1926, there were 7,465 depositors in the Postal Savings Banks with savings deposits amounting to 3,276,507 dollars to their credit.

There were in all 309 banks in the State (including 127 national banks with resources of 263,053,000 dollars), with total resources amounting to 340,985,000 dollars at the same date.

CONNECTICUT.

Government.—Connecticut has been an organised commonwealth since 1637. In 1639 a written constitution was adopted which, it is claimed, was the first in the history of the world formed by a social compact. This was confirmed by a charter from Charles II. in 1662, and replaced in 1818 by a State Constitution, framed that year by a constitutional convention. Connecticut was one of the thirteen original States of the Union.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. All citizens (with necessary exceptions) 21 years of age, resident in the State for a year and in the town for six months preceding the election, have the right of suffrage provided that they can read the Constitution in English. The Senate at present consists of 35 members, the House of Representatives of 258 members. Members of each House are elected for the term of two years, and each receives 300 dollars for that term and mileage not to exceed 10 cents per mile for each day he shall attend a session of the General Assembly for each mile that he is required to travel between the state capitol and his home. Legislative sessions are biennial.

Governor.—John H. Trumbull, 1927–29 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Francis A. Pallotti.

The State is represented in the Federal Congress by two Senators and five Representatives. For local administration the State is divided into eight counties which are sub-divided into towns within which are cities and boroughs. The State Capital is Hartford.

Area and Population.—Area 4,965 square miles, (145 square miles being water). Census population on January 1, 1920, 1,380,631, and in the last four census years as follows:—

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per Sq. Mile
1840	301,856	8,122	309,978	64·3
1900	893,194	15,226	908,420	188·5
1910	1,099,582	15,174	1,114,756	231·3
1920	1,859,585	21,046	1,880,631	286·4

Estimated population July 1, 1928, 1,667,000.

The population by sex and colour in 1920 was:—

—	White	Negro	All Others	Total
Male	688,837	10,778	720	699,335
Female	674,895	10,268	183	685,236
Total	1,358,732	21,046	853	1,380,631

In 1920, the foreign-born white population representing 27·3 per cent. of the total State population, numbered 376,513 of whom 22,708 were English; 7,487 Scottish; 45,464 (12·1 per cent.) Irish; 22,614 (6·0 per cent.) German; 38,719 (10·3 per cent.) from Russia; 46,623 Polish; 17,697 Swedish; 80,322 (21·3 per cent.) Italian. Of the total population (in 1920) 67·8 per cent. were urban and 1·5 per cent. Negro.

The chief towns are New Haven with population (est. 1926), 182,000; Hartford (capital), 164,000; Bridgeport, 152,500; Waterbury, 98,411; (est. 1923); New Britain, 69,600; Stamford, 41,800; Meriden, 36,600.

Religion, Instruction, and Charity.—Of the religious bodies the most important in order of strength are the Roman Catholic, Congregationalist, Protestant Episcopal, Methodist, and Baptist.

Elementary instruction is free for all children between the ages of 4 and 16 years, and compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 16 years. In 1926, the 1,278 public elementary schools had 7,975 teachers with 259,297 enrolled pupils. There were also 87 public high schools with 1,687 teachers and 37,940 pupils. The four normal schools had 65 teachers and 1,109 pupils, the 12 model schools 14 teachers. There were also 9 State and State-aided trade schools with 95 teachers and 2,076 pupils. Total expenditure on education for the year ending June 30, 1926, 34,537,248 dollars. Instruction in agriculture and the mechanic arts is provided at the Connecticut Agricultural College founded at Storrs in 1881 with 71 professors and 516 students in 1926-27; its work is supplemented by the Storrs Agricultural Experiment Station, and the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station located at New Haven. Yale University, New Haven, founded in 1701, had, in 1926-27, in all departments, 1,003 professors and teachers and 5,294 students. Wesleyan University, Middletown, founded in 1831, had 75 professors and teachers, and 621 students. Trinity College, Hartford, founded in 1824, had 41 professors and teachers, and 243 students; and Connecticut College for Women 55 teachers and 535 students.

Including private and ecclesiastical institutions, there were in the State on June 30, 1926, 133 benevolent establishments (exclusive of almshouses). On June 30, 1926, the number of State paupers was 1,809, and the number of inmates in State Hospitals, 6,202. The total expenditure on the State Aid and Hospital Division for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926, was 119,284 dollars.

Finance and Defence.—The total receipts and expenditure for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, were:—

DELAWARE.

Government.—Delaware is one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 17 members elected for four years and a House of Representatives of 35 members elected for two years. Senators must be 27 years of age, and Representatives 24; both must be citizens who have resided three years in the State, and one year immediately preceding the election, in the electoral district.

With necessary exceptions all citizens, registered as voters, who have resided in the State one year, in the county three months, and in the district 30 days next preceding the election have the right to vote. But no person who shall attain the age of 21 after the year 1900 has the right to vote unless he is able to read English and to write his name; United States soldiers and sailors merely stationed in the State are not considered resident.

Delaware is represented in Congress by two Senators and one Representative
Governor.—Robt. P. Robinson, 1925-29. (7,500 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Sylvester D. Townsend, jr.

The State capital is Dover (population 4,042 in 1920). Delaware is divided into three counties.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area 2,370 square miles (405 square miles being water). Census population on Jan. 1, 1920, 223,003, and in the last four census years as follows:—

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Government.—The District of Columbia is the seat of Government of the United States, and consists of an area of approximately sixty-nine and one-quarter square miles, which was ceded by the State of Maryland to the United States as a site for the National Capital. It was established under the authority and direction of Acts of Congress approved July 16, 1790, and March 3, 1791, which were passed to give effect to a clause in the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States, giving Congress the power:—

'To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased, by the consent of the legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings.'

The authority of the United States over it became vested on the first Monday of December, 1800.

The present form of local government, which dates from July 1, 1878, is a municipal corporation, and is administered by a board of three Commissioners. Two of these are appointed from civil life by the President of the United States, and confirmed by the Senate of the United States, for a term of three years each. The other Commissioner is detailed from time to time by the President of the United States from the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, to continue as such during the President's pleasure. The Commissioners are in a general way vested with jurisdiction covering all the ordinary features of municipal government, except that the Congress of the United States, only, has authority to enact legislation and appropriate money for the municipal expenses.

Secretary to the Board of Commissioners.—Daniel E. Garges.

Area and Population.—The area of the District of Columbia originally was approximately 100 square miles, but by the retrocession to the State of Virginia, in the year 1846, of the portion derived from that State, was reduced to 69·245 square miles, 62 of which are land.

The population at the date of each of the Federal Censuses was as follows. (Wherever the word 'coloured' is used, it refers to Negroes or to persons of partial Negro descent.):—

1870	88,296	48,404	131,700	2,270·7	1900	192,016	86,702	278,718	4,645·8
1880	118,028	59,596	177,624	3,062·5	1910	236,623	94,446	331,069	5,517·8
1890	154,820	75,572	230,392	3,972·3	1920	327,605	109,966	437,571	7,057·6

In 1920, approximately 25 per cent. of the total population was Negro or of Negro descent. Of the foreign-born white population, representing 6·5 per cent. of the total population, 10·5 per cent. were English, 15·1 per cent. Irish, 11·8 per cent. German, 18·1 per cent. Russian, 18·2 per cent. Italian, and 5·9 per cent. Canadian.

By sex and race the estimated population of 1927 was thus distributed:—

	White	Coloured	Total
Male . . .	187,500	63,500	251,000
Female . . .	215,600	75,400	289,000
Total . . .	403,100	138,900	540,000

A portion of the District of Columbia embracing 6,654 acres is known in law as the City of Washington, 'The Federal Capital.' But that name is a geographical distinction only, as the territory it includes is not a municipal government separate from the rest of the District of Columbia, but is subject to the same national and municipal control in every respect.

Religion and Instruction.—The most numerous religious bodies are : Roman Catholic, Baptist, Methodist, Protestant-Episcopal, Presbyterian, Lutheran, and Christian Science.

The 167 public schools of the District in 1927 had 1,844 white teachers and 51,177 white pupils, and 847 coloured teachers and 25,187 coloured pupils. There were, included in the above, 17 public high schools with 813 teachers and 17,157 pupils; 2 normal schools with 46 teachers and 734 pupils; 4 vocational schools, with 43 teachers and 635 pupils; 141 elementary schools (kindergarten) and special, with 1,789 teachers and 57,838 pupils. There were also 30 private schools with 3,005 pupils. Total expenditure on public education (1927), 11,287,564.24 dollars.

Superior education is given in Georgetown University, an institution under the management of the Jesuit Order, founded in 1795; it has 294 professors and 2,511 students: the George Washington University, non-sectarian, founded in 1821, has 391 professors and instructors, 5,478 regular students, and 1,660 for the summer school; the Howard University, principally engaged in the higher education of coloured students, was founded in 1867, and has 155 professors and 2,268 pupils; the Catholic University of America, a post-graduate institution, was founded in 1884, and has 115 professors and 2,987 students; the American University has 40 professors and 350 students.

Finance and Defence.—The revenues of the District are derived from a general real and personal property tax, taxes on corporations and companies, licences for conducting various businesses, and from appropriations out of the Treasury of the United States.

In 1926-27 the finance of the District of Columbia was as follows:—

	Dollars
Balance, July 1, 1926 . . . .	11,878,319
Receipts, 1926-27 . . . .	34,328,575
Total . . . .	46,206,894
Disbursements, 1926-27 . . . .	33,529,692
Balance, July 1, 1927 . . . .	12,677,202

The District of Columbia has no bonded debt not covered by its accumulated sinking fund.

In 1927 the assessed valuation of the real property within the municipality amounted to 946,367,442 dollars; of tangible personal property such as furniture, horses, wagons, ships, banks and public utility corporations, 104,623,370 dollars, and intangible personal property such as stocks, bonds, etc., 472,596,886 dollars; total 1,523,587,698 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 60 officers, 1 warrant officer and 822 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—The District has considerable industries, the products of which are mainly for local consumption. The United States census of manufactures in 1925 showed that the raw material used cost 34,356,062 dollars, and the output was valued at 82,721,576 dollars.

Within the District are 198.26 miles of electric street railway track, as single track, and 36 miles of steam railway (1925).

On June 30, 1927, there were in the District 43 national banks, trust companies and savings banks. Their aggregate resources and liabilities balanced at $315,184,000 dollars. Their paid-in capital stock stood at $24,451,000 dollars; surplus funds at $17,727,000 dollars; individual deposits at $136,491,000 dollars; United States deposits at $3,467,000 dollars; national bank notes outstanding, $3,976,000 dollars; and loans and discounts at $181,762,000 dollars.

On September 26, 1927, the bonded debt of the State amounted to 4,893,000 dollars. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 13,000,000 dollars. The assessed valuation of real, personal and public utility, property in 1927 amounted to 1,262,885,965 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 230 officers, 3 warrant officers and 3,446 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—In 1925 there were 249,095 farms in the State, having an area of 21,945,496 acres, of which 10,695,817 acres were crop land. Total value of all farm property in 1925 was 686,673,248 dollars; 41 per cent. of the farms are operated by Negroes, and 86 per cent. of Negro farms are rented. The Negro farmers raise little but cotton, in the production of which Georgia ranks second among the States, while it is the largest producer of sea-island cotton. For 1926 the cotton yield was 1,475,000 bales as against 1,164,000 bales in 1925, the area under cultivation being 4,090,000 acres and the value of the yield 81,862,000 dollars. In the northern part of the State the cultivation of cereals is of importance, corn being grown on five times the area of other cereals. The yield of corn (maize) in the State in 1926 was 55,346,000 bushels. Oats and wheat are also grown, while rice is an important product of coast counties (60,000 bushels in 1926). The growth of sugar cane is increasing. National forests in 1926 covered 238,538 acres. On January 1, 1928, the farm animals were 41,000 horses, 357,000 mules, 346,000 milch cows, 863,000 other cattle, 52,000 sheep, 1,424,000 swine.

The State has varied mineral resources: gold, silver coal, iron, and manganese ores, iron pyrites, bauxite, graphite, lime, ochre, infusorial earth, natural cement, talc and soapstone, marble and other quarries, and mineral springs being worked, but none to a great extent. The marble of Georgia has a high reputation all over the States. The clay-working industries (bricks, tiles, pottery) are also important. Mineral products in 1925 reached the value of 16,504,000 dollars.

In 1925, Georgia had 2,876 manufacturing establishments employing 141,173 wage-earners, using material costing 399,351,258 dollars, and giving an output worth 648,852,294 dollars. The amount of wages paid was 99,210,003 dollars. Chief industry, cotton goods, reached production in 1925 valued at 193,423,660 dollars.

On July 31, 1926, there were 2,912,000 active spindles in the State, consuming 1,013,000 bales of cotton.

On June 30, 1926, Georgia had 82 national banks with resources of 200,244,000 dollars, demand deposits of 73,180,000 dollars and savings deposits of 52,758,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 97,839,000 dollars.

The means of transportation by sea and land are ample. The principal port is Savannah, which has 8 miles of river frontage, and which, by harbour improvements, is to be made accessible to vessels of large tonnage. From this port in 1924-25, the imports amounted to 22,541,000 dollars, and the exports to 76,370,000 dollars.

The steam railways in the State have a length (1925) of 7,019 miles, beside 460 miles of electric railway. The State system of roads includes 6,258 miles of which 2,664 miles have been surfaced.

ILLINOIS.

Government.—Illinois was first discovered by Joliet and Marquette, two French explorers, in 1673. In 1763, the country was ceded by the French to the British. In 1783, Great Britain recognised the title of the United States to Illinois, which was admitted into the Union on December 3, 1818. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 51 members elected for four years (about half of whom retire every two years), and a House of Representatives of 153 members elected for two years. Sessions are biennial. Qualified electors are all citizens 21 years of age, resident in the State one year, in the county 90 days, and in the district 30 days next before the election.

The State is divided into Senatorial districts, in each of which one Senator and three Representatives are chosen. For the election of Representatives each elector has three votes, of which he may cast one for each of three candidates, or one and a half for each of two, or all three for one candidate.

Governor.—Len Small, 1925–29 (12,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Louis L. Emmerson.

Most of the white population are descended from the early French settlers. In 1920 the foreign-born whites (2.5 per cent. of the total State population) numbered 44,871, of whom 16,264 (36·2 per cent.) were Italian, 5,147 (11·5 per cent.), German, 4,182 French, 2,399 Mexican, 2,000 Irish, and 1,819 English. The largest city in the State is New Orleans with a census population of 387,219 in 1920. Other cities are Shreveport, 43,874; Baton Rouge (Capital), 21,782. Of the total population in 1920, 34·9 per cent. were urban, and 38·9 per cent. Negro.

Most of the Southern States are strenuously Protestant, but over 61 per cent. of the population of Louisiana are Roman Catholic. Of Protestants in the State, Baptists and Methodists are the most numerous, then Protestant Episcopalians and Presbyterians.

Attendance in elementary schools is compulsory. In 1924-25, there were 1,831 public elementary schools for white children with 222,935 pupils and 8,577 teachers; 1,430 negro schools with 133,958 pupils and 2,429 negro teachers. The 318 high schools for white pupils had 1,388 teachers and 38,694 pupils. There were 4 negro high schools. The 2 Normal Colleges had (1923-24) 33 instructors and 2,286 students. Total expenditure on education (1925), 21,631,000 dollars. Superior instruction is given in the Louisiana State University (1877). In 1924 it had 98 professors and 2,004 students. Tulane University (founded in 1834) in New Orleans had, in 1923, 449 professors and 4,304 students. This university has State support to the extent of the remission of certain taxes. The Roman Catholics have Jefferson College at Convent with 17 professors and 125 students, and a University (Loyola University, founded 1904) at New Orleans with 86 professors and 1,303 students. The New Orleans University (established 1874) is for coloured persons. It had 26 instructors and 458 enrolled students in 1924. The Straight University also for coloured persons had 29 instructors and 348 students in 1924. There is an Industrial Institute at Ruston and another at Lafayette. The State has also an institution for the deaf and dumb and another for the blind, both at Baton Rouge.

Finance and Defence.—For the year 1925, the receipts and the disbursements were:—

	Dollars
Balance in hand, January 1, 1925 . . . . .	1,983,334
Receipts, 1925 . . . . .	32,042,976

The bonded and floating debt of the State at September 15, 1927, amounted to 14,173,565 dollars. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 6 million dollars. The assessed valuation of property in 1926 amounted to 1,717,877,125 dollars.

On June 30, 1927, the militia or State National Guard, with headquarters at Baton Rouge, consisted of 127 officers, 1 warrant officer and 2,071 enlisted men. There is also a naval militia.

Production and Industry.—The State is divided into two parts, the uplands and the alluvial and swamp regions of the coast. A delta occupies about one-third of the total area. Louisiana surpasses the other States in extent of navigable waterways—3,782 miles. The Gulf coast-line is 1,250 miles in length. Agriculture is the leading industry. In 1925, the State had 132,450 farms, with an area of 8,837,502 acres, of which 4,279,528 acres were crop land. The total value of all farm property in 1925 was 385,910,844 dollars. The products and manufactures of Louisiana are very various. The chief crops in 1926 were corn, 1,127,000 acres, producing 19,722,000 bushels; rice grown on 495,000 acres, yielding 16,088,000 bushels. Only 47,000 short tons of sugar were made from the 1926 crop of cane—the smallest since 1873, when only 46,000 short tons were made. This compares with 139,000 short tons in 1925 and 88,000 in 1924. For 1926, the cotton area was 2,000,000 acres, and the yield 620,000 bales, valued at 45,100,000 dollars. Oats, potatoes, and tobacco are also grown, but not extensively. On January 1, 1928, the State contained 114,000 horses, 167,000 mules, 107,000 sheep, 460,000 swine, 579,000 other cattle, and 204,000 milch cows.

Louisiana has valuable fisheries. The area suitable to planting and growing oysters is over 7,000 sq. miles.

Rich sulphur mines are found in Louisiana, and wells for the extraction of sulphur by means of hot water and air at the surface are in operation. The yield of crude petroleum in 1926 was 22,803,000 barrels. The State ranks seventh among the oil-producing States. Total mineral output in 1925 was valued at 60,504,000 dollars.

The manufacturing industries are chiefly those associated with the products of the State: sugar, lumber, cotton-seed, rice. In 1925, there were 1,742 manufacturing establishments which employed 88,058 wage-earners, who earned 79,762,794 dollars. The material used cost 465,426,439 dollars, and the output was valued at 710,050,100 dollars.

A large international trade is carried on through the port of New Orleans, where in the year ending June 30, 1926, the imports amounted to 229,696,766 dollars, and the exports to 441,928,999 dollars.

The State has ample facilities for traffic, having, besides 24,900 miles of public roads, the Mississippi and other waterways, with 4,794 miles of navigable water. In 1925, the steam railways in the State had a length of 5,089 miles, besides 316 miles of electric railway track.

On June 30, 1926, Louisiana had 32 national banks with resources of 129,460,000 dollars, demand deposits of 57,641,000 dollars, and savings deposits of 19,592,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 114,393,000 dollars.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Constitution and Government.—In 1614, the Plymouth Company undertook exploring expeditions to New England, and obtained a Royal Charter granting sovereign powers over the region lying to the north of Virginia. The first permanent settlement within the borders of the present state was made at Plymouth in December, 1620, by the Pilgrims from Holland, who were separatists from the English Church. This was the nucleus of the Plymouth Colony. In 1628 another company of Puritans settled at Salem, and from that beginning the Massachusetts Bay Colony was formed. In 1630 Boston was settled. In 1629 the whole region called New England was formed into a province. By a special Charter the Government was divided between the colony of Plymouth and that of Massachusetts Bay, but in 1692 they were re-united, and thenceforward acted together both in peace and war. In the struggle which ended in the separation of the American colonies from the mother country, Massachusetts took the foremost part, and became one of the thirteen original States of the Union.

There is a legislative body consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives, styled collectively the General Court of Massachusetts. The Senate consists of 40 members elected biennially by popular vote, the State being divided into 40 senatorial districts each of which returns one senator. The House of Representatives consists of 240 members, elected in 159 districts, each of which returns one, two, or three representatives according to population. There is an annual session of the Legislature.

All citizens of the United States who can read and write may vote in all State elections, provided they are not paupers or under guardianship, and provided they have lived one year in the State and six months in the election district or precinct.

The State sends 2 Senators and 16 Representatives to the Federal Congress.

Governor.—Alvan T. Fuller, 1927–29 (salary, 10,000 dollars).

Secretary of the Commonwealth.—Frederic W. Cook.

There are 14 counties in the State, varying largely in population, and there are 39 cities and 316 towns. The State Capital is Boston.

Area and Population.—Area 8,266 square miles (227 square miles being water). The estimated population, July 1, 1928, was 4,290,000.

MICHIGAN.

Government.—Michigan was admitted into the Union on January 26, 1837. According to the revised constitution adopted in 1908 the legislative authority is vested in a Senate of 32 members elected by the counties or groups of counties for 2 years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members, the electoral districts being re-arranged according to population every 10 years. Electors are all citizens over 21 years of age resident in the State for 6 months next preceding the election, and resident at the time of the election in the district, county, or township for which the election is held.

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 13 Representatives.

Governor.—Fred W. Green, 1927-29 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—John S. Haggerty.

For local government the State is organised in counties, cities, townships, and villages. There are 83 counties, each of which is a corporate body with a Board of Supervisors as its administrative authority. Cities must have each a population of not less than 3,000, but a few which have been long incorporated have a smaller population. Villages in the legal sense have a population of at least 300 within an area of a square mile. In 1925 there were 121 cities and 339 villages in the State. The State Capital is Lansing.

NEBRASKA.

The Nebraska region was first reached by white men from Mexico under the Spanish general Coronado in 1541. It was ceded by France to Spain in 1763, retroceded to France in 1801, and sold by Napoleon to the United States as part of the Louisiana purchase in 1803. Fort Atkinson on the Missouri River, the farthest western post of the United States, was established in 1819, and abandoned in 1827. Bellevue, the present oldest continuous settlement, was established by French fur traders about 1820. The creation of Nebraska territory was part of the programme of the United States government in 1844 as a step in establishing a military highway to hold Oregon, then in controversy with Great Britain. On May 30, 1854, Nebraska became a territory and on March 1, 1867, a State. "Arbor Day," now a world-wide institution observed with planting of trees, originated in Nebraska on January 4, 1872.

Government.—The Legislature consists of a Senate of 33 members and a House of Representatives of 100 members. The Legislators are elected for two years. Voters must have resided in the State for six months, in the county for 40 days, in the precinct for 10 days next before the election. The present constitution was adopted in 1875. Important amendments adopted in 1912 and 1920 provide for legislation through the initiative and referendum, for a State Board of Control over seventeen State institutions, for biennial instead of annual elections, and permit cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants to frame their own charters.

Nebraska is represented in Congress by two Senators and six Representatives.

Governor.—Adam McMullen, 1927-29 (7,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Frank Marsh.

There are 93 counties in the State. The State Capital is Lincoln.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Government.—New Hampshire was one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The sense of the people as to the calling of a convention for the revision of the Constitution must be taken every seven years. If a convention is held, the amendments to the Constitution which it proposes must be laid before the people, and approved by two-thirds of the qualified voters present and voting on the subject. The Legislature consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate consists of 24 members, elected for two years. The House of Representatives consists of from 419 to 422 members, the number varying slightly with each session, as representation is on the basis of population. Electors are all citizens 21 years of age, resident six months in the place to be represented, able to read and write, duly registered and not under sentence for crime or paupers.

Governor.—Huntley L. Spaulding, 1927–31 ($3,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Hobart Pittsburly.

New Hampshire is represented in the Federal Congress by 2 Senators and 2 Representatives. The State is divided into 10 counties. The State Capital is Concord.

Elementary education is free, and all children between 6 and 16 years of age are compelled to attend school. There were, June 30, 1924, 1,358 public elementary schools in the State with 80,368 enrolled pupils, and 2,366 teachers; and 164 public high schools with 343 teachers and 8,060 pupils. Besides, there are 26 Indian schools with 2,291 pupils, and 141 teachers (maintained by the Federal Government). Three public normal schools had 80 teachers and 816 students. Total expenditure on education (1925), 4,835,000 dollars. For special and higher instruction there are various institutions; a College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, founded at Las Cruces in 1889, with 45 professors and 392 students, a School of Mines, founded at Socorro in 1895, with 8 professors and 100 students (1923), a Military Institute, an Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, an Institute for the Blind, an Orphans' School, and a Reform School. At Albuquerque is the University of New Mexico, founded in 1889; it had 23 professors and 457 students in 1923. The State schools are maintained by funds assigned by the State Government, and by the proceeds of the school tax levied by the commissioners of each county, municipality and district.

Finance and Defence.—For the year ending June 30, 1927, the revenue and expenditure were as follows:—

	Dollars
Balance, July 1, 1926 . . . . .	3,291,467
Receipts for year 1926-27 . . . . .	7,636,450
Total . . . . .	10,927,917
Disbursements for year 1926-27 . . . . .	8,543,964
Balance, July 1, 1927 . . . . .	2,383,953

The total bonded indebtedness of the State on July 1, 1927, was 3,889,500 dollars. The assessed value of real and personal property in 1927 was 313,000,000 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 69 officers, 1 warrant officer and 1,025 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—New Mexico produces cereals, vegetables, fruit, and cotton. The principal crops in 1926 were: maize, 4,420,000 bushels; wheat, 5,653,000 bushels; potatoes, 166,000 bushels. Irrigation, which is indispensable over wide tracks of fertile country, is extending; the irrigated area has now reached 550,000 acres and the completion of existing projects will bring the total up to 945,000 acres. Dry farming has proved a valuable adjunct. The Rio Grande project provides for reservoir construction for the irrigation of 180,000 acres in New Mexico and Texas. Private enterprise also is devoted largely to reservoir and canal construction. In 1925, there were 31,687 farms with an area of 27,850,325 acres, of which 1,784,851 acres were crop land. The total value of all farm property in 1925 was 236,300,563 dollars. The farm animals on January 1, 1928, comprised 170,000 horses, 65,000 milch cows, 1,070,000 other cattle, 2,362,000 sheep, and 77,000 swine. In 1926, the wool-clip amounted to 12,060,000 pounds of wool. The national forest area (June 30, 1926) covered 8,481,455 acres, and there are about 4,000,000 acres of heavily forested country in private ownership.

The State has valuable mineral resources, of which, in 1926, gold (26,000 ounces), silver (539,000 ounces), copper (82,848,000 pounds), coal (2,866,000 short tons), lead, and zinc were the most important. The quarries yield granite, sandstone, limestone, and marble. Turquoise is profitably worked in four localities within the State; the sands contain traces of platinum. The value of the total mineral output in 1925 was 25,549,000 dollars.

The manufactured output of New Mexico (200 manufacturing establishments) in 1925 amounted to the value of 19,458,585 dollars. The number of wage-earners was 4,629, earning in a year 5,083,211 dollars, and the cost of materials used was 9,684,279 dollars.

New Mexico had on June 30, 1926, 31 national banks with resources of 28,993,000 dollars, demand deposits of 13,178,000 dollars and savings deposits of 5,003,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 2,482,000 dollars.

In 1925, there were 2,994 miles of steam railway and 11 miles of electric railway track within the State.

NEW YORK STATE.

Constitution and Government.—From 1609 to 1664, the region now called New York was under the sway of the Dutch; then it came under the rule of the English, who governed the country till the outbreak of the War of Independence. Between July 9, 1776, and April 20, 1777, a Convention framed a Constitution under which New York was transformed into an independent State, afterwards, in 1788, entering the Union as one of the 13 original States.

The legislative authority is vested in a Senate of 51 members elected every two years, and an Assembly of 150 members elected annually.

The right of suffrage resides in every citizen 21 years of age, who has been a citizen for 90 days, and has resided in the State for a year preceding the election. A voter must also have resided six months in the county, and 30 days in the election district.

The question whether there shall be a Convention to revise the Constitution has to be submitted to the people every 20 years, beginning with 1916, 'and also at such times as the Legislature may by law provide.'

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 43 Representatives.

Governor.—Alfred E. Smith, 1927–29 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Robert Moses.

The seat of the State executive is at Albany.

For local government the State is divided into 62 counties.

Cities are in 3 classes, the first class having each over 175,000 inhabitants and the third under 50,000. Each is incorporated by charter, under special legislation. The government of New York City is vested in a board of Aldermen, elected for 2 years. Its members are the President, elected by the city; the presidents of the 5 city boroughs (Bronx, Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond); 67 aldermen, one elected in each of the 67 districts, constituting a board of 73 members. The chief executive officer is the Mayor, elected for 4 years; he appoints all the heads of departments, except the Comptroller, who is elected by the city.

The chief churches are Roman Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, and Baptist.

Education.—Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 18. Instruction in physical training and kindred subjects of all pupils above 8 years of age in the elementary and secondary schools of the State is made compulsory by an amendment of 1916 to the Education Law. In 1925-26, the children enrolled in the 12,101 public schools numbered 1,961,375; the number of teachers was 66,434. There were 1,117 public high schools and academies with 358,399 pupils and 14,568 teachers; 10 public normal schools with 409 teachers and 10,899 students; and day vocational schools employing 931 teachers with 22,279 pupils. Total expenditure on education in 1926 was 257,672,042 dollars. There were 148 universities, colleges, professional and technical schools with 8,559 professors and teachers, and 95,720 students.

The University of the State of New York is governed by a Board of Regents, whose members are at all times three more than the existing judicial districts of the State—at present 9 districts and 12 Regents. The University is the State Education Department. The Regents elect by ballot the President of the University and the Commissioner of Education.

Male .	899,031	373,965	94	5,972	1,279,062
Female .	884,743	389,442	19	5,852	1,280,061
Total	1,783,779	763,407	113	11,824	2,559,123

Of the total in 1920, 7,099 (representing 0·3 per cent. of the total population) were white foreign-born, 703 being German, 932 (13·1 per cent.) Russian, and 967 (13·6 per cent.) English. Urban population formed 19·3 per cent., and the Negro population 29·8 per cent. of the whole. Cities (with population in 1920) are: Charlotte, 46,338; Winston-Salem, 48,395; Wilmington, 33,372; Durham, 21,719; Asheville, 28,504; Raleigh, (capital), 27,076; Greensboro, 43,525. Indian reservations in 1926 covered an area of 99 square miles and had a population of 12,191.

About half of the Church members are Baptist, and one-third Methodist. The others are mostly Presbyterian, Lutheran, or Protestant Episcopal.

School attendance is compulsory between 7 and 13, inclusive. Separate schools are provided for white, coloured and Indian children. In 1925-26 the 6,347 public elementary schools of the State had 19,284 teachers, and 737,134 enrolled pupils. There were 697 public high schools with 3,844 teachers and 81,605 pupils. Total expenditure on account of public elementary and high schools in 1925-26, $2,443,426·07 dollars.

There were 7 normal colleges in 1925, 3 white, 3 negro and 1 Indian.

Higher instruction is given in 46 university and college institutions, 7 State and 39 private and denominational. The more important are the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (founded in 1795) with (1927) 234 professors and 6,765 students; and the Agricultural and Engineering College at West Raleigh (founded in 1889) with 202 professors and 2,784 pupils. Higher education for young women is given in the State College for Women (Greensboro) which, in 1926-27, had 171 professors and 3,418 students. There are large sectarian colleges, and also schools and colleges for coloured youths.

Finance and Defence.—The State had receipts and disbursements in the year ending June 30, 1926, as follows:—

	Dollars
Balance, July 1, 1925 . . . . .	9,438,531
Receipts, 1925-1926 . . . . .	12,972,183

On June 30, 1927, the recognized bonded debt amounted to 152,442,600 dollars. The assessed value of personal and real property in 1927 was 2,794,931,069 dollars. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bond-holders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 12,600,000 dollars. The State declares these bonds to have been fraudulently and corruptly issued during reconstruction days.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 215 officers, 4 warrant officers and 3,849 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—The chief occupation of the inhabitants of the State is agriculture, there being a farm population of 1,446,881 in 1925. The total population in 1920 was 2,545,804. In 1925, the U.S. census showed 283,491 farms, including both owners and tenants. In 1926, the State farm census showed 249,704 active farm owners. In 1925, the area of the farm land was 18,593,670 acres, as compared with 20,021,736 in 1920. In 1926, the State census showed that 6,781,229 acres were in cultivation; 3,330,343 acres by farm owners and 3,450,886 acres by farm tenants. The total value of all farm property in 1925 was 1,050,015,835 dollars. Wheat and corn are grown extensively, the production of the former in 1927 being 4,976,000 bushels, and of the latter, approximately 52,254,000 bushels. The chief money crop, however, is cotton, of which the area in cultivation (1927) is 1,787,000 acres, with a prospective production of 911,000 bales (of 500 pounds gross weight). Another important product is tobacco, with a prospective production in 1927 of 425,431,000 pounds. Other products are peanuts, potatoes, oats, rye, truck, fruit, etc. On January 1, 1928, the farm animals were 105,000 horses, 282,000 mules, 321,000 milk cattle, with a total of 527,000 for all cattle, 85,000 sheep, and 951,000 swine. The area of national forest lands (June 30, 1926) was 376,032 acres.

Minerals in great variety, but not in large quantities, are found in the State, the chief being mica, iron, talc, soapstone barytes, feldspar, coal, kaolin, pyrophyllite, gold, silver, sand and gravel. The quarries yield granite, limestone, and sandstone. Monazite and zircon, used in the manufacture of incandescent light mantles, are also found.

The prosperity of North Carolina is associated chiefly with cotton, tobacco, and lumber, but within the State a variety of other industries are pursued.

The industrial report for 1926 shows 406 cotton mills in the State of North Carolina, the total number of spindles, 6,075,168, and the active spindle hours during the year, 19,952,406. Capital stock, 196,515,585 dollars. There was 64,100,442 pounds of raw material used in these mills, and the output was 303,799,410 dollars. There were 129 knitting mills, with a capital stock of 34,129,458 dollars, the raw material used was 29,503,105 pounds and the output was 37,859,085 dollars. The State leads in the manufacture of tobacco. There were 39,600,000 cigarettes manufactured in 1926, the value of the tobacco factories was reported at 33,581,915 dollars, and the value of the output was 272,643,391 dollars. The total amount of the pay-roll for the year was 16,621,281 dollars. There were 1,951 manufacturing plants reported in the State, and the wage-earners were 171,603.

The chief seaport is Wilmington, the exports from which, in the year ending June 30, 1927, amounted to 15,671,300 dollars, nearly all for cotton grown in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama, and shipped mostly to Bremen, Liverpool, and Ghent. The imports amounted to 13,794,690 dollars.

The State has several navigable rivers; in 1927, it contained 5,004 miles of steam railway, and 152 miles of electric railway track.

North Carolina on June 30, 1926, had 80 national banks with resources of 196,324,000 dollars, demand deposits of 64,438,000 dollars, and savings deposits of 54,627,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 94,175,000 dollars.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Government.—North Dakota was admitted into the Union on February 22, 1889. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 49 members elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 113 members elected for two years. Qualified electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens and civilised Indians. Residence required: in the State one year, in the county ninety days in the precinct thirty days next before the election. The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and three Representatives.

Governor.—Arthur G. Sorlie, 1927-29 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Robert Byrne.

The State is divided into 53 organised counties. The capital is Bismarck (population 7,122 in 1920, Census).

Area, Population.—Area, 70,837 square miles (654 square miles being water). The area in 1926 of the Indian reservations was 2 square miles with a population of 10,119 Indians. The population of the State in 1920 (Census) was 646,872.

The population at each of the Federal censuses was:—

Year	White	Coloured	Total	Per Sq. Mile.
1890	182,407	8,576	190,983	2·7
1900	311,712	7,434	319,146	4·5
1910	568,855	7,201	577,056	8·2
1920	639,954	6,918	646,872	9·2

Population by State census 1925, 641,000.

In 1920, the population by sex and race was:—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	338,081	276	183	3,183	341,673
Female . . .	301,923	191	14	3,071	305,199
Total . . .	639,954	467	197	6,254	646,872

The number of white foreign-born in 1920 was 131,503 (20·3 per cent. of the total population), of whom 38,190 (29·0 per cent. were Norwegian, 15,550 (11·9 per cent.) Canadian, 29,617 (22·5 per cent.) Russian, and 11,960 (9·1 per cent.) German. The urban population formed 13·6 per cent. and the Negro population 0·1 per cent. of the whole in 1920. The only considerable cities in the State are Fargo with population, 1920, of 21,961, Grand Forks, 14,010, and Minot, 10,476.

Of the aggregate membership of the Churches in the State, 38·5 per cent. is Roman Catholic, 37·7 Lutheran, the remainder being divided among the Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational, and Baptist denominations.

Instruction.—School attendance is compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 15. In 1925, there were 5,090 public elementary schools, with 148,986 pupils and 7,210 teachers. There were 675 high schools with 24,143 pupils and 1,406 teachers. Five normal schools had 2,395 students and 165 teachers. The State University, founded in 1884, had, in 1922-23, 110 teachers and 1,448 students; the State Agricultural College had 84 teachers and 2,866 students (1925); Jamestown College (founded 1909) had 90 teachers, 263 pupils.

School revenues are derived from the State Fund, district taxes, and various other sources. Expenditure in 1925, 13,548,000 dollars.

On July 1, 1922, the number of prisoners in penal institutions was 228, being 35.2 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance and Defence.—The revenue expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1926, was:—

	Dollars

OKLAHOMA.

Government.—The State of Oklahoma, comprising the former Territory of Oklahoma and Indian Territory, was constituted on November 16, 1907, by Proclamation made by the United States President under the enabling act of June 16, 1906. The constitution provides for the initiative and the referendum, 8 per cent. of the legal voters having the right to propose any legislative measure and 15 per cent. to propose amendments to the constitution by petition. The referendum may be ordered (except as to laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety) either by petition signed by 5 per cent. of the legal voters or by the Legislature. The referendum applies to municipalities as well as to the State. The control of railways and other public service corporations is vested in a commission of 3 members elected for six-year periods, from whose decision an appeal lies only to the Supreme Court, no other court having power to interfere with its duties.

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 44 members who are elected for 4 years, and a House of Representatives elected for 2 years, and consisting of not less than 97 nor more than 108 members. Qualified as electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens resident one year in the State, six months in the county, 30 days in the precinct. Indians, to be qualified as voters, must have severed tribal relations.

Governor.—Henry S. Johnston, 1927-31 (4,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Graves Leeper.

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 8 members of the House of Representatives. The State capital is Oklahoma City.

Area and Population.—Area, 70,057 square miles, of which 643 square miles are water. Census population on January 1, 1920, 2,028,283. Indian reservations in 1926 had an area of 52 square miles with a population of 120,487, including the Five Civilized Tribes who number 101,508.

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was :—

Year	White	Coloured	Total	Per square mile
1900	670,204	120,187	790,391 <sup>1</sup>	10·3 <sup>1</sup>
1910	1,444,531	212,624	1,657,155	28·9
1920	1,821,194	207,059	2,028,253	29·2

<sup>1</sup> Including Indian territory.

Estimated population, July 1, 1928, 2,426,000.

In 1920 the population by sex and race was :—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . .	952,691	76,204	300	28,750	1,058,044
Female. . . .	868,503	78,114	85	28,587	970,289
Total . . . .	1,821,194	149,408	344	57,337	2,028,283

In 1920, 39,968 were foreign-born whites (2·0 per cent of the total population), of whom 17,029 (17·6 per cent.) were Germans, 5,005 (12·5 per cent.) Russians, 2,122 Italians, 1,393 Austrians, 2,686 English, 2,475 Canadians, 6,697 (16·8 per cent.) Mexican, and 1,120 Scotch.

Of the total population in 1920, 26·6 per cent. were urban, and 7·4 per cent. Negro. The most important cities are Oklahoma City (population in 1920, 91,295), Muskogee (30,277), Tulsa (72,075), Enid (16,576), McAlester (12,095), Shawnee (15,348), Okmulgee (17,430), Guthrie (11,757), Ardmore (14,181).

Religion and Education.—The chief religious bodies are Methodist, Baptist, Roman Catholic, Disciples of Christ, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Lutherans, and Christian Scientists.

The State has a school system embracing elementary and high public schools, normal schools, and also colleges for superior instruction. Separate schools have to be provided for whites and Negroes, all children not Negroes being classed as white. In 1925-6 there were 5,686 public elementary schools with 565,864 pupils and 14,453 teachers; 792 public high schools with 83,062 enrolled pupils and 4,093 teachers. There were 6 State Teachers' Colleges with 352 teachers and 10,824 students. Total expenditure on education 30,187,238 dollars. The University (founded at Norman in 1892) had, in 1925, 311 professors and 3,809 students; the Agricultural and Mechanical College (founded in 1891 at Stillwater) had (1924) 188 professors and 3,151 students; while the coloured Agricultural and Normal University (founded 1897 at Langston), had 28 instructors, and 450 students.

Finance and Defence.—Income and expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1927 :—

	Dollars
Balance in hand, June 30, 1926 . . . .	12,056,320
Receipts, 1926-27 . . . .	84,877,068
Total . . . .	96,933,388
Disbursements, 1926-27 . . . .	82,994,562
Balance in hand, July 1, 1927 . . . .	13,938,826

On June 30, 1927, the State debt amounted to 1,543,900 dollars. The assessed value of real and of personal property (1926) was 1,697,364,213 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 388 officers, 6 warrant officers and 4,736 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Oklahoma is mainly agricultural. In 1925, it had 197,218 farms with a total area of 30,868,965 acres, of which 15,837,735 acres were crop land. The total value of all farm property in 1925 was 1,048,757,322 dollars. The yield of corn in 1926 was 61,178,000 bushels; of wheat, 73,745,000 bushels; of oats, 38,304,000 bushels. Other products are potatoes, hay, sorghum, fruits, and cotton. The cotton crop for 1926 on 4,676,000 acres amounted to 1,772,784 lbs., valued at 85,980,000 dollars. On January 1, 1928, the stock comprised 610,000 milch cows, 1,723,000 all cattle, 1,104,000 hogs, 101,000 sheep, 542,000 horses, and 354,000 mules. National forest lands on June 30, 1926, totalled 61,480 acres.

Oklahoma has become an important mineral State in the last few years. With 19,180 miles of oil pipe lines, it leads all the states in pipe line mileage with Texas second and Pennsylvania third; with local oil storage capacity of 140,000,000 barrels it is exceeded only by Texas, 170,000,000 barrels and California, 200,000,000 barrels. In 1926, 179,272,000 barrels of crude petroleum were produced. Natural gas is also obtained in large quantities. Coal (2,339,000 short tons in 1926), lead (70,004 short tons in 1926), and zinc (272,567 tons in 1926) are also worked. Total mineral output in 1925, 501,767,000 dollars. Petroleum refining is the chief industry.

There are few manufacturing industries, flour and grist-milling, cotton ginning, the manufacture of cotton-seed oil and oil cake being the more important. In 1925, the State had a total of 1,282 industrial establishments, employing 26,333 wage-earners who earned 34,210,630 dollars, the cost of material being 301,147,045 dollars, and the value of the output 403,295,440 dollars.

In 1925, Oklahoma had 6,540 miles of steam railway besides 371 miles of electric railway.

On June 30, 1926, Oklahoma had 370 national banks with resources of 418,067,000 dollars, demand deposits of 193,708,000 dollars and savings deposits of 74,422,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 18,493,000 dollars.

OREGON.

Government.—Oregon was admitted into the Union on February 14, 1859. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 30 members, chosen for four years (half their number retiring every two years), and a House of 60 Representatives, elected for two years.

The Constitution was amended in 1902, under the terms of which amendment the people reserve to themselves the power to propose laws and amendments to the Constitution and to enact or reject the same at the polls independent of the Legislative Assembly, and also reserve the power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any Act of the Legislative Assembly. This is known as the initiative and referendum. Not more than eight per cent. of the legal voters are required to propose any measure to be voted upon by the people at the next ensuing general election. Measures thus initiated are enacted or rejected at the polls independently of the Legislative Assembly. Under the referendum, any Bill passed by the Legislative Assembly, except such as are for the preservation of the public peace, health, and safety, may, by petition signed by five per cent. of the legal voters, be referred to the people to be voted on for approval or rejection at the next ensuing general election.

At the General Election held November, 1912, suffrage was extended to women and 'every citizen of the United States of the age of 21 years and upwards who shall have resided in the State during the 6 months immediately preceding such election shall be entitled to vote.'

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and three Representatives.

Governor.—I. L. Patterson, 1927-1931. (7,500 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Samuel C. Kozer.

The State Capital is Salem. There are 36 counties in the State.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 96,699 square miles, 1,092 square miles being water.

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was :—

Year	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per Sq. Mile
1880	174,281	487	174,768	1.8
1900	412,431	1,105	413,536	4.3
1910	671,273	1,492	672,765	7.0
1920	781,245	2,144	783,389	8.2

Estimated population, July 1, 1928, 902,000.

In 1920, the population by sex and race was :—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	407,159	1,197	5,677	2,301	416,334
Female . . .	361,987	947	1,382	2,289	367,055
Total . . .	769,146	2,144	7,509	4,590	783,389

The foreign-born whites in 1920 numbered 102,151 (13.0 per cent. of total population), of whom 13,740 (13.5 per cent.) were German, 13,744 (13.5 per cent.) Canadian, 7,953 (7.8 per cent.) English, 10,532 (10.3 per cent.) Swedish, 4,203 Irish, 4,324 Italian, 1,928 Greeks, and 6,955 Norwegian. The Indian reservations in 1926 comprised 1,742 square miles with a population of 6,662 Indians.

Of the total population in 1920, 49.9 per cent. were urban, and 0.3 per cent. Negro. The largest towns, according to the 1920 census, are Portland, with a population of 258,288; Salem, 17,679; Medford, 5,756; Astoria, 14,027; Eugene, 10,593.

In 1926 7,085 marriages were performed and 3,086 divorces granted as against 6,989 marriages and 2,886 divorces and 34 annulments in 1925.

The chief religious bodies in the State are (in order of strength) Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Disciples of Christ, and Congregational denominations.

School attendance is compulsory for all children from 9 to 15 years of age, unless the pupil completes the elementary grades in the meantime. All children between the ages of 16 and 18 years must be in school or legally employed. If legally employed, they must attend the part-time schools not less than 5 hours per week or 180 hours per year unless they have already completed the ordinary branches of learning taught in the first 8 years of the public schools or are attending an evening school for an equivalent time. For school year ending June 30, 1927, the 2,355 public schools had 5,789 teachers and 144,701 enrolled pupils, 266 four-year high schools had 2,033 teachers and 41,258 pupils; and the public normal school at Monmouth had, in 1927, 76 teachers and 1,886 pupils. The State normal school, Ashland, Oregon, had, in 1926-27, 24 teachers and 505 students. Total expenditure on education (1925-26) 23,785,852 dollars. The State supports the Oregon State Agricultural College at Corvallis, founded in 1868, which has an experiment station, with seven branch stations, an extension service in agriculture and home economics, and 10 schools of instruction. In 1927 the staff numbered 540, with 320 engaged in instruction, and the student enrolment 5,088, of whom 3,772 were in regular full-year degree courses. The University of Oregon, organized at Eugene in 1876, had in 1926-27 279 professors and 9,823 students (including 6,529 extension and summer school students). There are also Methodist, Presbyterian, Catholic, Congregational, and Baptist Colleges.

Finance and Defence.—The receipts and disbursements of the General Fund of the State, for the year ending December 31, 1926 :—

	Dollars
Balance, January 1, 1926 . . . . .	3,737,356
Receipts, Jan. 1, 1926—Dec. 31, 1926 . . . . .	37,147,754
Total . . . . .	40,885,110
Disbursements, Jan. 1, 1926—Dec. 31, 1926 . . . . .	36,990,369
Balance, January 1, 1927 . . . . .	3,894,741

On January 1, 1927, the amount of the State bonded indebtedness was 63,613,610 dollars. In 1926 the assessed value of real and personal property was 1,110,677,849 dollars.

On June 30, 1927, the National Guard of the State of Oregon consisted of 186 officers, 3 warrant officers and 2,976 men.

Production and Industry.—Oregon is one of the semi-arid States. In the river valley west of the Cascades there is a good rainfall and almost every variety of crop common to the temperate zone is grown. East of the Cascades lack of rainfall has been to some extent compensated for by irrigation by private companies as well as by State and Federal enterprise. Stock raising is the principal industry of eastern Oregon. With a stand of 400 billion feet Oregon has now one-fifth of the standing timber of the United States; about four billion feet are cut annually, the value being approximately 125,000,000 dollars and the number of men employed in the industry 50,000. In 1925, the forest area was 22,000,000 acres.

National forest lands on June 30, 1926, amounted to 13,216,240 acres. In 1925, there were 55,908 farms with an acreage of 14,170,043. The total value of all land and buildings in 1925 was 617,174,215 dollars; in 1926, including timber, the assessed valuation was 709,000,000 dollars though the actual value was much greater. The leading crops are wheat (19,586,000 bushels in 1926; estimated 1927, 25,000,000 bushels); hay (2,034,000 tons), and potatoes (4,500,000 bushels). Oats, barley, flax-seed, and hops are important crops. Fruits are grown, especially plums, apples, pears, peaches, strawberries, cherries, and loganberries. Dairying is an important industry, including the manufacture of a large quantity of cheeses, and there is an active live-stock industry. Horses on January 1, 1928, numbered 191,000; milch cows, 216,000; other cattle, 680,000; sheep, 2,247,000; swine, 270,000. In 1927 the wool-clip yielded 16,400,000 pounds. The salmon, sturgeon, halibut, and oyster fisheries are abundant.

Oregon's mineral resources consist of metals as gold, silver, copper, iron, chromium, manganese, platinum, and mercury; non-metallic, clay for general ceramic work, both building and refractory, lime, gypsum, Portland cement material, diatomaceous earth, pumice, coal, oil shale, and sand and gravel for concrete. Late in 1926 quicksilver mining and smelting was started in the south-eastern part of the State, and about mid-year in 1927 a mine and smelter were started in the western portion. Copper is again being produced in the eastern portion of the State. The output of gold in 1926 was 13,243.1 ounces, valued at 273,759 dollars; silver, 29,733 ounces; and copper, 286,454 pounds. Granite and other building stones were also extracted.

In 1925, the manufacturing industries of Oregon had 6,399 manufacturing and industrial plants, which employed 49,481 wage-earners, earning 56,272,019 dollars; the cost of the raw material used was 121,081,591 dollars, and the value of the output 212,860,133 dollars.

Oregon has good water facilities in the Pacific Ocean, the Columbia river, the Willamette river, and the Snake river. The Dalles and Celilo Canal, completed in 1915, opens the Columbia and Snake rivers to river navigation to a length of 570 miles from the ocean. Large ocean-going vessels can navigate the Columbia and Willamette rivers to Portland through a channel 30 feet in depth. The value of imports at Portland for year ending June 30, 1927, was 13,907,222 dollars, and of exports 78,087,162 dollars. The total water-borne commerce of the Columbia river for 1926 was valued at 310,000,000 dollars. In 1926 the State had a total steam railway mileage of 4,562.8, besides 684 miles of electric railway track.

On June 30, 1927, there were 253 banks in the State, with total deposits of 293,155,093 dollars; of this amount 94,479,054 dollars were in savings deposits.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Government.—Pennsylvania is one of the thirteen original States in the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. Every citizen 21 years of age, resident in the State for one year, and in the election district for two months preceding the election, is entitled to vote, provided that he has paid a State or County tax within two years and at least one month before the election. The Senate consists of 50 members chosen for four years, 25 Senators being elected at each General Assembly election bi-annually. The House of Representatives consists of 208 members chosen for two years.

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and 36 Representatives.

Governor.—John S. Fisher, 1927–1931 (18,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Clyde L. King.

For local administration the State is organised in counties, cities, boroughs, townships, and school districts. On a population basis, cities are divided into three classes, counties into eight classes, townships into two classes, and school districts into four classes. There are 67 counties. The State Capital is Harrisburg.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 45,126 square miles, of which 294 square miles are water area (excluding 891 square miles of Lake Erie).

1860 . . . . .	2,849,266	50,949	2,906,215	64·6

Total . . . . .	192,559,622
Expenditures, all funds, June 1, 1925, to May 31, 1926 . . . . .	149,811,506
Balance in Treasury, May 31, 1926 . . . . .	42,748,116

On May 31, 1927, the outstanding bonds of the State amounted to 92,253,758 dollars. The assessed value of real property in 1925 amounted to 9,427,849,861 dollars, and the taxable value of personal property to 2,395,955,862 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 774 officers, 13 warrant officers and 10,439 men.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture, market-gardening, fruit-growing, horticulture and forestry are pursued within the State. In 1925, there were 200,443 farms; the farm area was 16,296,468 acres of which 8,431,049 were crop land and 4,573,383 pasture land, the remainder being woodland. The total value of farm property in 1925 was 1,170,171,554 dollars. In 1926, the yield of winter wheat was estimated at 23,000,000 bushels; rye, 1,536,000 bushels; oats, 38,088,000 bushels; corn, 55,970,000 bushels; buckwheat, 4,735,000 bushels; potatoes, 24,578,000 bushels; tobacco, 46,250,000 pounds; tame hay, 3,535,000 tons; total crop of apples for 1926, 12,871,000 bushels; commercial apples, 1,502,000 barrels; peaches, 2,214,000 bushels, and pears, 748,000 bushels. On January 1, 1928, farm animals in Pennsylvania were: 359,000 horses, 51,000 mules, 855,000 dairy cows two year old and over, 1,332,000 other cattle, 437,000 sheep, 841,000 swine, 17,465,000 laying hens and pullets, and 134,280 hives of bees. Wool clip, 1926, was 2,730,000 pounds. On June 30, 1926, national forest lands totalled 170,102 acres.

Pennsylvania so far exceeds all the rest of the States in the value of its mineral products as to stand almost alone. This is due principally to the State's leadership in the production of coal. Mineral products in 1925 reached a value of 867,196,000 dollars; this far surpasses the two great oil-producing states, Oklahoma (501,767,000 dollars) and California (496,923,000 dollars). In 1925, 163,840 workers were employed in and about the anthracite coal-mines, and 165,586 in and about the bituminous coal-mines. In 1926, the output of anthracite coal was 85,000,000 short tons, and of bituminous coal, 151,119,000 short tons. Other minerals are petroleum (8,942,000 barrels in 1926), natural gas, iron ore (magnetite and hematite, 1,096,000 long tons in 1926), and pig-iron, 13,588,000 long tons in 1926. Pennsylvania has important quarries, cement works, and brick and tile works. The output of by-product coke in 1926 was 11,201,000 net tons, and of beehive coke, 9,329,000 tons. In 1926, the output of cement was 42,866,000 barrels. Pittsburg, having abundant supplies of coal, has become the principal iron-work centre.

According to the reports of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs for the year 1924, there were in Pennsylvania 17,353 industrial establishments, with an aggregate capital amounting to 5,249,800,000 dollars, employing 150,110 salaried officials and 1,363,110 wage-earners. The salaries in 1924 amounted to 342,879,600 dollars, and the wages to 1,679,094,900 dollars. The value of the output was 7,349,762,200 dollars in 1924. The metal industry ranked first, the principal products being iron and steel bars, valued at 123,424,000 dollars; billets, blooms and slabs, valued at 377,392,300 dollars; iron and steel ingots, valued at 321,715,300 dollars; pig iron, valued at 195,148,900 dollars; and pipes and tubing, valued at 189,947,700 dollars. Next in importance were textile products, the largest items being silk and silk goods, valued at 275,736,400 dollars; hosiery and knitted goods, valued at 139,024,100 dollars; and men's, women's, and children's clothing, valued at 88,719,900 dollars. Mines and quarries came third in importance. Food and kindred products ranked fourth, the most important items being sugar refining, 127,594,200 dollars; bread and other bakery products, 127,167,000 dollars; slaughtering and meat packing, 108,876,300 dollars; candy products, 72,145,200 dollars. Chemical products amounted to 66,702,600 dollars, and oils, 18,540,500 dollars. Printing and publishing and paper products showed products valued at 117,000,000 dollars. Leather products were valued at 97,641,800 dollars, and boots and shoes, valued at 52,834,700; glass manufacture was valued at 80,633,500 dollars, and terra cotta and fire-clay products, 23,978,300; tobacco products were valued at 123,427,400 dollars.

The total value of imports at the port of Philadelphia for the year ending June 30, 1926, was 198,367,728 dollars, and of exports, 192,389,851 dollars. The steamship lines trading with the port are classified for the year 1926 as follows:—Regular sailings, 60 lines; occasional sailings, 28 lines; coast-wise, 14 lines; oil, 8 lines; and local and inland, 12 lines. Arrivals and sailings of vessels engaged in the foreign trade numbered 3,614, with a tonnage of 16,746,622, while 7,657 vessels arrived from and sailed to coast-wise ports with a tonnage of 20,214,010. Of the vessels arriving from foreign ports, 446 were American. In 1925 Philadelphia exported 66,028 tons of anthracite coal valued at 658,503 dollars, and 173,845 tons of bituminous coal valued at 907,997 dollars. In 1925, the aggregate length of steam railroads was 12,672 miles, and the total of all tracks operated by electric railways, 4,541 miles (1925).

Roads. The State road system, not including township, city and borough roads and streets, has a mileage of 12,000 miles of which 7,500 miles have been hard-surfaced at an expenditure of 375,000,000 dollars.

Statistics on June 30, 1926, of banks and banking institutions are:—

—	No.	Amount of Deposits	Total Assets	Deposit Accounts

RHODE ISLAND.

Constitution and Government.—The earliest settlers in the region which now forms the State of Rhode Island were colonists from Massachusetts who had been driven forth on account of their non-acceptance of the prevailing religious beliefs. The first of the settlements was made in 1636; and their numbers and importance quickly increased, settlers of every creed being welcomed. In 1647, a patent was granted for the government of the settlements, and on July 8, 1663, a charter was executed recognising the settlers as forming a body corporate and politic by the name of the English Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. On May 29, 1790, the State accepted the Federal Constitution and entered the Union as one of the 13 original States. The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate has 39 members, besides the Lieutenant-Governor who is ex officio President of the Senate. The House of Representatives consists of 100 members. Every citizen, 21 years of age, who has resided in the State for 2 years, and is duly registered, is qualified to vote for any State officer.

Governor.—Aram J. Pothier, 1927-29 (8,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Ernest L. Sprague.

The State is represented in the Federal Congress by 2 Senators and 3 Representatives.

The State is divided into 5 counties and 39 cities and towns. The State Capital is Providence.

Area, Population, Education.—Area 1,248 square miles, of which nearly 181 square miles are water. Population on January 1, 1925, according to State Census, 679,260. Population of census years :—

The bonded debt, August 31, 1926, amounted to 4,852,200 dollars. The bonds are held entirely by State educational, charitable, and penitentiary funds. In 1927 the total assessed value of all property was 3,818,409,939 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 536 officers, 9 warrant officers and 7,825 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Texas is one of the most important agricultural States of the Union. In 1925, it had 465,642 farms. Total value of all farm property in 1925 was 3,471,867,466 dollars. In the arid region of Texas and New Mexico an area of 160,000 acres is to be reclaimed under the Federal Reclamation Act. There are at present 2,950,488 acres of irrigable lands in Texas, of which 720,000 acres were actually irrigated in 1924. The chief crops in 1926 were (in bushels) maize, 106,863,000; wheat, 32,796,000; oats, 33,666,000; rice, 6,142,000; potatoes, 2,100,000; sweet potatoes, 8,556,000. Cotton in 1926 covered 19,128,000 acres and yielded 5,900,000 bales. Other products are peanuts, pecans, grain, sorghum (48,276,000 bushels, value 20,552,000 dollars), vegetables, and fruits (especially peaches, oranges, and grape-fruit). The State has a very great livestock industry; on January 1, 1928, it contained 748,000 horses, 1,000,000 mules, 936,000 milch cows, 5,607,000 other cattle, 4,593,000 sheep, and 1,375,000 swine. The wool-clip in 1926 amounted to 25,000,000 pounds.

The chief mineral products are petroleum, sulphur, natural gas, cement, and quicksilver. In 1926, 165,647,610 barrels of petroleum were produced, valued at 295,000,000 dollars. In 1922, the amount of quicksilver produced was 2,970 flasks (of 75 pounds) valued at 171,607 dollars. Silver output in 1926 was 450,000 fine ounces. In 1925, Texas produced 127,997,594 cubic feet of natural gas. Coal (1,061,000 short tons in 1926) and lignite (1,514,425 tons in 1924) are also produced. Other mineral products are salt, cement (5,007,000 barrels in 1926), gypsum, granite, sandstone, and limestone. Total value of mineral products in 1925, 351,212,000 dollars. There are also in western Texas extensive undeveloped potash fields.

In 1925, there were in the State 3,606 manufacturing establishments with 106,792 wage-earners. The amount paid in wages was 116,363,302 dollars. The cost of material used was 845,143,862 dollars, and the value of the output was 1,237,952,469 dollars.

A large trade passes through the port of Galveston, which is by far the most important outlet for the cotton grown in the United States, and as a commercial port it is now second only to New York. Imports in 1926 (year ending June 30), 32,652,107 dollars; exports, 501,741,702 dollars. A permanent causeway over 2 miles in length, to connect Galveston with the mainland, was opened to traffic in May, 1912. The level of the town has been raised so as to protect it from storms. The steam railways in the State (January 1, 1927) have a total mileage of 16,646 miles (main lines). There are 1,018 miles of electric inter-urban railway in active operation in Texas, and 91 miles of inter-urban lines operated by gasoline power.

There are 1,047 miles of navigable water in the rivers of Texas. The long coast-line with its good harbour facilitates traffic by sea. The Houston Ship Channel (50 miles long), connecting Houston with the Gulf of Mexico, makes that city the largest inland cotton market of the world.

Texas had on June 30, 1926, 662 national banks with resources of 969,499,000 dollars, demand deposits of 461,319,000 dollars and savings deposits of 130,042,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 38,882,000 dollars.

UTAH.

Constitution and Government.—Utah, which had been acquired by the United States during the Mexican war, was, in 1847, settled by Mormons, and on Sept. 9, 1850, organised as a Territory. It was admitted as a State into the Union on Jan. 4, 1896.

The Legislature consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives ; but the Constitution provides for the initiation of any desired legislation by the legal voters or such number of them as may be determined by law, and such voters may require any law passed by less than a two-thirds vote of each House of the Legislature to be submitted to the voters of the State before coming into effect.

The Senate (in part renewed every two years) consists of 20 members, elected for four years ; the House of Representatives has 55 members elected for two years. Qualified as electors are all citizens, male or female, who, not being idiots, insane or criminals have resided one year in the State, four months in the county, and 60 days in the precinct in which the election is held.

Governor.—Geo. H. Dern, 1925–29 (6,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—H. E. Crockett.

There are 29 counties in the State. The Capital is Salt Lake City.

Area and Population.—Area, 84,990 square miles, of which 2,806 square miles are water. The area of the Indian reservations in 1926 was 526 square miles, and the population, 1,584 Indians.

Census population on January 1, 1920, 449,396.

The population at the date of each of four Federal censuses was :—

Years	White	Coloured	Total	Per Sq. Mile	Years	White	Coloured	Total	Per Sq. Mile
1890	205,925	4,854	210,779	2·6	1910	366,588	6,768	373,351	4·5
1900	272,465	4,284	276,749	3·4	1920	441,901	7,495	449,396	5·5

Estimated population July 1, 1928, 531,000.

In 1920, the population by sex and race was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	227,232	884	2,543	1,442	232,051
Female . . .	214,669	612	795	1,269	217,345
Total . . .	441,901	1,446	3,338	2,711	449,396

Of the total in 1920, 56,455 (12·6 per cent.) were foreign-born whites, of whom 14,836 (26·0 per cent.) were English, 3,589 (6·4 per cent.) German, 3,029 (5·4 per cent.) Greek, 6,073 (10·8 per cent.) Swedes, 1,207 (2·1 per cent.) Irish, 6970 (12·3 per cent.) Danes, and 3,225 (5·7 per cent.) Italian.

Of the total population in 1920, 48·0 per cent. were urban and 0·3 per cent. Negro. The largest city is Salt Lake City with a population of 118,110 according to the census of 1920. Ogden in 1920 had 32,804 inhabitants, and Provo, 10,303.

Latter-Day Saints form about 75 per cent. of the Church membership of the State. There are Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Christian Scientists, and Congregationalists in small numbers.

Instruction.—In 1920, the percentage of illiteracy in the population was only 1·9, the number being 6,264. School attendance for 20 weeks annually (10 consecutive), in city districts 30 weeks (10 consecutive), is compulsory on children from 8 to 16 years of age. Where high schools are established attendance for 30 weeks is required of those under 18 who have not completed a high school course, unless it is found desirable to excuse them from attendance to enter employment. Those so excused to enter employment are required to attend part-time schools where the number is sufficient to warrant the establishment of the schools.

For the school year ending June 30, 1925, the total expenditures for elementary and secondary education amounted to 9,384,000 dollars. During the same year there were enrolled 136,278 pupils in the elementary and high schools. There were 3,624 (2,890 women) elementary teachers and 1,230 (600 women) high school teachers.

The University of Utah (1850), Salt Lake City, during the school year 1922-1923, had 160 instructors and 2,536 regular students. The Agricultural College of Utah, Logan (1890), during the same year, had 84 instructors and 1,150 regular students. The Mormon Church maintains the Brigham Young University at Provo (1875), with 82 instructors and 864 students; the Brigham Young College, Logan (1878), with 30 instructors and 97 students; the Latter Day Saints University, including the L.D.S. Business College, with 58 instructors, 1,774 secondary students enrolled in day schools, and 296 students in night school; the Weber Normal College, Ogden, with 23 instructors, 164 college students, and 560 secondary students; the Dixie Normal College, St. George, with 25 instructors, 50 college students, and 383 secondary and special students; and the Snow Normal College, Ephraim, with 15 instructors, 80 college students, and 270 secondary students. The Westminster College (Presbyterian), with its Preparatory Department, employed 16 instructors, and had 41 college students and 140 secondary students. Schools of other denominations also are maintained in different parts of the State.

Finance and Defence.—For the year ending June 30, 1926, the revenue and expenditure were:—

	Dollars

The bonded debt of the State on November 1, 1927, amounted to 9,660,000 dollars.

The assessed valuation of real and of personal property in 1927 was 701,181,704 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 98 officers, 1 warrant officer and 1,086 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—The area of unappropriated and unreserved lands within the State on June 30, 1924, was 28,767,687 acres, of which 16,319,909 acres were surveyed and 12,447,778 acres unsurveyed. The State contained 7,481,573 acres of national forest in 1926. In 1925, it had 25,992 farms with a total area of 5,000,724 acres, of which 1,424,086 acres were crop land. The total value of all farm property in 1925 was 250,317,551 dollars.

In 1926, the chief crops were wheat, 6,094,000 bushels; oats, 2,280,000 bushels; potatoes, 2,465,000 bushels; hay, 1,816,000 tons. Maize, barley, and rye are also grown. Much attention is paid to vegetables and fruit trees. There is a considerable live-stock industry. On January 1, 1928, the numbers were: horses and mules 106,000, milch cows 92,000, other cattle 472,000, sheep 2,730,000, swine 98,000. The wool-clip (1926) yielded 19,430,000 pounds of wool.

The State is unique in the diversity of its metal production, particularly of precious and semi-precious metals. In 1926 the principal minerals were gold (178,000 fine ounces), silver (19,300,000 fine ounces), copper (259,549,000 pounds), and coal (4,434,000 tons); also lead (151,127 short tons in 1926), gypsum and salt (77,350 tons in 1926). Other products are sulphur, zinc, and asphalt. Total value of mineral production, 1925, 100,275,000 dollars.

In 1925, there were 517 manufacturing establishments with 15,007 wage-earners, who earned 18,199,536 dollars. The cost of material used was valued at 127,543,099 dollars, and the value of the output was 177,224,538.

In 1925, the State had 2,198 miles of main line, the principal railways being the Denver and Rio Grande (762 miles), and 483 miles of electric railway.

Utah on June 30, 1926, had 20 national banks with resources of 56,114,000 dollars, demand deposits of 21,049,000 dollars and savings deposits of 12,608,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 51,787,000 dollars.

VERMONT.

Constitution and Government.—Vermont was admitted into the Union as a State on February 18, 1791. The first Constitution was established by Convention at Windsor, July 2, 1777. The Constitution in force at the time of admission was that of 1786. In 1793, a new Constitution was adopted which, with amendments made in 1828, 1836, 1850, 1870, 1883, 1913, and 1924, is still in force. Amendments are proposed by two-thirds vote of the Senate each decennium, and must be accepted by two sessions of the Legislature before being submitted to popular vote. The State Legislature consists of a Senate of 30 members and a House of Representatives of 248 members; and meets in January in odd numbered years. The salary of each member is 400 dollars and mileage. Electors are all citizens of the United States who possess certain residential qualifications, and have taken the freeman's oath set forth in the Constitution.

The State sends two Senators and two Representatives to the United States Congress.

Governor.—John E. Weeks, 1927–29 (3,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Rawson C. Myrick.

The State Capital is Montpelier (7,125 pop., 1920). The State is divided into fourteen counties, and 248 towns and cities.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 9,564 square miles, of which 440 square miles are water. Census population on January 1, 1920, 352,428. Population at four census years was as follows.

In 1920, the foreign-born white population numbered 44,526, or 12·6 per cent. of the total population of the State. Of these, 14,181 (31·8 per cent.) were Canadian French, 10,687 (24 per cent.) Canadian English, 2,884 Irish, 2,197 English, 1,854 Scottish, and 4,067 (9·1 per cent.) Italian. The largest cities are Burlington, with a population in 1920 of 22,779; Rutland, 14,954; Barre, 10,008. Of the population in 1920, 31·2 per cent. were urban and 0·2 per cent. Negro.

The principal religious denominations are: Roman Catholic, Congregational, Methodist, Baptist, Protestant Episcopal, and Universalist, in the order given.

School attendance during the full school term is compulsory for children from 6 to 16 years of age. No child under 16 who has not completed the first two years of the junior high school course may be employed in certain designated employments. In 1926-27, the 2,122 public schools had 2,311 teachers and 52,166 enrolled pupils. There were also 94 high schools with 544 teachers and 11,864 pupils. In 1926-27, there were 4 normal schools with 35 teachers and 520 students, and 10 one-year teacher training departments with one teacher in each class. Total number of students in these classes was 155. The University of Vermont (1800) had, in October, 1926, 159 instructors and 1,276 students; Middlebury College (1800) had 56 instructors and 629 students; Norwich University (1834) had 38 instructors and 331 students. Expenditure on education (1926-27) amounted to 4,964,236 dollars.

On August 1, 1927, the number of persons in State institutions was as follows: House of correction, 114; State prison, 230; hospital for insane, 841; school for feeble-minded, 267; industrial school, 233.

Finance and Defence.—The revenue and expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1927, were:—

	Dollars
Cash balance July 1, 1926 . . . . .	1,667,044
Receipts, 1926-27 . . . . .	8,296,116
Total . . . . .	9,963,160
Disbursements, 1926-27 . . . . .	8,258,643
Cash balance June 30, 1927 . . . . .	1,704,517

The assessed value of real property in 1926 was 213,954,239 dollars, and of personal property, 45,503,759 dollars.

The National Guard on July 1, 1927, had 76 officers, 1 warrant officer and 1,114 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the most important occupation within the State. In 1920, the rural population was 70 per cent. of the total population. In 1925, the State contained 27,786 farms with a total area of 3,925,683 acres, of which 1,149,656 acres were crop land. The total value of all farm property in 1925 was 180,911,645 dollars. The chief agricultural crop is hay (1,475,000 tons in 1926), but cereals are grown in large quantities; in 1926, the yield of oats was 3,116,000 bushels; of maize, 3,948,000 bushels; wheat, 40,000 bushels; and barley, 180,000 bushels. The production of potatoes in 1926 was 1,815,000 bushels; and apples, 800,000 bushels. The production of maple products in Vermont in 1927, was 1,417,000 gallons of syrup, and 1,694,000 pounds of sugar.

Cattle raising, especially dairy cattle, is one of the chief agricultural pursuits. In 1925, Vermont had 393,274 cattle on farms, or over one-third of all the cattle in New England. The value of live-stock on Vermont farms in 1925 was 25,510,828 dollars. On January 1, 1928, Vermont had 284,000 milch cows, 404,000 other cattle, 55,000 horses, 46,000 sheep, and 61,000 swine.

The forests of the State provide annually over 120,000,000 board feet of lumber, and approximately 100,000 cords of pulpwood. In addition to this, nearly one half million cords of firewood are cut annually for domestic use.

Other industries are flour-milling, foundry and machine-shop work and the manufacture of hosiery and other cotton and woollen goods. According to the returns of the Federal census of manufactures in 1925, there were in Vermont 951 manufacturing establishments, paying 32,326,006 dollars in wages to 27,563 wage-earners, using raw material costing 74,387,898 dollars, and giving an output valued at 138,269,861 dollars.

The marble quarries, first opened in 1785, produce half of the marble of the United States. The State contains the largest and most valuable deposits of marble, granite, and asbestos of any State in the United States, and ranks second in the production of slate, talc, and soapstone. Metals occur only in small quantities. Total mineral output in 1925 was valued at 14,409,000 dollars.

There are (1927) 1,227 miles of steam railway in the State, and electric railways with 58 miles of track.

On June 30, 1927, there were 19 mutual savings banks and 40 savings banks and trust companies in the State with 287,534 depositors, having to their credit 167,894,235 dollars. The average amount of savings deposits per depositor is 636 dollars. On June 30, 1926, 46 national banks reported resources of 67,843,000 dollars, demand deposits of 17,545,000 dollars and savings deposits of 31,321,000 dollars.

VIRGINIA.

Constitution and Government.—The first English Charter for settlements in America was that granted by James I. in 1606 for the planting of colonies in Virginia. The State was one of the thirteen original States in the Union. On the outbreak of the civil war in 1861, Virginia, after long hesitation, decided to join the seceding States a course objected to by the western portion of the State, which in 1863 was admitted into the Union as West Virginia.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Delegates, the former containing not more than 40 nor less than 33 members and the latter not more than 100 nor less than 90. Senators are elected for 4 years. The Senate contains 40 members. The House of Delegates contains 100 members, elected for 2 years. Qualified as electors are (with few exceptions) all citizens 21 years of age, resident in the State for 2 years and in the county, city, town, or precinct for which the election is held for 30 days, who have paid their State poll-taxes and registered.

The State sends to the Federal Congress 2 Senators and 10 Representatives.

Governor.—Harry Flood Byrd, 1926–30 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—B. O. James.

The State Capital is Richmond.

Area, Population, Instruction —Area, 42,627 square miles, including 2,865 square miles water area. Census population on January 1, 1920, 2,309,187. Population for four Federal census years :—

Of the total population in 1920, 47·8 per cent. were urban and 0·2 per cent. Negro.

In 1926 there were 16,654 marriages performed as compared with 16,094 in 1925; 2,386 divorces were granted as against 2,401 in 1925.

The chief religious bodies are: Roman Catholic, Lutheran, Methodist, Congregationalist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Christian Science, Unitarian, and Seventh Day Adventist.

Education.—The educational law of 1921 compels all children between the ages of 7 and 14, and those between 14 and 16 not regularly and lawfully employed in some useful service at home or elsewhere, to attend school for six school months in towns and villages, eight school months in cities except Milwaukee, and a full school year in Milwaukee for each of the compulsory years. Compulsory part-time education in the day-time for employed children was introduced in 1911. The present requirement is half-time for minors 14 to 16, and 8 hours per week for minors 16 to 18 years of age. In 1926-27, the 6,741 elementary schools had 15,789 teachers and 420,964 enrolled pupils, the 432 public high schools had 3,676 teachers and 92,501 pupils. The 9 State normal schools had, in 1926-27, 409 teachers and 4,822 students. The 37 public part-time day schools in 1925-26 had 616 teachers and 34,190 pupils. There were in 1925-26, 42 State supervised evening schools with a total enrolment of 35,282. There are also 31 county training schools, which train teachers for the rural schools, and the Stout Institute for training teachers for the vocational schools.

The University of Wisconsin at Madison was established in 1848. It had, in 1925-26, 1,175 professors and instructors and 8,331 students. Instruction by correspondence was introduced in 1906-7, and in 1925-26 was imparted to 20,292 students.

The total expenditure for public education in 1925-26 was 62,892,151 dollars.

Finance and Defence.—For the year ended June 30, 1927, the receipts and disbursements of the State Government were to the following amounts:—

	Dollars
Balance July 1, 1926 . . . . .	20,484,293
Receipts for year, 1926-27 . . . . .	72,616,497
Total . . . . .	93,100,790
Disbursements for year 1926-27 . . . . .	74,893,124
Balance June 30, 1927 . . . . .	18,707,666

The State has no debt except to its own trust funds, which on June 30, 1927, was 1,663,700 dollars.

In 1925, the assessed valuation of real property in the State was 4,699,507,754 dollars, and of personal property 895,331,444 dollars, total 5,594,439,198 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 306 commissioned officers, 6 warrant officers and 4,765 enlisted men.

Production, Industry, Communications.—Wisconsin has slightly more people engaged in manufactures than in agriculture, but is the leading dairy State of the Union. In 1925, the farms numbered 193,155 with a total area of 21,851,733 acres, of which 11,145,000 acres were improved land. The value of all farm land and buildings in 1925 was 1,898,766,200 dollars. The yield of the principal crops in 1926 was: maize, 73,106,000 bushels; wheat, 2,599,000 bushels; oats, 96,638,000 bushels; barley, 17,974,000 bushels; potatoes, 27,140,000 bushels; hay, 6,043,000 tons. The area under tobacco (1926) was 29,000 acres; the yield was 33,350,000 pounds. On January 1, 1928, the live-stock consisted of 572,000 horses, 7,000 mules, 2,014,000 milch cows, 1,994,000 all cattle, 430,000 sheep and lambs, and 1,863,000 swine. The wool-clip in 1926 amounted to 2,508,000 pounds of wool.

Iron ore, zinc (26,800 short tons, 1926), and lead ore (2,052 short tons in 1926), are the chief mineral products. Excluding pig-iron (172,435 long tons), the total value of mineral products in 1925 was 19,205,000 dollars.

In 1925, Wisconsin had 7,262 manufacturing establishments, with 247,341 wage-earners; 314,883,011 dollars were paid in wages, 1,084,747,480 dollars on raw material and the value of the manufactured product was 1,859,243,930 dollars.

On January 1, 1927, there were 7,485 miles of railroads operated in the State besides 989 miles of electric railway track.

There are in the State 78,000 miles of road of all classes, of which 31,300 miles are improved by gravel, macadam, or other surface. There are 10,000 miles on the State trunk highway system on which from 7,000,000 to 10,000,000 dollars is spent annually for permanent construction.

On March 23, 1927, there were 156 national banks with 27,780,000 dollars capital and 15,400,000 surplus, with 470,763,000 dollars in resources. On March 23, 1927, there were also 810 State banks with 36,108,500 dollars capital, 18,826,961 dollars surplus, and 633,408,482 dollars in resources, and 6 mutual savings banks with 6,432,028 dollars in deposits.

WYOMING.

Government.—Wyoming was admitted into the Union on July 10, 1890. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 25 members, elected for four years (about one-half retiring every two years), and a House of Representatives of 54 members elected for two years.

The suffrage extends to all citizens, male and female, who can read, and who are registered as voters and have resided in the State one year and in the county 60 days next preceding the election.

Governor.—Frank C. Emerson, 1927–1931 (6,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—F. E. Lucas.

The capital is Cheyenne.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 97,914 square miles, of which 320 square miles are water. Of the total, about 3,300 square miles are comprised within the Yellowstone National Park, which since 1872 has been reserved for public uses.

Census population on January 1, 1920, 194,402.

The Federal census results since 1890, show the population to have been as follows:—

Years	White	Coloured	Total	Per sq. mile	Years	White	Coloured	Total	Per sq. mile
1890	59,324	3,231	62,555	0.6	1910	140,318	5,647	145,965	1.5
1900	89,051	3,480	92,531	0.9	1920	190,146	4,256	194,402	2.0

State census population, 1925, 206,381. Of these, 202,303 were whites (112,292 males and 90,011 females); 969 negroes (588 males and 381 females); 1,160 Asiatics and 1,949 Indians.

In 1920, the population according to sex and race was:—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . .	107,501	868	1,280	715	110,859
Female. . . .	82,645	512	258	628	84,043
Total . . . .	190,146	1,375	1,538	1,343	194,402

In 1920, the foreign-born white population numbered 25,255 (or 13.0 per cent. of the total), of whom 2,292 were Germans, 2,505 English (9.9 per cent.), 1,488 Canadians, 1,236 Greek, 956 Irish, 1,948 Italians, 1,439 Scotch, and 2,042 Swedish.

Estimated population July 1, 1928, 247,000.

The Indian reservation within the State has (1926) an area of 2,899 square miles, and a population of 1,899.

Of the total population in 1920, 29.5 per cent. were urban, and 0.7 per cent. Negro. The largest towns are Cheyenne (capital), with State census population in 1925 of 13,202; Casper, with 23,288; Sheridan, with 8,436; Rock Springs, with 6,875; Laramie with 9,629.

The religious bodies with the most numerous membership are the Roman Catholic, Mormon, Protestant Episcopal, Methodist, and Presbyterian.

In 1925, the 1,380 public schools had 2,251 teachers, and 44,017 enrolled pupils; there were 80 accredited high schools with 417 teachers and 8,813 pupils (3,767 boys and 4,546 girls). Teachers are trained in the normal school which is carried on in connection with the University of Wyoming, at Laramie, where there is also an agricultural college. This University was founded in 1887 and in 1925 had 116 professors and instructors and 900 students. Expenditure on education in the school year 1923-24 was 8,413,275 dollars.

Finance and Defence.—The cash receipts and disbursements of the State (exclusive of trust funds) for the biennium ending September 30, 1926, are given as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance, October 1, 1924 . . . .	4,312,215
Receipts for 1924-26 . . . .	28,545,533
Total . . . .	32,857,748
Disbursements 1924-26 . . . .	27,345,333
Balance, Sept. 30, 1926 . . . .	5,512,415

On September 30, 1926, the bonded debt amounted to 1,919,000 dollars, and the assessed value of property in the State in 1927 to 461,685,564 dollars.

The National Guard on June 30, 1927, consisted of 43 officers, 1 warrant officer and 676 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Wyoming is semi-arid and agriculture is carried on by irrigation and by "dry farming." In 1925, there were 15,512 farms, with a total area of 18,663,308 acres, of which 1,877,879 acres were crop land. The total value of all farm property in 1925 was 240,396,413 dollars. Such crops as are grown consist of vegetables, cereals, and fruits. The value of the crops for 1924 was estimated at 18,889,391 dollars. The wool-clip (1926) yielded 22,338,000 pounds of wool. The domestic animals on January 1st, 1928, were 190,000 horses, 72,000 milch cows and 764,000 other cattle, 8,181,000 sheep, and 138,000 swine.

In 1926, 8,505,740 acres in the State, being 13 per cent. of its area, were national forest land. The State has numerous fish hatcheries which stock the streams with trout, and also possesses the largest elk herds in the world.

Wyoming is largely a coal-producing State. The output of coal in 1926 was 6,968,000 short tons. The iron ore production in 1926 was 630,000 long tons. The quarries yield limestone and sandstone, besides phosphate rock. The output of petroleum was 24,558,000 barrels in 1921. Total value of mineral products in 1925 was 78,755,000 dollars.

Manufactures are mostly confined to production for local consumption. In 1925 (according to Federal census results), the State had 224 industrial establishments; the wage-earners numbered 6,333, wages paid amounted to 10,526,253 dollars, the materials used cost 76,073,349 dollars, and the output amounted to 107,984,752 dollars.

In 1925, the steam railways in the State had a length of 1,991 miles. There were also 16 miles of electric railway.

The Federal Highway System for the State comprises 3,169 miles. The system of stage route transportation is still common.

On June 30, 1926, Wyoming had 32 national banks with resources of 43,515,000 dollars, demand deposits of 16,190,000 dollars and savings deposits of 13,059,000 dollars; State banks and trust companies had savings deposits of 8 563,000 dollars.

OUTLYING TERRITORIES.

ALASKA.

Government.—Alaska was purchased by the United States from Russia under the treaty of March 30, 1867, for 7,200,000 dollars. The Governor is appointed by the President of the United States for 4 years.

By Act of Congress approved August 24, 1912, Alaska became a Territory, with a legislative assembly consisting of 8 senators and 16 representatives. Congress reserved to itself the right to legislate on certain subjects, so that the Territory is now governed conjointly by Congress at Washington and by its local legislative assembly. The first session of the legislature convened at Juneau, the capital, on March 3, 1913, and continued in session 60 days. Regular sessions are held biennially. Special sessions may be called by the Governor. The latter is appointed for four years by the President.

Governor—Geo. A. Parks, 1925–29 (7,000 dollars).

Secretary to Governor—Harry G. Watson.

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is 590,884 square miles, and the census population from 1890 to 1920 is shown as follows:—

Year	Population	Per Sq. Mile	Year	Population	Per Sq. Mile
1890	32,052	0.05	1910	64,356	0.1
1900	63,592	0.1	1920	55,036	0.1

Of the population in 1920, 34,539 were males and 20,497 females; 27,883 were whites and 26,558 were Indians, 56 Chinese, 312 Japanese, and 128 Negroes. About 20,000 people, employed in mines, canneries, and railway construction, spend a few months a year in Alaska, but these are not included in the enumeration.

The largest town is Juneau, the seat of Government, which had (census of 1920) a population of 3,058; the second largest is Ketchikan with a population of 2,458; other towns are Anchorage, 1,856; Sitka, 1,175; Fairbanks, 1,155; Cordova, 955; Douglas, 919; Petersburg, 879; Nome, 852; Wrangell, 821; and Seward, 652. There are altogether 18 incorporated towns.

Instruction, Justice.—In Alaska many religious missions are at work, representing very diverse denominations: Russian Orthodox, Roman Catholic, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Congregational and others.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, there were 90 territorial white schools in Alaska with 4,915 enrolled pupils and 232 teachers. During the school year 1926–27 there were 12 four-year high schools maintained. Total cost of instruction, 502,661 dollars. In 1920, 24.8 per cent. (26.5 per cent. in 1910) were illiterate. The Bureau of Education of the Federal government handles the education, hospitalisation and general care of the native population. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, there were 88 native schools in operation and 5 hospitals.

For the administration of justice the territory is constituted as a judicial district with 4 subdivisions and 4 courts.

Finance.—In the territory of Alaska there is no provision for taxation of real or personal property, except in municipalities where real estate and personal property may be taxed 2 per cent. for municipal purposes only. The revenues are derived from licences to conduct businesses.

For the year ended December 31, 1926, the revenue and expenditure were as follows:—

	Dollars.
Balance January 1, 1926 . . . . .	257,386
Receipts, 1926 . . . . .	1,248,662
Total . . . . .	1,506,048
Disbursements, 1926 . . . . .	892,038
Balance December 31, 1926 . . . . .	614,010

The Territory has no funded debt.

Production and Industry.—In some parts of the territory the climate during the brief summer is not unsuitable for agricultural operations. There are agricultural experimental stations which are giving valuable demonstrations. In 1920, there were 364 farms with a total area of 90,652 acres, of which 5,736 acres was improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1920 was 1,808,641 dollars. About 1,280 reindeer have been introduced from Siberia, and the industry is thriving. There were (in 1926) approximately 350,000 reindeer in the country distributed in 110 herds and valued at 8,750,000 dollars. In the period 1918–26 more than 1,875,000 pounds of reindeer meat were shipped from Alaska. Shipments for 1923 were 200,000 pounds, for 1924, 375,000 pounds, and 1925, 680,000 pounds. In Northern and Western Alaska are 200,000 square miles of treeless region worthless for agriculture but capable of furnishing pasturage for 4,000,000 reindeer. About 275 blue fox ranches, stocked with 36,000 blue foxes, represent an investment of 6,850,000 dollars. Value of land fur-bearing animals shipped from Alaska 1926 was 2,359,639 dollars.

The southern coastal section of Alaska contains large and readily accessible timber resources which maintain a considerable sawmill industry and are capable of supporting an immense pulp and paper development. This timber is largely included in two National Forests aggregating 21,343,172 acres and officially estimated to contain 84,760 million board feet of timber, 74 per cent. western hemlock and 20 per cent. Sitka spruce.

The chief industries of Alaska are salmon fishing and mining. The laws for the protection and regulation of the highly valuable fisheries are administered by the Department of Commerce of the Federal Government.

In 1926, all the fisheries of Alaska employed 28,052 persons; the capital invested was 74,557,522 dollars, and the value of the products was 54,669,882 dollars. These figures include the salmon, herring, halibut, cod, whale, clam, shrimp, crab, trout, and minor fisheries.

The salmon industry in 1926 employed 23,507 persons; capital invested was 55,401,827 dollars, and products were valued at 48,178,965 dollars.

The most important part of the salmon industry was salmon canning, in which in 1926 there were employed 21,906 persons; capital invested was 60,535,550 dollars, and products were 6,652,882 cases, valued at 46,080,004 dollars. The number of salmon canneries operated in 1926 was 132.

The fur-seal herd of the Pribilof Islands is also administered by the Department of Commerce. This herd in 1926 contained 761,281 animals.

Gold is worked in South-East Alaska, where a low-grade ore is found ; in the interior on the Yukon river ; and at Nome and other places on the west coast. The output of gold in 1926 was 324,450 fine ounces, valued at 6,707,000 dollars ; of silver, 690,000 fine ounces, valued at 430,500 dollars ; and of copper, 67,778,000 pounds, valued at 9,489,000 dollars. From 1880, the total value of the gold output of the Territory was 353,390,798 dollars ; silver, 10,433,088 dollars ; and copper, 178,162,879 dollars. Tin ore deposits near Cape Prince of Wales are of a high grade ; lead is produced ; coal is worked ; petroleum, marble, gypsum, quicksilver and lode platinum metals are found. Total value of mineral output in 1924, 17,457,333 dollars ; in 1925, 18,220,692 dollars ; 1926, 17,657,800 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The value of the domestic merchandise shipped from the United States to Alaska in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, amounted to 32,062,902 dollars, and from Alaska to the United States 80,018,034 dollars, plus 5,827,281 dollars in gold ore and bullion. Merchandise from foreign ports amounted to 543,683 dollars and exports to foreign ports, 522,592 dollars, including gold and silver. In the calendar year 1926, 3,038 vessels of 965,843 tons entered the ports of Alaska in domestic trade, and 2,902 of 910,338 tons cleared. In foreign trade 1,204 of 317,805 tons entered, and 494 of 240,830 tons cleared. The chief ports of shipment of the United States to Alaska are on Puget Sound.

There is a railway of 112 miles from Skagway to the town of White Horse (in the Canadian Yukon region) ; thence transport is by coach or, in summer, by steamer. The Copper River and North Western Railway completed its line (standard gauge) from Cordova to Kennecott, a distance of 197 miles, in 1911. In 1915 the route for the Alaska railroad was decided upon, to run from Seward to Fairbanks, a distance of 467 miles (509 miles with branches). The whole of this is now open to passenger and freight traffic. Alaska has 1,533 miles of wagon roads, 1,086 miles of sled roads, and 6,671 miles of trails. The Alaskan towns are connected with the United States and with Canada by telegraph. There are about 180 post-offices, and good mail services in the territory.

The territory had, on June 30, 1926, four National Banks with a total capital of 200,000 dollars ; surplus and undivided profits, 196,059 dollars ; and deposits, 4,373,875 dollars. There were also 13 territorial banks with a total capital of 640,000 dollars ; surplus, 491,441 dollars ; deposits, 7,757,254 dollars.

HAWAII.

The Hawaiian Islands lie in the North Pacific Ocean, between 18° 54' and 20° 14' north latitude, and 154° 48' and 160° 13' west longitude. They are about 2,020 miles south-west of San Francisco, and are in the line of steamer travel between Victoria, B.C., and Australia and New Zealand.

Government.—The Hawaiian Islands (formerly known as the Sandwich Islands), formed during the greater part of the nineteenth century an independent kingdom, but in 1893 the reigning Queen, Liliuokalani (died November 11, 1917), was deposed and a provisional government formed; in 1894, a Republic was proclaimed, and in accordance with the request of the people of Hawaii expressed through the Legislature of the Republic, and a resolution of the United States Congress of July 6, 1898 (signed July 7 by President McKinley), the Islands were on August 12, 1898, formally annexed to the United States. On June 14, 1900, they were constituted as the Territory of Hawaii. The Organic Act has since been amended several times. There is a Legislature of two Houses, a Senate of 15 members elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 30 members elected for two years. Sessions, limited to 60 days, are held biennially. The Governor and Secretary are appointed for four years by the President of the United States.

Governor.—W. R. Farrington, 1925–1929 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of the Territory.—Raymond C. Brown.

The Territory is represented in Congress by a delegate elected biennially.

Area and Population.—The total area of the islands is 6,449 square miles. The principal islands of the group are Hawaii, 4,015; Maui, 728; Oahu, 593; Kauai, 547; Molokai, 261; Lanai, 139; Niihau, 97; Kahoolawe, 69. According to the census taken on April 15, 1910, the total population of the islands numbered 191,909, an increase of 37,908, or 24·61 per cent. since 1900. The average number of persons to the square mile in 1910 was 29·75. The Capital, Honolulu, in the Island of Oahu, had 106,600 inhabitants on July 1, 1927.

Population on January 1, 1920 (U.S. Census), 255,912 (151,146 males).

The estimated number of Hawaiians on June 30, 1927, was 20,931, and 24,645 part-Hawaiians. There are estimated to be 25,198 Chinese, 132,242 Japanese, 28,417 Portuguese, 52,124 Filipinos, 6,572 Porto Ricans, 1,774 Spanish, 34,750 Americans, British, Germans, and Russians, 6,214 Koreans, 553 others. Total estimated, 1926, 299,000. Large numbers from the various racial groups were born in the islands, and it is estimated that of the total not less than 217,618 are American citizens.

Religion and Instruction.—The Hawaiians are Christians. There is an American Protestant Episcopal bishop at Honolulu; also a Roman Catholic bishop, and ministers of various denominations.

Elementary education has always been free. The language in the schools is English. In 1927, there were 187 public schools with 2,145 teachers and 62,208 enrolled pupils; also 63 private schools with 384 teachers and 10,316 enrolled pupils. The pupils in public schools in 1927 were classed by ancestry as follows: Hawaiian and part-Hawaiian, 9,849; Portuguese, 5,868; Asiatic, 39,516; Anglo-Saxon, 2,345; Porto Rican, 1,031; Spanish, 273; Filipinos, 2,570; others, 756. In Hawaii there are, besides, a normal and training school, a reformatory industrial school for boys and one for girls, a territorial trade school, a school for the deaf and blind, a school for feeble-minded; also a territorial university (University of Hawaii, Honolulu).

Justice.—Hawaii has a supreme court, circuit courts, a court of domestic relations, district courts, and a land registration court. The circuit judges sit also as juvenile courts. The judges of the supreme and circuit courts are appointed by the United States President; the district magistrates by the Chief Justice of Hawaii. There is also a United States District Court, the judges of which, and the U.S. Marshal, are appointed by the President.

Finance, Defence.—Revenue is derived mainly from taxation of real and personal property, income and inheritance taxes, licences, land sales and leases, waterworks and road, school and poll taxes. For the year ending June 30, 1926, the receipts and disbursements were to the following amounts:—

	Dollars
Balance June 30, 1925 . . . . .	1,070,607
Receipts, 1925-26 . . . . .	5,146,576
Total . . . . .	6,217,183
Expenditure, 1925-26. . . . .	4,780,399
Balance, June 30, 1926 . . . . .	1,436,784

On June 30, 1927, the bonded debt amounted to 24,210,000 dollars. In 1927 the assessed value of property was 414,064,603 dollars, an increase of 21,282,460 dollars over the previous year.

On June 30, 1927, the Hawaiian National Guard contained 1,575 men, and 94 officers. The Federal Government, with a view to the protection of the Pacific coast and the control of the Panama Canal, has constructed extensive naval works at Pearl Harbour, about 7 miles from Honolulu, and military works at Honolulu and other places on the island of Oahu. The dry dock at Pearl Harbour (Oahu) naval station was officially opened on August 21, 1919.

Production and Commerce.—In 1920, there were 5,284 farms with an acreage of 2,702,245, of which 435,242 acres were improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1920 was 151,129,085 dollars. Sugar and pine-apples are the staple industries, while coffee, honey, hides, sisal, bananas, rice, wool, tobacco, and cotton are also exported. In 1927, the sugar produced amounted to 795,850 tons and the estimated pineapple pack to over 8,500,000 cases. The forest reserves in the Territory now number 57, aggregating 916,977 acres, and other reserves are contemplated.

For the year ending December 31, 1926, the imports amounted to 86,517,189 dollars, and the exports to 100,145,020 dollars. The shipments of merchandise from the United States to Hawaii for the year ending Dec. 31, 1926, amounted to 72,262,624 dollars, and those from Hawaii to the United States to 98,260,941 dollars, of which 59,043,367 dollars were for sugar, 34,232,506 dollars for fruits (mostly pineapples), 471,560 dollars for coffee. The imports from the United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures) in 1927 totalled £24,554, and the exports to the United Kingdom, £31,734.

Shipping and Communications.—Several lines of steamers connect the islands with the mainland of the United States, Canada, Australia, the Philippines, China, and Japan. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, 1,099 vessels of 8,228,331 tons entered ports of the islands. An inter-island steam navigation company with 16 steamers provides communication between the different islands. There are about 1,038 miles of railway in the islands, including 667 miles of plantation railways. There are telephones on the islands of Oahu, Maui, Hawaii, Kauai, and Molokai. Honolulu is lighted by electricity and has lines of electric tramways. Wireless telegraphy is in operation between the islands for commercial purposes and for communication with vessels at sea and with the Pacific coast, and also with Japan. Hawaii is connected by cable with both shores of the Pacific.

About 17,000 tourists visited the islands in 1926

Thirty-one banks were in operation on June 30, 1927. One is solely a savings bank, one solely commercial, and the remainder both commercial and savings banks. Total deposits in all banks, 1926, 75,024,292 dollars. On June 30, 1927, there were 111,861 savings bank accounts with total deposits of 27,102,220 dollars, representing 225·18 dollars to each depositor.

The Chinese, who constitute 7·65 per cent. of the population, own 18 per cent. of the total savings deposits.

PORTO RICO.

Government.—Porto Rico, by the treaty of December 10, 1898 (ratified April 11, 1899), was ceded by Spain to the United States. Its constitution is determined by the 'Organic Act' of Congress (1917), known as the 'Jones Act,' the main features of which are the granting of American Citizenship to the people of Porto Rico, the separation of the legislative and executive functions, extension of the appointive judiciary system and an elective senate. Porto Rico has representative government, the franchise being restricted to citizens of the United States twenty-one years of age or over, residence (one year) and such additional qualifications as may be prescribed by the Legislature of Porto Rico, but no property qualification may be imposed. The executive power resides in a Governor appointed by the President of the United States. The legislative functions are vested in a legislature which consists of two elective houses: the Senate, composed of 19 members (2 from each of the 7 senatorial districts and 5 senators at large), and the House of Representatives, composed of 39 members (1 from each of the 35 representative districts and 4 elected at large). Porto Rico is represented in Congress by a Resident Commissioner to the United States elected by the people for a term of four years.

There are six heads of departments, who form a Council to the Governor, known as the Executive Council. The essential features of the United States civil service have been incorporated into a local law by the Legislature. The judiciary comprises an Attorney General and staff and a United States court appointed by the President; a Supreme Court of 5 members also appointed by the President; 7 District Courts with 10 Judges appointed by the Governor; and 36 municipal courts, the judges and officials of which, as well as the 55 justices of the peace, are appointed by the Governor.

Governor.—Horace M. Towner (10,000 dollars).

Executive Secretary.—E. J. Saldaña.

Area, Population and Instruction.—The Island has an area of 3,435 square miles. The population in 1920 was 1,299,809 or 378·4 per sq. mile. During the decade elapsed since the census of 1910, the total population increased by 16·3 per cent. The distribution of the population according to colour, in 1920, was as follows:—White, 948,709; black, 49,246; mulatto, 301,816; Chinese, 32; Japanese, 4; all other (Philippino and Hindu), 2. The corresponding figures for 1910 were: White, 732,555; black, 50,245; mulatto, 335,192; Chinese, 12; Japanese, 8. During the decade the white population increased by 29·5 per cent., while the black population decreased by 2 per cent., and the mulatto by 10 per cent.

Chief towns, San Juan, 71,443 inhabitants (1920); Ponce, 41,912; Mayaguez, 19,124. Of the working population, 63 per cent. are engaged in agriculture, fisheries, and mining; 21 per cent. in domestic and personal service; 8 per cent. in manufacturing industries; 8 per cent. in trade and transportation. In 1927, the percentage of illiteracy was 40.

In 1899, the school system was reorganised and education was made compulsory. In 1927, there were 4,454 class-rooms in 2,184 school-buildings, with 218,641 pupils enrolled; and a well-distributed system of night schools and kindergartens. There are also a number of private schools. The University of Porto Rico, established in Rio Piedras, 7 miles from San Juan, is open to both men and women.

Finance.—Receipts and disbursements for the year ending June 30, 1927:—

	Dollars.
Balance, July 1, 1926 . . . . .	414,751
Receipts, 1926-27 . . . . .	14,010,939
Total . . . . .	14,425,690
Disbursements, 1926-27 . . . . .	14,297,433
Balance, July 1, 1927 . . . . .	128,257

The assessed value of property on June 30, 1927, was 338,089,889 dollars. The total outstanding bonded indebtedness is 22,965,000 dollars.

The police force consists of about 700 men, and the National Guard (on June 30, 1927) of 87 officers and 1,416 enlisted men.

Production, Industry and Commerce.—The cultivated land in 1920 was divided into 41,078 holdings, having a total area of 2,022,404 acres, of which 1,803,547 acres was improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1920 was 179,892,511 dollars. The chief products of the island are sugar, tobacco, coffee, pineapples, grape fruit, oranges, and other tropical fruits, sea island cotton, textile fibres, bat guano, phosphate, and vegetables, and the principal industries are manufactures of cigars, cigarettes, hats, embroideries, drawn-work, &c. Sugar crops for three years: 1925, 660,411 tons; 1926, 603,187 tons; 1927, 629,129 tons. Sugar exported in 1927 amounted to 574,869 tons, valued at 54,756,984 dollars. In 1927, 160,804,000 cigars were exported and 30,781,946 pounds of leaf and scrap tobacco, valued at 20,587,484 dollars. Exports of coffee, 19,353,581 pounds, were valued at 5,747,932 dollars, in 1927. Orange exports in 1927 amounted to 732,689 dollars; fresh pineapples to 1,791,109; canned pineapples and others to 1,188,321 dollars; grape fruit, a comparatively new product, amounted to 2,095,908 dollars; while coconuts amounted to 628,196 dollars. There is no established mining enterprise, but gold, silver, iron, copper, bismuth, tin, mercury, platinum and nickel are found in the island. There are very productive salt works.

In 1926-27, the imports into Porto Rico amounted to 98,810,750 dollars (United States merchandise amounting to 87,046,319 dollars, foreign merchandise to 11,764,431 dollars). The exports in the same year were valued at 108,067,434 dollars (100,574,001 dollars to the United States, and 7,493,433 dollars to foreign countries). Imports from the United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures) for calendar year 1927, £116,185; exports to United Kingdom, £36,412.

Shipping and Communications.—In 1926-27, 2,922 American and foreign vessels entered Porto Rico from the United States and foreign countries.

There are over 1,100 miles of road in the Island, and about 339 miles of railway. The railway system connects towns on the west coast and now almost encircles the Island, and penetrates the interior. A line is operated from Rio Piedras to Caguas inland. Extensions of existing lines are being undertaken, and a new line across the Island, with many branches, is projected. There are 1,848 miles of postal (government) telephone and telegraph wire. There are 91 post offices, and 77 telegraph stations.

The Porto Rican island of Vieques, 13 miles to the east, is about 21 miles long and 6 miles broad, and has about 10,000 inhabitants, who grow sugar and rear cattle. Like Porto Rico, the island of Vieques is fertile and healthy.

The island of Culebra, between Porto Rico and St. Thomas, has a good harbour.

British Consul.—George William MacAuslane.

VIRGIN ISLANDS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Government.—The Virgin Islands of the United States, formerly known as the Danish West Indies, were purchased by the United States from Denmark, for 25,000,000 dollars, in a treaty ratified by Denmark December 22, 1916, ratified by the President of the United States January 16, 1917, ratifications exchanged at Washington, January 17, 1917, and proclaimed January 25, 1917. Under an Act of Congress, approved March 3, 1917, known as the Organic Act, all military, civil, and judicial powers necessary to govern the islands were vested in a Governor, appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice of the Senate; and all laws, in so far as compatible with the changed sovereignty, as set forth in the Danish code of laws dated April 6, 1906, were continued in force and effect until Congress shall provide otherwise. Tax and Customs laws were likewise to remain in effect. Danish citizens residing in the islands at the time the treaty was entered into were permitted to retain their Danish citizenship by making declaration before a court of record to preserve such citizenship, in default of which they were held to have renounced it, and to have accepted citizenship in the United States. The islands comprise two municipalities, viz.: the Municipality of St. Thomas and St. John, and the Municipality of St. Croix. The legislative functions are vested in the Colonial Council of each Municipality, that of St. Croix being composed of 18 members elected by popular elections and of 5 members appointed by the Governor; and that of St. Thomas and St. John consisting of 11 elected members and 4 appointed by the Governor. The members serve for 4 years. The right of franchise is vested in every man of unblemished character who has resided in the islands for 5 years, who has attained the age of 25 years, and has an income of at least 1,500 francs a year. The Government is strictly civil, and not military or naval. On February 25, 1927, full American citizenship was granted to the natives of the Virgin Islands.

There are eight heads of Departments, who, with naval aides, form the Governor's cabinet. There is one Judge of the District Court for the Virgin Islands, and three Police Courts, presided over by Judges of the Police Courts.

Governor.—Capt. Waldo Evans, U.S.N. (Ret.).

Government Secretary.—Capt. E. H. Van Patten (S.C.), U.S.N.

Area, Population and Instruction.—The Virgin Islands group comprises in the main the Islands of St. Thomas (28 square miles), St. Croix (84 square miles), and St. John (20 square miles). The total area is 132 square miles and the population, according to the census of November 1, 1917, 26,051. The populations of each of the islands are 10,191, 14,901, and 959. They lie about 60 miles due east of Porto Rico, between the Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea. The islands contain 3 towns, St. Thomas (formerly Charlotte Amalie), on the island of St. Thomas, with a population of 7,747; and Christiansted and Frederiksted, on the island of St. Croix, with populations of 4,574 and 3,144 respectively. Education is compulsory. In St. Thomas there are 9 public and 5 private and parochial schools, 1,836 pupils and 53 teachers; and in St. John there are 5 public schools with an enrolment of 196 pupils and 8 teachers. In St. Croix there are 10 public schools and 7 private and parochial schools. Total enrolment, 2,074 with 51 teachers.

Finance.—Revenues are derived from customs, export tax on sugar, income tax, real and personal property tax, trade tax, pilotage charges, &c. Estimated revenue for fiscal year ending June 30, 1928: 1,296,600 francs. The annual deficit in the operation of the government is met by appropriations by the Congress of the United States. Danish West Indian currency is legal tender.

Production and Industry.—The farms on the islands extend to 69,892 acres. Of the 430 farms, 102 were worked by white farmers, 58 by mixed farmers and 270 by negroes. There are 86 industrial establishments in the islands. St. Thomas is the leading port in the Virgin Islands with coaling and oil-fuelling stations. The Island of St. John is noted for its bay oil, and St. Thomas for the finished product of bay rum. St. Croix's chief industries are agricultural—mainly cane- and cattle-raising. 2 stock farms have recently been established in St. Thomas. A plant for manufacturing industrial alcohol has recently been erected in the island of Saint Croix.

Exports in fiscal year 1926 were 1,119,706 dollars; imports 2,531,404 dollars. Exports to United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures) for 1927, £1,066; imports from United Kingdom, £9,458.

Communication.—The Bermuda and West Indies Steamship Co., Ltd., maintains a regular monthly passenger and freight service from New York to St. Thomas, St. Croix and lower islands. The Columbian Steamship Co. operates a monthly freight and limited passenger service from New York to St. Thomas, St. Croix and Leeward Islands. The New York and Porto Rico Steamship Co., the Atlantic Fruit Line, and the Red "D" line operate regular service from New York to San Juan, Porto Rico, whence steamer service may be had to ports in the Virgin Islands. There is also a weekly passenger, freight and mail service by the Bull Insular Steamship Co. between San Juan, Porto Rico and St. Thomas and St. Croix, and in addition a weekly mail service by motor-boat from Fajardo, P.R., to St. Thomas. There are powerful radio stations at St. Thomas and St. Croix and a cable office at each place also.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

These islands, ceded by Spain to the United States by the treaty of peace concluded between the United States and Spain on April 11, 1899, form the largest island group of the Malay Archipelago, and extend almost due north and south from Formosa to Borneo and the Moluccas, embracing an extent of 16° of latitude and 9° of longitude.

Governor-General.—Henry L. Stimson, appointed December 14, 1927.

Government.—The government of the Philippine Islands is administered through three separate and co-ordinate departments, namely, the executive, the legislative, and the judicial.

The Governor-General is the chief executive of the Islands, and represents the sovereign power of the United States. He is appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Under him are the secretaries of six executive departments, who must all be Filipinos.

The Philippine legislative body is made up of two houses, the Senate and the House of Representatives. There are in all ninety-three representatives and twenty-four senators, representing the forty-eight provinces of the archipelago, all of whom are elected by popular vote, with the exception of nine representatives and two senators, who are appointed by the Governor-General to represent Agusan, Bukidnon, Cotabato, Davao, Lanao, Zamboanga, Sulu, Nueva Viscaya, and the Mountain Provinces.

A Council of State, created by Executive Order subsequent to the enactment of the present Organic Act, commonly known as the Jones Law, forms the connecting link between the executive and the legislative branches of the insular government, and represents the people's counsel in the administration of the government. The Council of State is composed of the Governor-General, as President, the Presidents of both houses of the Legislature, and the Secretaries of the Departments.

The provincial and municipal governments are supervised by the Department of the Interior through the Executive Bureau and the Bureau of Non-Christian Tribes, the former exercising authority over the thirty-seven regularly organised and two of the so-called special provinces, and the latter over nine special provinces. The chief executive of each province is a provincial governor. He and two other members form the provincial board, which constitutes the legislative branch of the provincial government. All these three offices are filled by popular vote, while in the special provinces, with the exception of Palawan, Batanes, Agusan, Davao, Nueva Viscaya and Zamboanga, the provincial governors and third members of the provincial boards are appointed officials. The municipal president is the chief executive of each town or municipality, and the local legislative branch consists of a municipal council of from eight to eighteen councillors, depending upon the number of inhabitants of the municipality. The president, the vice-president and the councillors are all elected by popular vote except in some municipalities of the special provinces where the presidents are appointed.

Area and Population.—The group is composed of 7,083 islands and islets, of which only 466 have areas of one square mile or over. The eleven most important islands are Luzon, with an area of 40,814 square miles; Mindanao, 36,906 square miles; Samar, 5,124 square miles; Negros, 4,903 square miles; Palawan, 4,500 square miles; Panay, 4,448 square miles; Mindoro, 3,794 square miles; Leyte, 2,799 square miles; Cebu, 1,695 square miles; Bohol, 1,584 square miles; and Masbate, 1,255 square miles.

The total population, according to the Philippine Census of 1918, is 10,314,310, chiefly of Malay race, 91 per cent. of whom are Christians, and only 932,953, or 9 per cent., are Moros and Pagans, though these are fast taking advantage of the all-pervading system of public schools. The population of Manila, the capital and the leading commercial and industrial centre, is 235,306, of whom 259,437 are Filipinos, 17,760 Chinese, 1,612 Japanese, 2,916 Americans, 2,050 Spaniards, 664 English, 201 Germans, 121 French, 71 Swiss, and the rest of other nationalities.
